LANGDON INSISTS MAN VISITED GIRL AT HOME

Coroner Inspects Scene of Crime Pending Renewal of Inquest Today.

A discrepancy in the story of Marion S. Ashford as told before the coroner's jury investigating the mysterious murder of Beulah Limerick prompted Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt to announce that the witness will be recalled when the inquest is resumed today.

Conflict between Ashford's assertion that he had been at the Limerick home only on the day of the murder and the statement of Patrolman Robert F. Langdon, who is held in connection with the murder, caused Coroner Nevitt's decision. Langdon says he saw Ashford in the Limerick house at Nineteenth street near East Capitol street southeast several weeks before the murder.

Ashford's extreme nervousness on the witness stand on Saturday elicited the question from Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins: "You are rather nervous aren't you?"

Challenged by Langdon.

When Ashford testified on Saturday that he had been in the Limerick house but once, Patrolman Langdon stretched across the counsel table and said to his attorney, Harry T. Whelan: "That's the fellow I saw in the basement room with the girl a couple of weeks before she was killed."

Ashford perspired freely when on the stand and continually mopped his forehead. In response to Mr. Collins' question regarding his nervousness Ashford said:

"I am ill and should not be here."

Ashford lives on Allison street near Third street northwest.

When Langdon originally told his story of seeing a man seated in the murder room with the girl some weeks before the crime he said the girl introduced the man as Edwards. Police have succeeded in locating a man named Edwards who is said to be a friend of Ashford.

This Edwards also has been summoned to the inquest in the board room of the District Building. He is Hugh Edwards, of Goldvein, Va., an insurance agent. Edwards is said to have been a roomer with the Limerick family a year ago.

Coroner Visits Scene.

When Langdon related what he knew regarding this man, according to Mr. Whelan, he said the girl had told him that Edwards was an insurance man and lived down in the country."

Capt. Edward J. Kelly, assistant chief of detectives, took Coroner Nevitt to the scene of the crime yesterday and explained to him in detail the circumstances surrounding the shooting as reconstructed by the evidence. The coroner's visit was prompted by his desire to be familiar with the scene.

James O'Shea, counsel for Vernon Limerick, Richard Reed and William E. Baddy, who are being held with Langdon in connection with the murder, said last night that under no circumstances would he permit Mr. Collins to cross-examine his clients if they take the stand.

Mr. O'Shea said that possibly one or two of his clients will take the stand. This, however, will be dependent upon what evidence is uncovered against them.

Lieut. John Fowler, ballistics expert for the Police Department, said last

Baby Suffocates In Front of Home

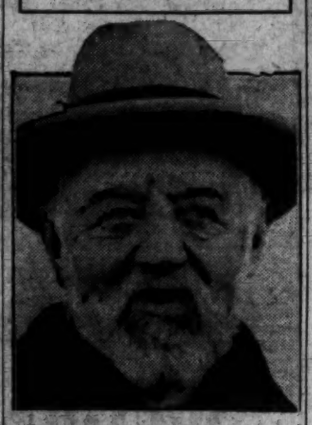
4-Month-Old Boy Is Killed by Blankets as He Lies in Carriage.

A 4-month-old baby boy, James Alton English, son of Mr. and Mrs. Beryl R. English, of Burnt Mills, Md., suffocated to death in the blankets of his carriage in front of the home yesterday afternoon.

The child had been left in the open for an airing. Mrs. Charles Latimer, of Rockville, Md., who was visiting at the English house, went out to bring him in. She discovered he was lying unconscious on his stomach, his head wrapped in the blankets. She placed him in her car and drove to the office of Dr. W. R. Haynes in Silver Spring, Md., but the baby was dead upon their arrival.

Mr. English is an income tax expert in Washington. The baby is also survived by a sister, Elaine, who is 2 years old. The body was taken to the funeral parlors of Warner E. Pumphrey at Rockville. No funeral arrangements were made last night, but it is believed that the child will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery, as the father was an army officer during the World War.

SUCCUMBS



NATHAN STRAUS.

NATHAN STRAUS, 82, IS DEAD IN NEW YORK

RELIEF WORK RECALLED

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Nathan Straus, philanthropist and leader of American Jewry, died peacefully in his sleep at 4:30 a. m. today, at his apartment in the San Remo Hotel. Had he lived until January 31 he would have been 83 years old.

Death ended a coma into which he had sunk 24 hours before. He had been ill for two weeks, but few knew of it, and his death came as a shock to the city to which many of his philanthropies had been extended.

With him when he died were his son, Nathan, jr., his only daughter, Mrs. Irving Lehman, whose husband is a judge of the court of appeals, and Dr. Leopold Stieglitz, a close friend. The cause of death was given on the death certificate, signed by Dr. Stieglitz, as heart failure and high blood pressure.

Word of the death was cabled to another son, Hugh Grant Straus, in Paris.

In speaking of "the biggest things" Nathan Straus accomplished, his son today quoted from a book written by the philanthropist's wife, whose death occurred last spring.

These "biggest things" were his work for the relief of distress in the winters of 1892-93 and 1893-94; securing a supply of pure milk for infants and children, and the coming of the word "preventorium" to replace "sanitarium," with which the treatment of tuberculosis had been generally associated.

Mr. and Mrs. Straus in 1925 celebrated the golden anniversary of their marriage. During her lifetime she took an active interest in his philanthropies, and her death last May marked the beginning of the physical decline which resulted in his death today.

Funeral services Tuesday, in accordance with his wishes, will reflect Mr. Straus' simple code of living. The simplest possible services will be conducted at Temple Emanu-El. There will be no flowers. A plain, pine casket will be used. The usual practice of admission to the services by tickets will be abandoned. At the philanthropist's specific request Temple Emanu-El will be open to the general public.

The services will begin at 10 a. m., and no eulogy will be spoken, a brief sketch of Mr. Straus' life—a life that began in Rhenish Bavaria, in 1848—will be read by Prof. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale University. Psalms will be read. Burial will be in the family vault in Cypress Hills Cemetery.

Since his return from Europe last year, when he was brought ashore in a wheel chair, Mr. Straus has

AUTO CRASHES KILL THREE IN CAPITAL AREA

Child Hit by Car Dies of Fractured Skull in Doctor's Office.

MANY ARE INJURED; TAXICAB OVERTURNS

Son of Woman Freed in Slaying Case One Victim; Two Drivers Sought.

Death took a toll of three persons in automobile accidents, which also injured several persons in the Capital and its environs yesterday.

Struck by an automobile yesterday afternoon as she was crossing the street in front of her home, 1910 Irving street northeast, Bettie Jane Bennett, 5-year-old child, died shortly afterward in the office of Dr. Rush Conklin, nearby.

She was hit by a car driven by Thomas Howard Bell, 19 years old, of Franklin street northeast, near Twenty-eighth, police say. After the accident she was rushed to the physician's office, where she died from a fractured skull. Bell went to the Twelfth Precinct police station and was released in custody of his attorney to appear before the coroner's inquest, to be held this morning.

In Path of Car.

According to police, the child ran across in front of Bell's car, just as he was passing an automobile driven by Richard R. Phelps, Evarts street northeast, near Twenty-second street.

The parents of the child are Russell C. and Ella M. Bennett.

Raymond Gamble, 23 years old, eldest son of Mrs. Lulu Mae Gamble, who shot and killed Mrs. Elsie Davis last summer, and was freed when she pleaded the unwritten law at her trial in November, died in Casualty Hospital last night from a fractured skull received when a car in which he was riding left the road near Bedds Corners, Md., and crashed into an electric light pole late yesterday afternoon.

Police Seek Driver.

The car was driven by Wallace Bolding, of Faulker, Md., Maryland police say. They are searching for him. Frank Osakowiecz, 26 years old, of Allenstresh, Md., was held at the Ninth Precinct Police Station, but released by Maryland authorities, who say Bolding was the driver. A fourth man, believed to be a Negro, received leg injuries, but police have been unable to locate him.

A Negro was killed at New York and Florida avenues yesterday when the taxi cab in which he was a passenger failed to make the turn into Florida avenue and turned over after crashing into a tree and a lamp post. The man was taken tot Sibley Hospital by Policeman S. H. Miles, of the Sixth Precinct, who was passing. He was later removed to Freedmen's Hospital, where he died of a fractured skull. He wos Rudolph Butler, 25, address unknown.

Another passenger i nthe cab, William C. Shields, 24 years old, colored, of Four-and-a-half street near H street southwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations and later held for investigation at the Second Precinct station.

The driver of the cab was Walter Clinton Geary, colored, 23, of Ninth street near W street northwest, police say. After the crash he ran, police say. They are searching for him.

Four persons were injured near Woodridge, Va., early last night in a triple collision. Mrs. E. H. Embrey, of Stafford, Va., received internal injuries, when a car driven by her husband struck a truck driven by Pleasant Gunn, Negro, of Danville,

Indian Men Beat Witch Supplying Love Potions

San Antonio Atlahuaca, Mexico, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Men of this little Indian town have finally rebelled against a diet of "love charms" fed them by their wives to renew waning affections.

It seems for years the women have been obtaining the potions from an aged Indian woman known to them as a witch. The potions, it is charged, more often caused idiocy than a renewal of affection and this fact, in addition to the money spent on the "charms," aroused the ire of the men.

So today armed with clubs they descended on the "witch," and began beating her. She was rescued by police and promised to depart for some far distant place.

INGRAM QUITS NAVY AS FOOTBALL COACH

RETURN WAS INDICATED

Jeffersonville, Ind., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—William A. (Navy Bill) Ingram, in a statement issued at his home here tonight, confirmed the announcement made at Ananpolis of his resignation as football coach at the United States Naval Academy. He said he intended to continue coaching, but that the school which employed him would make the announcement in "the near future."

Ingram's statement follows:

"It is with a great deal of regret that I confirm the announcement from Annapolis that I have severed my connection as foot ball coach at the Naval Academy. My reasons for arriving at this decision are known to the athletic department at the Naval Academy and any future statement in that regard must emanate from that source. The authorities at the Naval Academy have been fully cognizant of all negotiations I have had with any other institution. It is my intention to continue coaching, announcement of which will be forthcoming from the proper authorities in the near future."

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A telegram from William A (Navy Bill) Ingram, football coach at the Naval Academy for the last five years, said he would not return next year.

The telegram was received by Capt. Henry C. Cooke, director of athletics, who made only the bare announcement. He said further comment would have to come from Ingram, now at his home at Jeffersonville, Ind.

The announcement was a surprise at the academy, as less than three

Member of House Taken to Hospital

Representative Johnson, of South Dakota, Is Not Seriously Ill.

Representative Royal C. Johnson, Republican, of South Dakota, is at Mount Alto Hospital where he was taken Thursday for treatment, it was learned yesterday.

The cause of his illness has not been diagnosed, officials of the hospital said last night, but his condition is not believed to be serious. Representative Johnson is not confined to his bed, but is resting at his quarters at the hospital most of the time, according to hospital tatches.

Officials at th ehospital are inclined to believe that the South Dakota representative is suffering from a nervous trouble brought about by his activity during the present strenuous session of Congress.

DROUGHT HELP CALL ALLOWED BY PRESIDENT

Public to Be Asked This Week to Contribute $10,000,000.

EMERGENCY MONEYS OF RED CROSS SHRINK

Not Only Farmers but Small Industrial Centers Also Are in Distress.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover, as head of the American Red Cross, yesterday authorized that organization to appeal for public assistance in the drought relief work undertaken in rural sections.

The Chief Executive approved this action in a letter to Chairman Payne after a conference between the two Saturday. Payne said he thought at least $10,000,000 should be requested from the public.

The President, after further conference with Red Cross officials, will issue a formal proclamation calling for $10,000,000. The appeal probably will be made some time this week.

The drought relief problem as now developed, the President said in his letter, "requires more than the available funds and is not wholly one of food, clothing and other personal care among farmers," but also includes the inability of smaller rural and industrial centers to organize to meet their local situations.

Payne Now Sees Need.

Chairman Payne has explained the Red Cross fund of $5,000,000 set aside for relief purposes early in the fall is rapidly dwindling and additional funds would be necessary in the very near future.

President Hoover's letter follows:

In accordance with our conferences during the past week I am glad, as president of the American Red Cross, to approve an appeal for public assistance to the association in the relief work it has undertaken in the rural sections.

"Last fall the Red Cross undertook the burden of personal relief throughout the drought States. At that time you set aside $5,000,000 of the association's funds and established a vigorous and active organization throughout the drought area. In our discussions then it was contemplated that at an appropriate time an appeal should be made to the generosity of the American people to assist the Red Cross in its burden.

Delay Thought Right Then.

"It was felt then that it would not be possible to measure the volume of requirements until we had reached the early stages of winter and that, in any event, it was desirable that the Red Cross postpone any appeal until such time as the community chests and committees on unemployment relief in the larger cities should have further advanced the raising of their funds.

"The problem, as now developed, requires more than the available funds and is not wholly one of food, clothing and other personal care among farmers who have suffered from the drought. There is also difficulty in the smaller rural and industrial towns as a double reaction from the drought and depression. I understand that these towns are unable to organize to effectively meet their problems as are the municipalities.

"The arrangement made by Secretary Hyde and yourself by which a representative of local Red Cross chapters will sit upon the local committees created by the Department of Agriculture for administration of the

FRACTURE OF SKULL REVEALED BY DEATH

Unidentified Man, Found in Street, Succumbs After Week in Hospital.

ARM IS TATOOED "S. M."

Another mystery confronted police last night in the death of an unidentified man who was found lying on a street in the Southwest section a week ago in an unconscious condition.

The man was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where he never regained consciousness. He was treated at the hospital for a laceration of the scalp and bruises. An autopsy performed yesterday at the District Morgue by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald revealed that the man had suffered a fracture of the skull.

The man appeared to be about 60 years old, was gray-haired, neatly dressed, about 5 feet 4 inches in height and weighed about 150 pounds. On his left arm the initials "S. M." are tattooed. Between these initials there is a tattooo reproduction of a leg and a star.

3,000 PERSONS VIEW BODY OF SLAIN MAN

DUMPED BESIDE STREAM

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11.—Mystery still surrounds the death of the middle-aged man whose body was found yesterday beside a stream where it had evidently been tossed Friday night from a 40-foot bridge near Mechum's River, 12 miles west of Charlottesville.

More than 3,000 persons, many from distant points, viewed the body today in an undertaking establishment, but none could identify the man.

It is assumed the Chicago method was reversed, that the victim was gagged, hacked into insensibility and then taken for a "ride."

Finding of four stained blankets and an automobile robe 4 miles east of where the body lay face downward and arms folded, suggests the occupants of the death car were headed

COMMISSION TO TAKE UP DUTIES THIS WEEK

Wheeler Organizing Drive to Block Salary Payment; Situation Unique.

(Associated Press.)

With the full backing of President Hoover, the new Power Commission will go ahead with its duties this week, although the names of three of the five members will appear on the Senate's calendar as unconfirmed.

This anomalous and unprecedented situation, resulting from the sharp exchange between the President and the Senate coalition of Democrats and Republican Independents, presents new problems for legislative and legal authorities.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, who led the contest for reconsideration of the nominations of Chairman Smith and Commissioners Draper and Garsaud because of their dismissal of two employes of the old commission, said yesterday he saw nothing that could be done to halt the commission from functioning after the refusal of the President to return the nominations to the Senate as requested.

G. O. P. Leaders Back Hoover.

While Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, was organizing a drive to withhold appropriations for salaries from the three commissioners, Republican leaders rallied to the position taken by President Hoover that the men were legally confirmed and any action now by the Senate against them would be an encroachment upon the independence of the executive assured by the Constitution.

The Senate voted, 44 to 37, for reconsideratoin of the nominees it had confirmed just before the Christmas recess, but there was no prospect that such a vote was likely on a move to withhold funds from the commission. Senator Walsh said he was uncertain of his position on such a move, adding he believed there was no way by which the legality of the commissioners' position could be questioned in the courts.

Meanwhile, interest centered on the next move of the commission and whether it would reemploy Charles A. Russell, the solicitor, and William V. King, the chief accountant, whose termination of services, along with other employes of the old commission, started the Senate drive against Smith, Garsaud and Draper.

At Odds With Secretary.

After the Senate had confirmed them and they had taken the oath of office, the three commissioners sent out notices to the employes of the old commission saying their services were terminated by the law creating the new commission. The commission later announced it would consider applications of all old employes for reemployment.

Russell and King were at odds over a long period with Frank E. Bonner, executive secretary of the old commission. The controversy was aired in Congress several times, with some senators charging that Bonner was protecting the "power trust." Russell and King were lauded by some for opposing Bonner.

President Hoover said yesterday the controversy presented "no issue for or against power companies." He recalled it was upon his recommendation that the new commission was organized and that he had recommended giving it authority to regulate all interstate power rates.

Watson Predicts Indorsement.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, expressed the belief today that Mr. Hoover's statement "will be indorsed by the people."

The appropriation bill for the independent offices will not come before the Senate for some time. This measure carries funds for the commission.

Cameras and Police Busy As Chinese Couple Marries

Henry Chin Bow and Ching Yee Gui Wed in Christian Ceremony by Judge Mattingly; Three Times Repeated for Benefit of Photographers.

Before a group of photographers and Movietone men and a gathering of Occidentals, Henry Chin Bow and Ching Yee Gui, Chinese, were married yesterday under Christian rites, while police kept a palpitating mob confined.

More than 1,000 people stood outside the Odd Fellows Hall on Twentieth street near G, while the ceremony was being performed. Police were kept busy for more than two hours clearing traffic in front of the building.

The ceremony was performed four distinct times and the bride in each instance answered through an interpreter—not being able to speak or understand English. The reason the ceremony was performed so many times was to enable Movietone photographers to get a complete record. One photographer made a complete picture sound reproduction as the ceremony was performed. Another, however, ran out of films and caused the additional ceremonies.

The most curious part about the ceremony was the fact that Judge Robert E. Mattingly, of Municipal Court, kept insisting that the couple kiss.

"Kiss the bride," said the judge, on one occasion.

"Osculate," he said on another.

Miss Yee, as she is known among her Chinese friends; or Miss Gui, as she would be known to Americans, is said to have been married to Chin Bow in China several years ago. The new ceremony yesterday came about as the result of the fact that Chin Bow recently has been naturalized, and, as an American, he wanted to be married in approved American style.

Following the ceremony Chin Bow and a number of his friends gath-

Calvin Coolidge Says:

The abolition of city slums through public and private effort would be social service of the first order. Public discussions concerning them seldom appear, because building and tenement laws with the high rates of wages have greatly modified these sections. But they still exist. The present seems a time when State and local governments might join with philanthropic persons in rebuilding these areas.

Environment is a powerful factor in human development. But all that is necessary can not be contributed by housing. Many country houses would make slums if concentrated in a large city. But with no crowding and abundant light, air and water the character of houses in the country is not so important.

It will take more than a combination of such improvements to abolish the slums. The problem is also personal. Changing the outer garment will not be enough. Elaborate mansions often shelter bad people, while good people live in poverty. We must reach deeper and change the soul.

The mental and moral atmosphere must be renovated. Fine houses will be in vain unless those who occupy them come under the influence of education and religion.

Leaders in Congress Plan Night Sessions if Needed

(Associated Press.)

Congressional leaders determined yesterday to resort to night sessions this week, if necessary, to reach legislative measures that have piled up as rebellious legislators disputed with President Hoover over the Power Commission and drought relief.

The emergency drought relief appropriation, with its controversial $15,000,000 food loan provision, will receive first attention. House Republican chiefs are prepared to seek a special rule today to send the measure to conference in an attempt to eliminate the Senate's food loan proposal.

The Senate, after a week spent in a futile attempt to remove three members of the Power Commission, will take up today the six nominations of President Hoover to the reorganized Tariff Commission. A fight is certain against two of these—Edgar Brossard, of Utah, and Alfred P. Dennis, of Maryland. Concerned over the failure of any of the necessary appropriation bills to get through the Senate, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, announced yesterday he would seek night sessions later in the week, if progress was not shown.

House leaders also are contemplating night sessions if any trouble develops.

The eleven appropriation measures carrying funds for next year's operation of the Government must be passed before March 4 adjournment, to avoid an extra session.

Watson and Senator McNary, of Oregon, the assistant leader, continued to be confident that the extra session would be avoided, but the Republican independents, who will hold the balance of power in the almost evenly divided House and Senate in the new Congress, are still in a position to force the special meeting, which some members of the group are demanding.

This week is expected to bring a showdown in the House over the compromise for Government operation of the Muscle Shoals, Alabama, power and nitrate plant.

An appeal by the Red Cross for an additional $10,000,000, to meet distress in the drought-stricken States, may ease the situation over the Senate's food loan provision, to which the administration has objected. John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, has given assurance the organization can supply food and clothing to all drought sufferers.

Demands have been made by Senator La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, for additional relief for the unemployed, but Senator Watson said yesterday he had received new assurance from Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of President Hoover's employment committee, that his organization can meet "every situation."

The Senate also has on its calendar of special business for this week the nomination of Eugene Meyer, of New York, to be governor of the Federal Reserve Board. A sharp fight is in prospect, but his friends expect confirmation. Late in the week the Senate will act on the motion of Senator King (Democrat), Utah, to reconsider approval of the measure authorizing $30,000,000 for modernization of three battleships.

The first outbreak of the session in the Senate over prohibition also is in prospect. The Law Enforcement Commission is expected to submit its long-awaited prohibition report to President Hoover during the week and he is prepared to transmit it to Congress.

The bill of Senator Howell (Republican), Nebraska, to establish a new and drastic dry enforcement act for the Capital also will be the order of business for the Senate.

"I am confident you will command the never failing generous instincts of our people toward those who are less fortunate."

At the same time the people's lobby charged in a statement that the Red Cross was misrepresenting the unemployment situation and called on Congress to appropriate funds for feeding unemployed.

The people's legislative service, in another statement, said the Red Cross had a reserve of $38,000,000 which it should use.

the white monoplane would be able to fight against a prevailing gale from the northeast and reach these islands safely.

The local wireless station continually crackled out requests for news of the plane from ships, but no information was received.

The cargo-carrying plane, piloted by Lieut. William S. MacLaren and Mrs. Beryl Hart, was due at about 11:15 a. m. (8:15 a. m., E. S. T.).

The plane left Hamilton, Bermuda, at 11:15 a. m., E. S. T., yesterday and was expected to arrive here about 8:15 a. m., E. S. T., this morning. The distance for the hop is 2,045 miles.

Anxiety for the safety of the two aviators was increased because of poor visibility and a choppy sea, which, it is believed, would prohibit landing anywhere but in a sheltered harbor. A strong easterly wind which prevailed this morning decreased this afternoon. The sky continued overcast with a visibility of about 15 miles.

A lighter with fuel aboard for the plane awaited its arrival in the harbor. A crowd of persons who had gathered to watch the preparations dispersed as hours passed without any word of the fliers.

The plane Tradewind, when it left Bermuda, carried 300 gallons of gasoline, which, it was estimated, would be sufficient to keep it in the air until 6 p. m. E. S. T. Sunday. Backers of the flight said this supply of gas would be enough to carry the plane to the mainland of Portugal, and advanced the possibility the plane might have continued directly to Europe without stopping at the Azores for refueling.

treated the case declared that an X-ray examination of the man's head, made within 12 hours after he was admitted to the hospital, did not reveal a fracture. These physicians and Dr. MacDonald admitted that an X-ray examination does not always reveal a fracture.

Dr. MacDonald said that he first suspected a fracture when he noted a discoloration behind the left ear of the man. Drs. J. J. McCarthy, John A. Shay and J. Garden, of Gallinger Hospital, who treated the man, said they did not see this discoloration.

The man died at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. A diagnosis of his case at the hospital revealed that he was a victim of uremic poisoning and Bright's disease. Police believe that he had either collapsed on the street, as the result of his ailments, or was the victim of foul play. Detective John Collins, of the homicide squad, is conducting an investigation.

The man was found on the sidewalk at Delaware avenue and C street southwest at 11:55 o'clock on the night of January 9, by J. C. Wilson, of 1331 K street northwest. Wilson took him to Gallinger Hospital. Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt, upon receiving a report of the case from Dr. MacDonald and police, said that he would order an inquest for the earliest possible date. This inquest can not be conducted, Dr. Nevitt pointed out, until the Limerick case and two others on the calendar are disposed of.

Dr. Nevitt also said that an examination of the body would be made to determine whether the man was addicted to drugs.

46 NATIONS TO SEEK ECONOMIC REMEDY

(Associated Press.)

A remedy for the world-wide business depression will be sought at the May meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce.

This was announced yesterday by Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the American committee of the organization, who said representatives of 46 nations would attend the meeting.

Strawn said the conference would "endeavor to investigate carefully the distinction between cause and effect in the present situation, with a view to establishing to what extent remedies can be sought and the first steps of recovery hastened by coordinating sectional endeavor."

"From this, as from previous economic depressions," he added, "there will be eventual and, we hope, speedy recovery. When that time will come no one seems able to forecast. Certain it is that recovery can only be brought by cooperative individual effort and not by governmental action.

Russia Named as Factor.

"Perhaps the most ominous clouds that overhang the whole economic world is the dumping on the world markets of large quantities of grain, raw materials and semifinished products by Soviet Russia, at prices less than the normal costs of production.

"That is a factor in the situation, the duration and extent of which can not be measured."

Delegates from Europe, Latin America, the Far East and the United States will present a comprehensive trade picture, and these reports will form the basis for thorough and frank discussion.

The conference also will consider results of an inquiry by a special committee into economic relations between the United States and Europe. Dr. Alberto Pirelli, of Italy, is chairman of three plenary sessions that will be devoted to the report.

Seeking Advantages.

The work of the special committee, Strawn said, is directed toward showing how and why greater economic progress has been made by one or another Continent, and how advantage may be taken of the methods and practices successful in one area by another.

"The American members of the International Chamber, Strawn said, "fully realize the World-Wide extent of the present depression and its effect on our National and financial structure. The decline in buying power has once more focused attention upon the shift which has taken place in the character of our exports over the past decade, and the stabilizing influence of large foreign markets upon our basic industries.

Europe Waits On U. S.

"More than ever is apparent the dependence of Europe and the other countries of the world upon the prosperity of the United States.

"The conviction is held in many quarters abroad that the first step toward business recovery in Europe is the resumption of normal buying in the United States. Until our people, by the renewal of purchases abroad of raw materials and finished products, can reduce surplus stocks and bring about a stable price level in the more important countries, European business leaders see no probability of substantial improvement in the world economic situation."

found it necessary to use that conveyance to move about.

Born in Bavaria.

Nathan Straus was born at Otterburg, Rhenish Bavaria, Germany, January 31, 1848. A few years later his father, Lazarus Straus, became involved in an unsuccessful revolutionary movement there and the family was forced to emigrate hastily to America. They settled in Talbotton, Ga., in 1854, where Lazarus Straus opened a little store.

Nathan, who entered school at Collingsworth Institute, was eventually given a corner in the store. Knowing that face powder was a luxury difficult for the Southern woman to obtain, he began his business ventures by grinding a 25 cent lump of talcum powder into four balls which he sold for 10 cents apiece—a gross profit of 15 cents.

When the Civil War came, sweeping away the little store and leaving behind a collection of debts, Lazarus Straus moved to New York where Nathan joined in the efforts to establish another business and repay the family debts.

Became Store Owner.

After graduating as class orator from Packer's Business College in 1866 he became a traveling salesman for the crockery business which his father and brother Isidore had established in the basement of Capt. R. H. Macy's store then at Thirteenth street and Sixth avenue. The debts were gradually paid, the crockery business grew, with branch factories established in Europe.

Nathan and Isidore became members of the firm of R. H. Macy & Co., eventually obtaining sole ownership. Several years later Nathan Straus and his brother bought an interest in the department store of Wechsler & Abraham, of Brooklyn, and the firm name was changed to Abraham & Straus.

Mr. Straus' health was noticeably affected by the Titanic disaster in 1912 when the lives of his brother Isidore and his wife were lost. He retired from business soon afterward and devoted himself to philanthropic work.

In 1875 Mr. Straus married Lina Gutherz at Mannheim, Germany. Four children were born to them.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover last night issued the following statement:

"The death of Mr. Nathan Straus removes from our national life a venerable figure which will be sadly missed, a Jewish leader whose vision of service transcended all limits of race or creed and philanthropist whose benefactions, especially in behalf of children, were of permanent value."

Vestal Copyright Bill To Be Voted On Today

(Associated Press.)

Enactment of the Vestal bill to revise the copyright laws of the United States and permit American entrance into the International Copyright Union was urged yesterday by the Authors League of America.

The 8-year-old legislative proposal is scheduled to come to a vote in the House today. One section would permit composers to charge broadcasting companies for use of material over the radio. United States membership in the International Copyright Union would permit automatic copyrighting in about 40 member nations.

Temblors Make Convicts Fear Isles May Sink in Sea

Six Mexicans on Tres Marias Hurt by Leaps During Earthquakes as Century-Dormant Volcano Rumbles, and Whole Town May Flee.

Mexico City, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Three days of intermittent earth shocks have caused great fear among inmates of the penal colony on the Tres Marias Islands, off the western coast of Mexico, that the islands may disappear into the sea.

Six prisoners were injured several nights ago in jumps from dormitory windows when the shaking became severe, Gov. Mugica has reported. He said flames and smoke issued from small craters off the shore of the three islands and 27 shocks were felt in three hours.

The century dormant volcano of Cerobruco, south of Tepic, in the State of Nayarit, is reported to be rumbling, smoking and threatening to erupt. It was in the crater of this volcano that bandits held J. B. Bristow., San Angelo, Tex., oil and mine man, prisoner for 32 days last spring. It was in the crater itself that negotiations were completed that eventually led to his release.

A geological commission has set out to study the situation and if it is deemed dangerous steps will be taken to evacuate the people living in the danger zone. The small town of Jala lies almost beneath the summit of the crater, which rears its head about 7,000 feet above sea level.

The nearby Tres Marias Islands were discovered in 1532 and for many years were hideaways for pirates. Some years ago the Mexican federal government acquired them and established a penal colony where the prisoners engage in agriculture and work in the salt pits. The largest of the island group is Mother Mary, where the main penal colony is located. It comprises about 38,000 acres and a ridge of mountains 1,400 feet high extends through its length. The other islands are Mary Magdalena, containing about 20,000 acres, and Mary Cleofas, of about 5,000 acres. A woman's penal colony recently was established on Mary Magdalena Island. The islands are about 75 miles from the mainland of the State of Nayarit.

The federal weather station here said that while the earth shocks might continue, they would gradually diminish in intensity.

DAVIS UNDISTURBED BY OUSTER THREAT

(Associated Press.)

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, said in a statement yesterday his "life, both private and public, was an open book, containing no blots of dishonor or chicanery" and that he was not afraid of any attempt to remove him from the Senate.

Davis expressed astonishment at the announcement of Chairman Nye, of the Senate campaign funds committee, that he would offer a resolution declaring the Pennsylvanian's seat vacant, because of excessive campaign expenditures.

"What purpose is impelling Senator Nye in his insistent demand that my seat in the Senate be declared vacant?" Davis asked in a formal statement. "Surely no evidence has been uncovered at the hearings held by his committee, in its probe of the primary and election contests in Pennsylvania, to even hint of scandal or the exhorbitant expenditure of funds in my behalf."

Credits Personal Popularity.

On the contrary, he added, the hearings "proved facts commonly acknowledged in and out of Pennsylvania, namely that the personal popularity of 'Jim' Davis, built largely on his integrity and humanitarian achievements, assured his nomination and consequent election to the United States Senate, without the need of a large campaign fund."

To Nye's charge that approximately $1,200,000 was spent for the Davis ticket, the former Labor Secretary said the hearings also revealed that many of the contributions to the Republican campaign chest were "specifically earmarked: 'not to be used for Davis,' or 'this donation is for Mr. Brown.'"

Francis Shunk Brown was the unsuccessful candidate for the gubernatorial nomination.

Used Mainly for Brown.

Checks given by Secretary Mellon, R. B. Mellon and W. L. Mellon, Davis said, carried the "terse but emphatic order that they were for Mr. Brown exclusively."

The Pennsylvania senator, who took the oath early in December after Senator Nye had lost by a big margin a proposal to bar him pending further inquiry, called attention to a letter to the Nye committee by Charles B. Hall, Philadelphia councilman, which said less than 5 per cent of the campaign funds raised were used in Davis' behalf.

"In view of these facts," he concluded, "I must admit that I am perplexed by Senator Nye's insistent demand to unseat me in the Senate."

TWO ADMIT SLAYING THEIR GANG LEADER

Police Claim Confession Is Secured; Man Called Youths "Yellow."

SEVEN HELD AFTER RAIDS

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Police announced today that Fred Schoenhardt, 21, and Harry McCormick, 18, have confessed slaying Stephen Sweeney, their former gang leader, whose body was found December 21 along the Long Island motor parkway, near Hicksville. The youths were arrested with four others and a girl in Brooklyn and Manhattan raids early today.

Police said Schoenhardt and McCormick admitted shooting Sweeney when the leader taunted Schoenhardt with being "yellow" while they were driving to Montauk to "hijack" a liquor truck.

Others rounded up were John Murray, 22; his brother Josh, 19, and John's wife, Julia, 20. With Schoenhardt they were arrested by detectives waiting for them in a dingy rooming house near the Brooklyn water front. An hour later detectives arrested McCormick, David McFarland, 21, and Timothy Finn, 18, in an apartment in East Fifty-third street.

The Murrays are brothers of Margaret Murray, sweetheart of the slain leader, who has been held as a material witness in the Mineola Jail since shortly after the slaying. Police said that she had named all those arrested today as members of Sweeney's "mob."

Society Celebrates Doubling of Roll

Communion Breakfast Is Held in Church Rectory at Bethesda.

Doubled membership in the Holy Name Society of Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Bethesda was the occasion for a Communion breakfast in the rectory of the church yesterday. Sixty-five new members, enrolled for the annual feast of the Holy Name, attended Communion mass before the breakfast. The meal was prepared by the women of Our Lady of Lourdes Chapter of the Catholic Daughters of America.

Speakers at the breakfast were the Rev. J. J. Fitzsimmons, the Rev. James J. O'Connor, pastor and spiritual director; William J. Neale, president of the Holy Name Society of St. Anne's Parish, and J. Eugene Gallery, master of the fourth degree, Knights of Columbus, for the puriadiction of Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Officers of the local Holy Name Society were elected as follows: President, John A. Overholt; vice president, J. Clarence Welch; secretary, Francis A. Tully; treasurer, Earle S. Carlin; delegates to the Archdiocesan Union, J. Harry Welch, Victor S. Mersch, Dr. J. F. O'Donnell and R. M. Kennedy; alternates, Francis Gloyd, J. Eugene Gallery and Col. E. V. D. Murphy.

Lone Flyer in Thick Jungle Would Open Mayan Ruins

Capt. W. F. Long, Who Dropped From Plane, Risks Life in Trying to Prepare Way for Expedition Coming January 20.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 11 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Alone in the jungle wilds of Yucatan, where he landed last Tuesday from an airplane in a parachute leap, Capt. W. F. Long, Dallas aviator and soldier of fortune, is depending for his life on his powers of persuasion.

If Long can persuade the natives to assist him in clearing a landing field near the Mayan ruins, which he intends to explore, the airplane that landed him will alight there January 20 on its return. But if Long is unable to find assistance to clear an open space in the deep jungle, the plane which will hover over the spot will not attempt to alight, but return to Texas, leaving Long to find his way back to the coast as best he can.

On the expedition the plane will carry several American archeologists prepared to search the Mayan ruins for historical data and buried gold. The expedition is under the sponsorship of the Dallas Times-Herald.

It is generally recognized among scientists that the earliest American culture grew up in that neck of land connecting the two American continents that now comprises Honduras, Yucatan, Nicaragua and Guatamala, or broadly, Central America. Three great prehistoric races, whose origin no man knows, occupied this section; the Aztecs in the North, the Mayas, and south of them, the Incas.

For many years archeologists have been exploring their ruined cities and temples, and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, last year, in a flight over the Central American jungle, discovered the ruins of three Maya cities hitherto unseen, probably, by white men.

The explorations of various groups, sent out by the Carnegie Institute, Harvard, the British Museum and other institutions, have discovered amazing things about Maya culture which existed, according to dates found in inscriptions, as early as 69 A. D., one year after the death of Nero.

They have found beyond doubt the Mayans were originators of the setback skyscraper, having built stone and concrete structures of this design over 200 feet high; were better artists than the Egyptians, were workers in metals, knew astronomy and medicine and had a calendar much more perfect than our own.

According to Mr. Herbert J. Spinden, of the Brooklyn Museum, an authority on Mayan civilization, the Mayan calendar could have run for 300,000 years before it accumulated the error of a single day, whereas the Christian calendar accumulated an error of eleven days in 1,200 years and had to be revised.

However, despite their knowledge and the majesty of their buildings, the Mayans apparently had no knowledge of the arch, nor of the wheel. Whatever knowledge they had has been pieced together slowly, for with the exception of three books, no others have been found. The entire bibliograph of the country, it appears, was destroyed by the Spanish priests who came in the fifteenth century and tried to convert the people to Christianity.

UNIT IN CHEST DRIVE HEADED BY PERSHING

Government Departments to Be Organized for First Time in History.

HOOVER APPROVED PLAN

Gen. John J. Pershing, war-time leader of the A. E. F., has consented to act as chairman of the governmental unit in the Community Chest campaign, according to an announcement yesterday by Edward F. Colladay, Community Chest campaign chairman.

Mr. Colladay also announced that John C. Koons, former Assistant Postmaster General, now vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has been appointed executive director of this unit, and Herbert L. Willett, jr., formerly with the Near East Relief and the Gorgas Memorial Foundation, is tobe executive secretary.

Formation of the unit was made possible by an executive letter from President Hoover, asking that the time-honored rule of refusing to permit Government departments to be organized and solicited for any charitable purpose be rescinded in the case of the Community Chest. Every Cabinet officer has complied with the request of the President, as well as the heads of all the independent bureaus.

Income Assured.

"We of the various Government services, drawing our subsistence from Washington and living either in the city or nearby, have as much right to participate in this great movement as any other residents of the Capital," said Gen. Pershing, in accepting the chairmanship.

"I am glad that the President, through his action, has made it possible for Government workers to demonstrate their right to have a part in any activity affecting the welfare of the city. I am sure that every Government worker, knowing that his position is safe guarded and secure, will want to do his part toward relieving the distress brought about by the unemployment crisis, which is now confronting Washington, as well as other parts of the country."

This will mark the first time in history that the Government departments have been thrown open to organization and solicitation for any charitable purpose. The seriousness of the situation was placed before the Chief Executive and he was told that a crisis exists in Washington this year, which led to approval of the plan.

Under direction of Mr. Koons, the various departments and independent bureaus are being organized so that every employe will be given an opportunity to subscribe to the Community Chest.

Division Chiefs.

Among the prominent division chairmen appointed to date are: Wilbur J. Carr, Assistant Secretary of State; C. E. Stewart, Assistant to the Attorney General, for the Department of Justice; Robe Carl White, Assitsant Secretary, Department of Labor; Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury; R. W. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary, Department of Agriculture; Ernest L. Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Harold N. Graves, executive assistant, Postoffice Department; Frederick H. Payne, Assistant Secretary, War Department; Maj. John B. Cutter, Assistant Director, Veterans' Administration; Miss Mary A. Tate, assistant to the public printer, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director, Office of Public Buildings and Grounds; George B. McGinty, secretary, Interstate Commerce Commission; Gen. C. M. Saltzman, chairman, Federal Radio Commission; A. L. Flint, general purchasing agent, the Panama Canal; James H. Van Wagemen, chairman, International Boundary Commission; Capt. D. B. Wainwright, jr., coordinator, Federal Coordinating Service; Capt. N. B. Farrell, NaNvy Yard; Maj. P. W. West, U. S. Soldiers' Home, and United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder, the judiciary. Marshal Snyder will appoint a vice chairman for each of the courts.

With a view of enlisting the Protestant pastors of the city in the 1931 Community Chest campaign, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Washington and chairman of the committee on Protestant cooperation for the Community Chest campaign, has invited the pastors of all Protestant churches to a luncheon meeting to be held today at 12:30 o'clock at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest. The Right Rev. William F. McDowell, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will preside at the luncheon.

THREE DEAD IN AUTO ACCIDENTS NEARBY

Va. An automobile in which three youths from Brooklyn, N. Y., were riding crashed into the other two vehicles. The three boys received severe lacerations. They were Walter Anderson, Richard and George Hill. All the injured were treated by a pasician nearby.

Hurt in an accident yesterday morning, when the car in which he was riding left the road and crashed into a tree near Redd's Corner, Md., Sidney Richards, 19 years old, of Anacostia, was treated for a possible fractured skull at Casualty hospital.

Passing motorists took him from the wreckage. After receiving emergency treatment at Casualty hospital he was removed to Gallinger hospital.

Cab Crashes Railing.

No one was injured in a freak accident in which a taxicab, driverless, crashed into the porch of the home occupied by the Rev. D. A. Berry, 3040 Q street northwest, damaging the railing, early yesterday morning.

The driver, Richard Dalton, 32 years old, of L street near Fourteenth street northwest, told police that a woman passenger jumped from the cab. He stopped and went back to assist her, and his cab coasted back into the porch when the brake failed to hold. Police say the woman was Caroline Fisher, 34, of Fourteenth street near Clifton street northwest.

Two Negroes were held at the Seventh Precinct police station on charges of hitting the parked car of Griffith Evans, who lives on Observatory Circle northwest. They are George Warrick, 34, of Nauck, Va., and Clarence Washington, 30, of Balls court northwest. Police say Warrick was driving when the car was struck, but that he ran, and Washington drove their car from the scene of the crash. Both were charged with leaving the scene of an accident and driving with defective brakes.

Flier Killed in $350 Plane.

Mount Kisco, N. Y., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Flying a second-hand plane recently purchased for $350, Richard Pearson, 19, a student flier, was killed today as his ship nose-dived from 1,000 feet into a field near the Mount Kisco-Bedford highway.

24 STATES OPPOSED TO DRY LAW, CLAIM

Curran, Foe of Prohibition, Says 12 Others Will Be Ready in 2 Years.

HITS CONGRESS' FAILURE

(Associated Press.)

The prediction that 24 States are now ready to vote for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and that the twelve additional ones necessary for repeal would follow within two years, was made yesterday by Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. At the same time he analyzed the delegations of twelve States in the next Congress as containing 19 out of 24 Senators in favor of submitting the repeal question to the people, and 113 out of 160 representatives ready to cast similar votes.

"As to the other States," Curran said, "there are several more senators and at least 42 more representatives now ready to submit this question, but there are not yet two-thirds of each House willing to do so.

Function Is Administrative.

"The function of Congress in this matter is not one of decision, but merely the administrative duty of allowing the people to vote on the question. How much longer is Congress going to deprive the people of the right to vote?"

Curran reviewed the antiprohibition history of the twelve States, which he said had "met the extreme constitutional requirement." They were Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New YoYrk, New Jersey, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Montana and Washington.

As listed by him each of these States will send to the next Congress two senators ready to vote for submission with the exception of Maryland, Ohio, Louisiana, Montana and Washington. He listed one senator in each of these States.

In the list of representatives Curran placed 32 of the 43 in the New York delegation, 21 of 27 in Illinois, 14 out of 16 in Massachusetts, 3 out of 3 in Rhode Island, 10 out of 22 in Ohio, 5 out of 5 in Connecticut, and 3 out of 8 in Maryland.

Names Nineteen Senators.

The 113 representatives were listed as follows: "Treadway, Granfield, Foss, Holmes, Rogers, Andrew, Connery, Underhill, Douglass, Tinkham, McCormack, Wigglesworth, Martin, Gifford, Burdick, Aldrich, Condon, Lonergan, Freeman, Tilson, Tirney, Goss; all of the New York delegation except H. J. Pratt, Parker, Crowther, Snell, Culkin, Davenport, Clark, Taber, Stalker, Sanders and Reed; all of the New Jersey delegation except Goldsborough, Longworth, Hess, Harlan, Kniffen, White, Lamneck, Fiesinger, Mooney, Crosser and Bolton, of Ohio; all of the Illinois delegation except Johnson, Allen, Chiperfield, Hall, Holaday and Adkins; all of the Wisconsin delegaton except Cooper, Nelson and Frear; Fernandes, Maloney, Montet and Derouen, of Louisiana; Evans, of Montana, and Horr, of Washington."

Employment Data Declared Blocked

Wagner Criticizes Hoover for Not Including Fund in Bill.

(Associated Press.)

The administration was charged yesterday by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, with "resistance to the creation of adequate plans for the prevention of unemployment."

In a statement issued through the Democratic national committee, the New Yorker criticized President Hoover for failure to include funds in the first deficiency bill to carry out provisions of the Wagner act for collection of employment statistics. The measure was signed by the President shortly after Congress adjourned last July. Wagner said accurate information on employment was "crucial and fundamental."

"It was confidently expected that the first deficiency bill, which has passed the House and is now pending in the Senate, would provide the necessary funds," he added. "As a matter of fact, the only appropriation assigned to the Department of Labor in the deficiency bill is $12,500 to replace equipment destroyed by fire. Not a dollar is appropriated to carry out the purpose of the statistical bill."

Wheat's Scepter Yielded to Corn

After 82 Years, Monarch's Reign in Chicago Pit Is Ended.

Chicago, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—The monarch of a midland empire ended a reign of 82 years tonight amid the darkness of a deserted market place.

Tomorrow morning at 9:30, wheat will move from the throne room in the mightiest exchange of them all—the Chicago Board of Trade. In his stead corn will take up the scepter on the main trading floor.

The remnant of a once mighty group of wheat traders transacted their last deal in the pit reserved for wheat Saturday, and tomorrow they move across the floor to the less pretentious area built for brokers who deal in prosaic corn. The Farm Board's sponsorship of wheat prices to prevent too great a decline in price has succeeded so well that wheat trading has fallen far below that in corn.

ered at a restaurant on Pennsylvania avenue northwest, near Fourth street, for the nuptials banquet. The bride was not present.

The bride's absence, it was explained, was due to the old Chinese custom—that following a marriage ceremony the bride must return immediately to her home.

The wedding was arranged by Mortimer Lonyay, general counsel of the Canton provinces in America, and Elton Layton, secretary of the House committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Four members of Congress were in attendance at the wedding and the banquet. They are William P. Holaday, of Illinois; Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ohio; Wilbur Cartwright, of Oklahoma, and Luther Johnson, of Texas, all representatives. Miss Helen Holaday, who is a guest of her father in Washington, also attended.

PLANE'S FALL FATAL TO GUARD SERGEANT

MACHINE HITS CHANNEL

Philadelphia, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A sergeant was killed and a lieutenant saved himself in a parachute as a Pennsylvania National Guard airplane dropped 2,500 fet into the back channel at the Philadelphia Navy Yard today.

Sergt. Garland C. Brantley, 30, of Newtown Square, Pa., was the man killed. The pilot of the plane was Lieut. Albert V. Santa Maria, 40, of Ardmore, a former Royal Flying Corps pilot, of England, who was giving Brantley a flying lesson.

Santa Maria dropped from the plane in his parachute after the machine had plunged to within 1,000 feet of the earth. His parachute caught on a trestle, leaving him hanging 125 feet in the air before sailors could release him.

Brantley was killed when the plane hit the water. Officials of the navy yard were unable to explain why he, too, did not leap, as he had a parachute.

Santa Maria said that something went wrong with the controls of the plane, and that he was unable to fix them.

Einstein Denies Autograph Fans

$3 for Poor Children of Berlin Will Bring Response, Says Frau.

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Autograph hunters find Albert Einstein, world's leading physicist, relatively different. Hundreds of requests have been poured in by mail on the Einsteins here.

"There are too many requests; we've granted none," said Frau Elsa. "If they really want them very much for charity, the doctor will. He thinks of the poor children in Berlin. He sends as much money to help the poor as he can.

"So if the autograph is wanted very bad, if the letters bring, say, $3 for the Berlin poor, the doctor will be happy—and pictures with autograph, say, for $5."

20 TRAPPED IN MINE GET OUT BY TUNNEL

AIR SUPPLIED BY PIPE

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Crawling through a tunnel dug through debris of rock, earth, steel and timber by their comrades, 20 men entombed in the Hetch Hetchy Coast Range Tunnel, came to the surface early today, showing little evidence of their 30-hour ordeal.

All were in good spirits and although tired and hungry, none was known to have suffered seriously. Trapped last Friday night when supporting timbers gave way 800 feet under ground allowing debris to clog the tunnel, the men probably owed their lives to the action of Welby Morgan, 28-year-old nozzleman.

When the cave-in started, Morgan dragged a 20-foot length of four-inch pipe beneath the falling rocks, although he was twice knocked down before reaching safety. Air was supplied to the imprisoned men through the pipe as well as small quantities of food.

Late yesterday the burrow was first pushed through to the men. It was large enough to allow Oscar Nelson, smallest of the crew, to crawl to safety. A piece of wreckage prevented enlarging the tunnel and the rescuers were forced to make a new opening over a slightly deviated course. Delay in bringing out the other 19 men led to a circulation of rumors that another slide had occurred.

Relatives and friends waited impatiently around a bonfire during the night after Nelson had been brought out. A nearby house was kept heated and when the men were brought to the surface they were taken there for examination and rest.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 11.—If the entire crop of bright tobacco made in this section this season, and normally sold on the local market, is brought here, the Petersburg market will exceed 5,000,000 pounds, local tobacco officials announce. This would mean a new record for the Petersburg markets and exceed the best year, 1922, by 500,000 pounds.

It is believed the crop will be marketed as usual and officials look forward to a record year.

The high price record was maintained in November when the Petersburg market led the State. Reports for December have not been released, but it is believed the record will be maintained for that month also.

Nor a week the average price has been about $10 per 100 pounds. This is low, but many lots brought $45 per 100 pounds. Lots of inferior grade were responsible for the low average. Offerings this week are expected to bring higher average prices, as better grades are likely to be marketed.

The quantity of tobacco handled last week was 140,000 pounds of bright and about 10,000 pounds of dark leaf. Dark tobacco is coming in slowly, but probably will increase in quantity.

So far, the tobacco market is 180,000 pounds ahead of the entire season of 1929. This season's total is 3,200,000 pounds, while the entire market period of 1929-30 was 3,520,000 pounds.

The outlook for a return to its place among the leading tobacco markets of the South is excellent for Petersburg, say market officials. This city once was second to none in this respect and it is believed it again will reach this point.

STAND UPON STRIKE BY CLERGY SCORED

Minister and Church Paper Editor Gives Address at Danville.

DELIVERS $1,000 CHECK

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Jan. 11.—An attack upon local ministers for failure to do more toward settlement of the Danville textile strike was made this evening, in an address by the Rev. W. B. Spofford, of New York, editor of The Witness, weekly paper of the Episcopal Church, speaking before striking textile operatives in their hall.

Mr. Spofford is secretary of the Church League of Industrial Democracy, which has organized an emergency relief council to aid the Danville strikers. He brought with him a check for $1,000, making the total contribution of the group $3,500. Ten bishops, Spofford said, have contributed to the fund.

Cheers and cries of "More beans" followed his announcement.

"I say with shame that the churches of America have not supported you as they should," said Mr. Spofford. "But I suppose the pastors here are mill-owned."

Mr. Fitzgerald's pastor is the Rev. John B. Winn, of Mount Vernon Methodist Church. He is ill, having recently suffered a severe attack of influenza and is now in a Richmond hospital.

Spofford, in his address, took the position that the day of paternalism is passed and that Southern industry will sooner or later have to treat with unions. He said that there was no good reason why the United Textile Workers, described as "an unusually conservative union," should not be dealt with.

He was willing to admit, he said, that "Mr. Fitzgerald has done a lot for his people," but the system of "master and slave," he insisted, must come to an end and give way to a different arrangement.

Earl L. Hogue, president of the Colorado Federation of Labor, in an address this afternoon, said "this strike would have been settled long ago if the soldiers had not been sent here. President Hoover has been told about the Danville strike, but he has not caught on to it yet."

It was announced that Sherwood Anderson, well-known author, will speak here next Tuesday night.

Fire Victim's Mate Arrested by Police

Immorality Charge Placed Against Husband; No Warrant Issued.

Special to The Washington Post.

Franklin, W. Va., Jan. 11.—Fred Simpson, whose wife and one of whose children were burned to death in their country home near here some weeks ago, was arrested at Maysville, Grant County, yesterday by State police on an immorality charge.

Simpson has been questioned by police as to his possible connection with the fire that destroyed the Simpson home but no warrant for him has been issued. He had been ordered by Circuit Court to pay his wife alimony a few days before the fire occurred, and another child of the pair told neighbors Simpson had been at the home some hours before the fire was discovered and was in an angry mood.

This child walked four miles through snow and ice, without shoes, to call assistance for the family. When the assistance reached the scene, the house had been burned, with the two victims. The child who made the trip, unable to explain how he managed to get out of the house, is thought to have been carried out by his mother, who then returned to rescue a younger child, but also perished in the flames.

3,000 FAIL TO IDENTIFY MAN FOUND WOUNDED

for a point east or north of Charlottesville, perhaps out of the State. Hanging on a bush close by was a woman's scarf.

Inspection of the man's clothing revealed little toward identification. A blue serge suit, cream-colored shirt and heavy underwear literally were covered with stains. On an inside pocket of the trousers is a laundry mark, D1729. A black leather belt contains a silver buckle with the letter "B."

Deputy Sheriff W. Abbot Smith and Constable H. J. Haney said all the pockets, save one, had been turned wrong side out, evidently to give the impression that robbery had been the motive for the slaying. The pocket unturned contained a pack of cigarettes and a few sticks of chewing gum.

Picture wire had been used in strangling the man and his mouth had been gagged with a handkerchief, over which was stuffed heavy cloth.

Of a half dozen gashes inflicted, the most severe was on the back of the head, but either one of the four on the forehead would have been sufficient to cause death. Neither shoes nor hat were found at the stream.

Deaths of two infants yesterday under unusual circumstances were brought to the attention of Coroner T. Marshall Jones, the first being that of Rabert Lyle Mahoney, 3 months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Mahoney, 26 Linden avenue. Dr. Jones learned that the last time Mrs. Mahoney saw the child was at 1:45 o'clock in the morning, when she nursed the baby. The child had never been strong, the mother said. The coroner issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

The second case was that of the 1-day-old infant of Mrs. George Braumbach, who reported she nursed the child at 4:30 o'clock in the morning, tucked the baby in its crib and then dropped off to sleep. When she awoke at 7:30 the baby was dead. Mrs. Braumbach said the child had been restless. The coroner issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

Garvey, superintendent in charge of the sanitation department of the city health department, has announced that, beginning today, the trash and ashes collections will be by motor truck, instead of horse-drawn vehicles as in the past. It is expected the change will greatly increase the efficiency of the work. The city has been divided into three districts and the men in charge are John Hansborough, No. 1; Norman Roberts, No. 2, and R. C. Vowters, No. 3.

Plans provide for removal of trash and ashes every four or five days. Better service is expected later.

FAVORS DRASTIC CHANGE

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 11.—City Manager Paul S. Morton sent a communication yesterday to the city council vigorously opposing any increase in taxes on account of the loss incurred in revenue in the new assessment, recently amended by the board of equalization. Mr. Morton wrote:

"I wish to emphatically express my opposition to an increase in the tax rate. The solution of this entire problem is the collection of taxes. Regardless of the loss under the new assessment, in my opinion, it is not in any sense necessary that you should consider increasing the tax rate, but to compel a higher percentage of tax collection during each fiscal year.

"It is only fair to assume that about 100 per cent, of taxes can be collected by using the provisions of the law, and they are collected in other Virginia cities, especially Lynchburg, Roanoke, Danville and Staunton.

"If this were the case in Petersburg, on the basis of the new assessment and on the basis of the present budget, there would be at the end of the fiscal year a surplus of approximately $7,000, which should properly go into the capital account, to perform those permanent improvements that are so vitally necessary.

"Therefore I do not have any concern regarding the reduction of the assessment, but do have material concern regarding the system of tax collection. Unless there is in a reasonable time a tremendous improvement in this system, I recommend that drastic measures be taken relative to this department."

FUR TRADE CONTROL NEW AIM OF SOVIET

BIG MOSCOW SALE SOON

New York, Jan. 11 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Soviet Russia, as a part of her campaign to take from other nations their places in the commercial sun, has undertaken to seize control of the world's fur market, it was revealed today.

One of the first steps is the Soviet plan to forbid the shipment of undressed furs to the United States. By dressing the furs in Russia it would not only give this work to Soviet labor, but "oul" draw fur buyers to that country.

Sol Schild, vice president of the Eitingon-Schild Co., which has had contracts with the Red government for several years for delivery of millions of dollars in undressed furs, admitted that Russia was putting the lid down on the export of undressed furs.

Mr. Schild explained that the plan had not been wholly effective, but added that eventually he expected to see a complete ban on the export of undressed furs. This would close to the United States and to other nations one of the principal sources of furs, making Russia a virtual dictator of prices.

In February a great sale will be held in Moscow at which $2,000,000 in Russia-dressed furs will be put on sale. This is a small amount in the world trade, Mr. Schild pointed out, but he said it shows the Soviet's aim.

As for American importations of dressed fur, Mr. Schild said that the tariff made them prohibitive.

Expects Complete Ban.

Mr. Schild pointed out that Russia, as a great producer of raw furs, could build up something very close to a monopoly. In 1929, the value of fur products in the United States was $277,058,936, of which $101,404,856 was added by manufacture. This shows that the undressed furs, after being brought into this country, were dressed and fashioned so that the value was boosted by almost half the original value.

"Capitalist" Charges Denied.

Moscow, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Charges of "dumping" and use of forced labor were denounced at the closing session of the central executive committee today by President Michael Kalinin, who declared they were made by "foreign enemies" and capitalists for the purpose of "throwing dust in the eyes" of discontented laboring classes throughout the capitalistic world.

He said the capitalists were attempting to alibi the world economic crisis by blaming it on the Soviets, but said they had not succeeded and were only making the situation worse.

The committee announced a congress of Soviets of the U. S. S. R. would be held in Moscow March 5.

Church to Benefit From Bal Masque

Russian Concert Is Also Planned to Aid Jobless in City.

A tiny church, located in the midcity section of Washington, and with five years of effort and struggle for existence behind it, will be the beneficiary, along with unemployed workers of the city, of the Russian concert and the bal masque to be held in the Willard Hotel January 24, under the auspices of persons prominent in social and diplomatic circles.

Proceeds from the ball will go to St. Alexander's Russian Orthodox Church at 1317 Twelfth street northwest. The pastor of the church is Archpriest Father V. Gindlin, named to this church by Archbishop Metropolitan Platon, who was appointed head of the Orthodox Church in the United States and Canada by Patriarch Tikhon of Russia, now deceased.

The committee in charge of the ball is headed by Bojidar Stoianovitch, Attache at the Legation of Jugosalvia, and includes, among others, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. Robert L. Owens, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Gen. William E. Horton, Commissioner Harry E. Hull and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend.

CURB SHARES RISE DURING LAST WEEK

Oils Succeed in Maintaining Most of Gains Made Since Last Year.

SUGAR ISSUES ADVANCE

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—The better feeling engendered in speculative circles by seasonal improvement in basic lines of business and by the strength of the bond market found reflection in a slow but steady rise in curb prices last week. Hesistance to profit-taking was stronger than in some time, and the firm undertone discouraged aggressive action by the bears.

The oils succeeded in maintaining most of their gains, for develpoments in the industry continue favorable. Crude production has shrunk by one-third in the last year and a half and the most recent official weekly report showed that output had reached the lowest levels since midsummer of 1926. The short interest in the petroleum shares is believed to have been considerably reduced.

Utilities were unable to get far whenever they reached old resistance points, but many of the leaders succeeded in pushing into fractionally higher ground for the recovery. However, the better prices almost invariably found a rather large volume of stock awaiting sale and this tendency served to temper the rallies.

The few motor and sugar shares listed on the junior exchange improved moderately, the former joining the demonstration that usually accompanies the New York automobile show. Ford stocks were strong. Fajardo Sugar ran up several points when the Berlin agreement was announced. Industrials were somewhat stronger. The Dresser Manufacturing issues, selling at a low ratio to earnings, got some attention and there was a brief flurry in the foods when the modification of the packers consent decree was announced.

United Founders' acquisition of a controlling interest in U. S. Electric Power, which in turn has large holdings in Standard Power & Light, brought a lively upturn in the investment holding company's stock. Some of the demand was attributed to "averaging" by purchasers who had bought at higher levels and wished to reduce their average cost. Management trust shares were mostly firm.

Rallies of two, three and four points in preferred stocks of many descriptions indicated the resumption of investment buying, and this trend was well received. The public is still apathetic toward speculative and semispeculative issues.

CROSS-SEA PLANES GREETED AT BAHIA

Squadron of 11 From Italy Halts on Coast Trip to Rio de Janeiro.

WILL LEAVE IN TWO DAYS

Bahia, Brazil, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Eleven Italian seaplanes, victors in a crossing of the South Atlantic last week, arrived here at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, thus completing the first stage of a triumphal flight along the coast to Rio de Janeiro.

Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, who is commander of the flight, and his companions received a warm welcome from city officials and the people, who cheered as the planes circled over Bahia before gliding down upon the bay.

The seaplanes, ten of which came from West Africa to Natal in 17 hours 15 minutes last week, the eleventh coming down at sea because of minor trouble, but joining them later, left Natal at 8:30 this morning.

The distance between the far northern point and Bahia is 560 miles, as flown by the mail planes of the Pan-American Airways, but the Italians went farther, to the City of Joao Pessoa (formerly Parahyba, capital of the state of the same name until named for a leader who was slain last summer), where Balbo dropped the following message:

"The Latin Fascist Aces, leaving immortal Rome and flying over the territory of a great sister nation, at the city of Joao Pessoa, bow before Brazil's martyr."

The flight was uneventful, except that the planes met headwinds most of the way to Pernambuco.

After two days at Bahia the Italians will go to Rio, where they will be honored guests of the government and the Italian colony.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Deweys Dined At Legation by Polish Envoy

Greeted by Many on Return From Sojourn at Warsaw.

AGAIN the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Filipowicz have brightened an otherwise dull Sunday evening with a dinner. Last evening they entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, who are visiting here. The Deweys recently returned from Poland, where for years Mr. Dewey was financial adviser to the Polish government.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey were popular during their sojourn in Warsaw. Mr. Dewey so endeared himself to official Warsaw that when he advised on readjustments in the financial system, no matter how it "went against the grain," his counsel was accepted in a friendly spirit.

Their daughter, Mrs. Frederick Ager, then Miss Suzette Dewey, was married in Warsaw, the event being among the outstanding social functions of that season. The family's departure from Poland caused genuine regret, for each had a definite place in the life of the Polish capital.

The dinner last evening was unusually interesting, for it offered many of the guests a first opportunity to greet Mme. Filipowciz, recently returned from Europe, and to welcome the Deweys, who are stopping at the Mayflower.

Other guests were the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, under whom Mr. Dewey served as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury before his appointment to Poland; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, Mrs. John B. Williams and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Rawls, of Aiken, S. C., who are visting her; Mr. and Mrs. Gist Blair, Dr. and Mrs. E. Dana Durand, Mr. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Jangled Nerves?

IT doesn't pay to go galumphing through life sleeping on an old mattress. You know how they get old and crochetedy. They lose resiliency—pack so that elbows and shoulders and arms get numb. They don't conform to the body. Every time you turn over (and we change our sleeping positions on an average 34 times a night) it takes ages for us to get comfortable again.

Why don't you let us make a coil spring mattress out of your old one? You'll sleep on layers of downy felt supported by resilient coil springs that cushion every curve. You'll admit after one night that you never knew what sleep comfort meant before.

The cost is only $12.50 to $22.50. Isn't that a trifle to pay for 20 years of slumberjoy?

THE RED CROSS APPEAL.

The public will gladly respond to President Hoover's appeal for $10,000,000 to provide for Red Cross ministrations in the drought regions. If more than this sum should be needed it will be contributed. The people will not permit starvation to bring to death any citizen under the flag if they are given a method to carry relief. The Red Cross is the only suitable means for distributing relief, and the largesse of the public is the only proper source of Red Cross revenue.

Congress has no authority to take money from the Treasury with which to feed the people in the States. The Federal Government can not be made the almoner of the States without creating an evil as great as hunger itself. If invasion and defeat stared the country in the face there might be an excuse for rupturing the Constitution and making the Government the supporter of the people, but there is no present excuse for this outrage of law and order. The people can take care of their own, and they can take care of the Government, too.

The attempt to take tax money required to maintain the Government and use it as a dole for needy citizens is a defiance of the Constitution and common sense. Congress should sweep away this nonsense. It should confine Federal aid to loans, all of them to be repaid to the Treasury. Money exacted from the people by taxation is officially stolen when it is diverted from the uses prescribed by the Constitution. There is no occasion for misappropriating funds in order to feed the needy of Arkansas or any other State. Let Congress employ tax money to maintain the Government, and let charity begin and end where it belongs—at home, among the people.

Taking money from the Treasury to finance the Red Cross would be a misappropriation of tax receipts.

Congress can not set up a charity relief organization without wasting valuable time as well as stolen funds. The starving can not live long enough for all the red tape to unwind. The Red Cross is already in the field. Its chapters are composed of citizens in each community who are familiar with local conditions. No graft, no swollen salary list, no stealing of food from the starving is possible under the Red Cross system. All of this would be possible under the scheme proposed by the Caraway amendment. But the scheme could not go into operation for several weeks, during which many lives would be sacrificed. Then would come embezzlement, bootlegging of supplies, bloated salaries, official dereliction and negligence, and other scandals resulting from the unsystematic and sudden distribution of millions of dollars.

The bill appropriating $45,000,000 for loans to drought-stricken farmers has been held up by the attempt to set up a Government charity organization financed from the Treasury. The House and Senate ought to shake off this attempt without another day's delay. The legislators who persist in this attempt are working ruin to farmers who might extricate themselves if they could obtain immediate loans.

RICHES FOR PHILANTHROPY.

Every year the sum of philanthropic bequests grows larger. In spite of adverse economic conditions last year New Yorkers bequeathed $36,985,396 to altruistic ends. This is $10,000,000 more than was set aside for this purpose in wills filed for probate in that city in 1929. In addition more than $50,000,000 was given by living donors for schools, hospitals, children's agencies and homes for the aged. This is a splendid showing for a single city.

The growing tendency of wealthy individuals to devote part of their fortunes to the welfare of humanity makes an interesting commentary on civilization. Most men who garner great riches for themselves have a yearning to help smooth the way toward human happiness. Hardly any of them make provision for administering charity, but they do seek means of improving conditions and of removing the causes of poverty and distress.

Methods of spending such money have been greatly improved during recent years. It was once the custom for wealthy donors to establish memorials to themselves. But the modern custom is to endow worthy establishments already in operation, or to intrust the expenditure of the bequest to a group qualified to know how it can be best applied. Some donors have even insisted that their fortunes be spent within a specified period to avoid financing some agency that might outlive its usefulness.

In the growing popularity of altruistic endowments can be seen a trace of the philosophy that a wide distribution of wealth works to the benefit of all. When men who have spent their lives in creating wealth turn a large share of it to education, research, investigation, &c., the benefits are diffused throughout the whole country. They become a most wholesome influence in modern society.

THE SENATE'S FUTILE GESTURE.

Senators who attempted to intimidate the President and take over the power to remove Federal officers now sheepishly acknowledge that it would be a "futile gesture" to vote to reject the nomination of officers who have been confirmed and are in office.

The whole plan to punish these Federal officers by distorting the purpose of a Senate rule was a "futile gesture." The threat to besmirch President Hoover as a hireling of the power trust unless he acceded to the Senate's demand was a "futile gesture." His exposure of this political plot was so effectual that his assailants now deny that they intended to accuse him of betrayal of trust. The record stands against them. Senator Norris, with more hardihood than his insurgent colleagues, bluntly asserted that President Hoover was on the side of the power trust.

Several senators voted for the recall of the nominations because they were not willing to resolve their doubts against a Senate rule. Now that the fact has been made clear that a Senate rule can not remove Federal officers, these senators can not be expected to follow the President's assailants into further folly. One rebuff, resulting in the humiliation of the Senate by exposing its ignorance of the Constituion, is enough for some senators. Others, like Mr. Brookhart, may proclaim that the Senate can make rules in violation of the Constitution, but they will be merely making "futile gestures" if they do.

The plan to convince the country that a group of senators is the only guardian of the public against a rapacious "power trust" comes to an inglorious fizzle. Insofar as the plan included an attempt to dishonor the President of the United States it brands the perpetrators themselves with dishonor. The commissioners chosen by the President and confirmed by the Senate are special guardians of the public interest in power matters. The law requires them to select their own assistants. The Senate has found that it can not browbeat these commissioners into appointing the proteges of certain senators. Assistants will be chosen on their own merits. The presumption that the proteges of certain senators merit appointment is now destroyed by the action of the Senate, and the public would look with disfavor upon the restoration of those particular persons. The public interest can be safeguarded by others who would not be charged with serving senators first and the public afterward.

In this Government of checks and balances it is a wholesome thing when an attempt at usurpation of power is put down with promptness and finality. Certain senators who have posed as constitutional authorities have lost their prestige as lawyers, and may be expected to think twice before they again resort to unconstitutional methods in an attempt to browbeat the President.

PRICE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS.

The dairy advisory committee, organized under the agricultural marketing act to represent dairy cooperative associations, at a meeting held in Washington this week adopted a resolution calling for a reduction in the retail price of dairy products, especially city market milk, in harmony with the reduced cost of raw material. The reduced buying power of the public in the present depression, according to the committee, has resulted in a constantly declining demand for dairy products, with the result that farm prices for such products have declined until they now stand at a level beneath the cost of production. The retail price has not declined in the same percentage. The call for price cuts obviously is made in the hope of stimulating the consumption of dairy products.

When the agricultural marketing act became effective a hue and cry arose from commission men and wholesalers of farm products against the use of Government funds to set up agencies in direct competition with their businesses. One of the salient objects of the marketing act, however, was to cut down the size of the machine required to get a unit of farm produce to the consumer's table and to set up machinery whereby the spread between farm and retail prices might be reduced and the savings passed on in part, at least, to the individual farmer. If the situation revealed by the resolution of the advisory committee is true it illustrates one of the evils that have for years affected adversely the economic position of the farmer. In the face of falling price levels for dairy products the distributing agencies through concerted action have apparently maintained the retail price at an artificially high level while they have taken every opportunity to reduce the prices paid the farmer for his product. Falling price levels have affected adversely the return of the farmer without benefiting the consumer, but greatly benefiting the distributor. This was one of the evils the agricultural marketing act was expected to remedy. Such a situation constitutes the best possible argument for the setting up of cooperative marketing associations.

The advisory committee, of course, in passing the resolution dealt in generalities. Locally, housewives report that the price of dairy products is coming down. Butter today is selling at a lower price in Washington than it has for years. But the housewives of other cities apparently have not fared so well.

A resolution calling for general reductions in retail prices of dairy products may or may not produce tangible results. It should, however, stir the interest of Congress and of the Federal Trade Commission. Are profiteers taking advantage of falling price levels to exploit both the producers of farm products and the consuming public? Is there need for Federal intervention in the food markets in the interest of ameliorating the misery and distress that is abroad throughout the land?

MINNESOTA'S PRESS GAG.

"The freedom of speech and of the press should remain inviolate, and any law which constitutes an entering wedge into that inviolability is unsafe," says Gov. Floyd B. Olson, of Minnesota, in recommending repeal of the law which attempts to limit freedom of the press in that State. Gov. Olson as county prosecutor was responsible for application of this law which resulted in the destruction of a Minnesota newspaper. The fact that he is now advocating its repeal encourages the hope that the legislature will soon remove this stigma from the statute books.

Repeal of the law is necessary because the State Supreme Court held it to be constitutional. It is difficult to understand how such a law was enacted in a country where freedom of the press and of speech is everywhere guaranteed. Now that the people of Minnesota have had a demonstration of how a judge, under this statute, can put a newspaper out of business without trial by jury, it seems impossible that the law will be allowed to stand.

When a newspaper alleged to publish "malicious, scandalous and defamatory matter" can be destroyed by a court injunction, freedom of the press has disappeared. Any judge who has a grievance against a publication might crush it. This Minnesota statute is so obviously vicious that it is unworthy of a modern State. If the legislature does not repeal the act, its validity should be brought to a test in the United States Supreme Court.

NOTABLE FLIGHTS OF 1930.

From the New York Times.

Aviation closed its ledger of 1930 with sharply clipped wings, insofar as production of planes is concerned, but turns the yet unmarked page of the new year with a record of remarkable gains and of solid achievement in practically every other phase of the conquest of the air. Progress all along the line marked aeronautics, in both its heavier-than-air and lighter-than-air branches, in the United States and abroad during 1930. This was manifest in the extension of airlines, in a notable increase in passenger carrying, in accomplishment of sensational distance flights over land and water, in the stepping-up of speeds and in improvements in planes, motors and in the radio aids to flight to increase both safety and comfort.

During the twelvemonth just ended the North Atlantic and the South Atlantic were both conquered by air by planes and dirigibles. The westward passage from Europe to the United States was made successfully by airplane no less than three times. Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith having flown his veteran Fokker, Southern Cross, from Australia to Ireland, thence hopped with his companions, Van Dyk, Stannage and Saul, to Newfoundland and, after refueling, in another single flight to Roosevelt Field, Long Island.

Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, instructor at the pilots' school at Syldt, took off unheralded on what was ostensibly a training flight with three members of his organization, Zimmer, Albrecht and Hack, and, flying by stages by way of Iceland, Greenland and Nova Scotia, brought his Dornier Wal to the waters of New York Harbor.

Finally, Capt. Dieudonne Coste, with his second on previous record flights, Maurice Bellonte, shook the dust of France from the wheels of his huge Breguet, the Question Mark, after months of careful preparation, and, despite fog and storm, held the air until he had set them down on Curtiss Airport, Valley Stream, Long Island, in the first unbroken flight from the soil of the Old World to that of the United States; a return salute for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's New York-Paris flight of 1927. Coste's westward winging has been hailed as perhaps the greatest flight, from the point of view of preparation and execution, in the history of aviation.

Notable flights in 1930, not involving the ocean crossings, were many. They included both distance flights and speed flights. Women as well as men were the pilots. Col. Lindbergh, accompanied by his wife, flew in his Lockheed-Sirius from Los Angeles to New York in 14 hours 45 minutes, making one stop, breaking the existing coast record. But it was not long to be his. Capt. Frank M. Hawks, holder of the nonstop record in both directions, sent his Travelair Mystery S, hurtling from west to east in 12 hours 25 minutes 3 seconds and then proceeded to break a whole series of intercity records in this fastest of commercial planes.

He flew to New York from Detroit in 2 hours 45 minutes; from Washington in 58 minutes; from Boston in 53 minutes; from Philadelphia in 20 minutes. Capt. Hawks believes that the speeds around 4 miles a minute which he has set up are practical ones for certain phases of aviation, and can be used in a "pony express" service of the air between cities and from coast to coast.

Other notable flights of the year included those of the DO-X to Lisbon, and of the Junkers G-38, largest land plane, round Europe; the first nonstop hop to Panama, made by Capt. Roy W. Ammel from Barren Island, New York's municipal airport, to France Field; Miss Amy Johnson's remarkable solo flight from London to Australia in 19 days; Kingsford-Smith's breaking of the record over the same route when he reached the Antipodes in 9 days 23½ hours; Miss Ruth Nicholls' recent flight from Pacific to Atlantic in 16 hours 59½ minutes; the first flight of Capt. Lewis H. Yancey, with Zeb Bouck and William Alexander as pilot, to Bermuda, where the seaplane Pilot Radio landed and spent the night on and took off from the open sea, and the flight of Roger Q. Williams, Capt. Boyd and Lieut. Connor in the veteran Bellanca Columbia to Bermuda and return nonstop.

These are straws which show which way the wind of business is blowing.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

REFUGEE.

At times when I have fled the wintry blast,
The drifted snows and dull, dark skies of gray,
As one who from some terror runs away
To hide in safety till the danger's passed,
Seeking the sands of summer where are cast
Soft waves of pleasure round the feet of play,
I find myself beneath the laughter gay,
Wishing I'd not been frightened quite so fast.

Sunshine and safety and the constant blue
Of cloudless skies of summertime have palled,
I want once more to battle to be called;
To stand and brave a blizzard's fury through,
And then I'd trade the coward's peace I know
Upon my cheeks to feel the norther blow.

You Aren't Disloyal to Your Dog Because You Decline to Share His Fleas.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

If you are not more fortunate than the majority of your fellows, there will come a time in your life when you must choose between disloyalty to a friend and disloyalty to your standards of right.

Some well-loved friends, with whom you have associated on terms of moral equality—whose companionship you have enjoyed without misunderstandings or misgivings—whose ideals and convictions have seemed as decent as your own—will stoop to some dishonor or immorality that you could not forgive in any one else.

He will hide the truth from you, and you will be the last to believe him guilty, but in time his guilt will be established and your day of testing will be at hand.

What shall you do?

If he had merely broken a law or surrendered to some temptation and now felt contrite and shamed, your course would be clear. The very minimum of decency would require you to remain loyal. Your love for him would multiply to meet his greater need.

But his wrongdoing is an established practice—a way of life of which you believed him incapable—a violation of honor for pleasure or profit, deliberate and habitual.

Should you forsake him? Alas! he has already forsaken you.

Your friendship was a spiritual contract based on the assumption that each of you would continue faithful to the ideals and standards that served as the foundation of your mutual interest.

The terms of the contract could not be changed without mutual consent, and your friend's violation of the terms left you no choice in the matter.

He did the choosing. He was offered a choice between your respect and the profit to be gained from evil, and he chose the profit.

He valued your love and comradeship less than he valued the advantages he could gain by shaming you.

How can he accuse you of disloyalty if you continue to stand where you always have stood? You have not changed. The change has been in him. You have not moved. It was he that descended to lower levels.

Would he magnify the wrong he has done you by asking you to share his guilt by condoning it? Does he value you so little that he would drag you down to the lower level he has chosen?

Then you are well quit of him. Loyalty doesn't require lying in a gutter of the other fellow's choosing.

PRO AND CON

Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great Show, "Politics," Staged in Congress.

Senator Davis' Seat.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

According to reports in Washington yesterday, Senator Nye will initiate a movement next week designed to deprive Senator Davis of his seat on the ground of excessive expenditures in his primary and election campaigns. The people of Pennsylvania will not view such a movement with complacency. They have known what it is to go for years with only half representation in the Senate and they are quite aware of the peculiar prejudice entertained by the North Dakota senator and his fellow Western insurgents against all things Pennsylvanian.

In this instance there was wide condemnation by those of both parties of Mr. Nye's original attempt to bar Senator Davis from the seat to which he was duly elected. The investigation since conducted by Mr. Nye's committee has disclosed no evidence or even suggestion of illegal or improper expenditures in Mr. Davis' behalf. It is well known that of the total amount reported as spent for the Brown-Davis ticket in the primary a comparatively small portion was devoted to the senator's candidacy. Opinions differ as to the amount of money which ought to be expended in a political campaign in a State as large as Pennsylvania. But whatever the opinion, no Federal law governs primary outlays. It is to be hoped the Senate will stand firmly against Mr. Nye's proposal to nullify, through an extra-constitutional procedure, the choice of a senator made by a sovereign State.

Everybody Knows It.

Indianapolis News.

If, as is now forecast, the Wickersham committee reports that prohibition law enforcement failure results partly from corruption, local politics and the negligence of local officials, the country's situation is rather discouraging, as all that is a well established condition.

Crooked Congressmen.

Topeka Capital.

Those who fondly imagine that the statesmen who founded our Government were more honest and self-sacrificing than the statesmen of the present might ponder over this historical fact: When the first Congress convened, continental currency was hardly worth the paper it was printed on. It had, however, been issued by the Continental Congress and Alexander Hamilton insisted that the credit of the new Government should be maintained and its currency redeemed at par. When it became evident that Congress would pass the redemption measure, couriers went out and gathered up the currency held by Revolutionary soldiers and others for a song. In those days there were no railroads and no daily newspapers. News did not get around fast. After the measure did pass, it was discovered that most of the members of Congress who voted for it had Continental scrip or currency in their pockets when they voted.

Scrambling the Presidency.

Utica Press.

Norris is not the first statesman to criticise the electoral college and suggest or propose a change. But the criticisms and substitutes have never enlisted any important following in Congress or among the public. Making the race for the Presidency a free-for-all for which any one may enter, may be the senator's idea of democracy, but the country would not long consent to be ruled by Presidents such chance would be likely to give it.

Object Lessons.

You can't blame Senator Norris for declining to lead a third party when history shows us the path of a third party always is the shortest distance between Nowhere and the Jumping Off Place.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why Not Open Army to Men Listed Men as Aid to Unemployment? "No!" Thunders the Fist. "Let Them Starve First."

To the Editor of The Post:

The national defense act of June 4, 1920, provided for the maintenance of a Regular Army of 280,000 enlisted men. Since 1921 the strength of the Regular Army has been successively reduced from 280,000 to less than 120,000. The present strength of the Regular Army is entirely inadequate to serve as an agency for facilitating a general mobilization and for its many peace-time duties as outlined in the recent report of Gen. Summerall, retiring chief of staff.

As an aid to unemployment why not have Congress appropriate enough money to bring the enlisted strength of the Army up to 280,000 men? The increased strength to be for one year, and open to men regardless of dependents. This would permit at least 150,000 men to enlist for one year.

Benefits to unemployment? Transfer 150,000 men from the ranks of the unemployed to the ranks of the Army; as the soldier is fed, clothed from the skin out, housed, given medical attention, &c., in addition to his pay, and, as the minimum monthly wage is $21, each man enlisting could keep $6 per month for spending money and make a monthly allotment of $15 to his dependents aggregating $2,225,000 each month to be sent by Army paymasters to the dependents in each State of the Union; the Government would need to let new contracts for clothing of all kinds for these 150,000 recruits, for food to feed them, for medical supplies, for fuel, light, shelter, arms, ammunition, animals, forage of all kinds, and other needed supplies.

This would not, in itself, solve the problem of unemployment, but it would do much to oil the wheels of business in every category, and would train 150,000 men for the future defense of their country, sending them back to their homes improved in health and better citizens.

Of course, this obvious and simple remedy will never be applied. Why? For three reasons: First, because it possesses no appeal to the average politician; second, because it is in conflict with the economy howl which has always made the Army and the Navy the goat; and, third, because the dyed-in-the-wool pacifists would rather have 150,000 people starve than receive military training.

A Moment Should Be Allotted to Pedestrians to Cross Street in Safety—Boston Does It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Quite often I have gone downtown via Lafayette Square, the front of the Treasury, crossing Fifteenth street at G street.

At that intersection, Fifteenth and G streets, no protection whatsoever is provided for the walking public. When the light is green for Fifteenth street traffic, it is obvious that no one can cross with any legal protection of any kind. When the light is green for Pennsylvania avenue traffic it is also obvious that no one can cross with legal protection of any kind, said traffic being routed via Fifteenth street.

In Boston they furnish protection in downtown sections of the city by having all auto traffic stopped for one minute out of each three minutes, taking turns. Automobile traffic north and south bound goes for one minute; automobile traffic east and west bound goes for one minute; then pedestrian traffic for one minute. Boston is an industrial city, where time is more valuable than it is here. Yet we do not care for our own, and our visitors, as Boston, a city where time is more valuable, cares for its own and its visitors.

The whole thing revolves on this: Should we refuse to grant pedestrian residents and visitors protection, even if it should cost us a few minutes a day?

WALKER CHAPMAN.

Social Disorder Criticized for Permitting Corruption of Youth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allowing for a changed environment that governs our customs and mode of living, I do believe that public interest in present conditions should be more of a personal nature if the youth of our Nation are to have respect for law and order and the preservation of American ideals.

Current literature clearly indicates conditions of a nature to warrant alarm. Disrespect for law and order, a neglect of home environment and a failure to practice Christian principles inculcated in youth, are now the rule. Laws should be considered for the control of forces opposed to our form of government. Efforts should be directed to a more personal interest by parents and organizations in home training and church teaching, with particular stress upon the danger of many social affairs not properly chaperoned, automobile trips of a questionable character, and week-end parties in a wicked environment.

The above is not in criticism of our youth, but rather in criticism of the social disorder. Conditions must be corrected if the generation to follow is to be representative of American principles. Any nation without faith and character can not hope to progress.

Danger of Impaired Health of Federal Employes in New Buildings With Small Windows.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thousands of the present and future residents of the District of Columbia will have to spend most of their lives in the New Internal Revenue and Commerce Buildings.

Has the Government protected their health and welfare in these buildings? I have seen nothing in the newspapers commensurate with the importance and interest of this subject.

Judging from the smallness of the windows and their spacing far apart, and the number of courts and deeply set columns, the health and comfort of the workers have been sacrificed to produce a certain architectural effect desired by a few faddists.

The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

CHAPTER IX.

Under the midsummer sun, Santiago stewed in its misery and filth. To the eye, which, from the heights, had looked longingly upon it for two weeks and more, the city had seemed to hold a three-fold beauty. Desire gave it enchantment; all that youthful hearts had dreamed of tropic moons, guittars and grated windows, gave it romance. Yet it had more than an imagined splendor. The white walls glistened, the red roofs burned and luxuriant foliage, richly green. One thought of Samarkand; a Samarkand that flowed, dazzling, down long hillsides to a harbor that was like a mirror of emerald and brass.

A city of dreams; a city of death over which the buzzards wheeled by thousands. In normal times, ship captains had a habit of saying that they could smell Santiago 10 miles at sea; and the city had stood a siege and suffered famine and pestilence. Piles of mango skins, ashes, old bones, lay here and there on the broken and neglected pavements; filthy rags, dung, kitchen refuse, poisoning the air and giving sustenance to hundreds of buzzards and myriads of flies. The gutters were open drains, broken here and there by holes and pockets filled with decaying garbage, and into them at intervals trickled rills of foul, discolored water from kitchens and cesspools.

Finds City Dying.

Gaunt shapes stretched pitiful arms from the windows, begging for bread until they fell back and died; naked children, with extended abdomens and beseeching, frightened eyes, cowered in doorways or picked over the refuse for food. Here and there dead horses lay, dead dogs, dead cats; dead men, too. The red-beaked vultures flew up flapping before Wood as he rode into the city.

"Long lines of wan, yellow, ghastly-looking individuals," Wood wrote afterwards, "dragged themselves wearily up and down the filthy streets avoiding the dead animals and heaps of decomposing refuse, or sank wearily in some friendly shade, seeking to recover strength in sleep. Frightful odors poured out of abandoned houses, speaking more strongly than words of the dead within. The very air seemed laden with death."

Wood went to the palace on the plaza and took up his headquarters in a room adjoining Shafter's. The palace was a one-story building of stucco, glistening without, shaded and cool within. The American flag, raised over it with ceremony four days previous, looked odd there. Odd, too, Wood felt—an unknown doctor in April; in July autocrat of an ancient city, successor of Cortez and De Soto, Narvaez and Ponce de Leon. Life could be incredibly romantic, he must have thought, and a little dizzying.

"In these strange changes," he wrote Mrs. Wood on July 21, "here I am military governor of Santiago, stuck up in the old palace opposite the picturesque old cathedral with the whole town under military law, including all in the harbor and the Spanish prisoners, some 12,000.

"I don't know how this will turn out, but it is a bit strange to be receiving all kinds of deputations from church authorities, Spaniards, &c., and the whole thing seems like a dream. The crews on the ships (transports) are some of them in a state of mutiny and I have ordered them put in irons and kept on bread and water, &c. So on the whole the day has been fairly lively all along the line. * * *

"The archbishop is a great chap about here and a very fine looking old gentleman, who at dinner recently wanted to wade in American blood, but is now a little anxious about his enormous Spanish pension."

Faces Staggering Task.

Wood faced a task which, for all the light-hearted optimism of his letter, appalled him and might have appalled the cleanser of those other Augean stables. The private houses were more sickening in their filth than the streets; the hospitals were worse than the residences, the bakeries and markets were a nausea to the senses. The water system had been designed mainly for the benefit of certain officials and church dignitaries; and during the siege it had ceased altogether to function. There was no sewer system at all. Each household had its sink and cesspool, generally within a few feet of the kitchen, spilling their contents in the courtyards and saturating the mud floors of the dwellings themselves. Householders dumped their garbage into the streets.

All this would have been evil enough in a city sheltering only its normal population. But Santiago, which had some 50,000 souls in it under ordinary conditions, now held within its territory, or closely adjacent, more than double that number.

Wood faced four tasks, all of immediate urgency; to feed the hungry, to care for the sick, to clean the city, to bury the dead. They were all, indeed, parts of the one overwhelming need to meet the threat of an epidemic. He plunged at once into all four. Wood found considerable food in the city, secreted by the authorities for the use of the Spanish troops, and established depots where rations were distributed to frantic, milling thousands.

Opens Food Stations.

He issued 18,000 to 20,000 rations a day; on one day, 51,000. In every ward of the city he established food stations, with a doctor in each, making house-to-house visits, and sent squads to the hospitals, prisons, convents, asylums.

The cleansing of the city began in horror. The death rate was more than 200 a day; many died alone, many were deserted in death, and corpses lay for days undiscovered. Wood's men invaded the charnel houses and bore their horrible burdens in carts to the outskirts of the city.

"Men could not bury the dead fast enough," Wood wrote later, "and they were burned in great heaps of 80 or 90 piled high on gratings of railroad iron and mixed with grass and sticks. Over all were turned thousands of gallons of kerosene, and the whole frightful heap reduced to ashes. It was the only thing to be done, for the dead threatened the living, and a plague was at hand."

Day after day the black column of smoke stood monstrously over the city. One day a rainstorm quenched the burning pyre. Barbour had no more kerosene, and when he sought to purchase what he needed he found that the price had leaped to a Spanish dollar a gallon. Wood gathered 30 or 40 of the merchants in his office.

Calls Profiteering Murder.

"I have called you here," he said, "to tell you what you are doing. We have come to Cuba at your call to relieve your distress." He spoke icily, but without a trace of passion. "You are repaying our efforts by trying to make money out of us and out of your country's distress. You profess to be patriots and to be grateful. You are queer patriots and have a queerer way of showing your gratitude. I call such conduct murder." No one offered a defense. The price of kerosene resumed its normal level.

Everywhere were fires consuming the accumulated rubbish of decades. Here and there whole streets were aflame, with kerosene among the cobblestones and running in the gutters. The Cubans worked as never before in their lives.

"I make from one to two pilgrimages on horseback daily through the town," Wood wrote his wife, "and keep every one hustling along as best I can."

Wood turned his attention to the water system. Water was scarce, and of all the city's needs, the most urgent.

Wood sent for the city engineer. The gentleman was a Spaniard and he was lolling in bed when Wood's messenger arrived. "Manana!" Tomorrow—perhaps! A more urgent demond brought the same reply. Wood sent a corporal with a detail. They brought the man in his nightgown.

"We had no end of work," Wood wrote, "in getting the old broken-down system of water supply, built in 1839, in anything like working order. Thousands of leaks existed which had to be consistently patched up, and frequently the main was injured by disorderly bands outside of the city. In fact, life was one great struggle to get even with the situation."

Stricken With Yellow Fever.

Meanwhile yellow fever had appeared here and there and the danger season was at hand. Wood recognized the fatal terror of the name and banned it from Santiago. No one had "yellow fever." Thousands had "pernicious malaria." That term had a familiar home sound and bore no ominous suggestion of abrupt disaster.

The doctor-governor was blinking no realities. On the island in the harbor he built a hospital for "contagious diseases."

"Yellow fever is here, but under good control," he wrote Mrs. Wood the middle of August. "It has been here for months and is less now than a short time ago and of a mild type. * * * If I can pull this place through without an epidemic I will have accomplished a great work and saved thousands upon thousands of lives, all of which is worth working for."

He was himself stricken with fever. His skin turned a sickly yellow; his temperature ran up to 102 and 103, and he worked eighteen hours a day. His officers caught him off his guard as he leaned against a door post for support and remonstrated with him. "The work has to be done," he told them, "and I have been put here to do it."

Pride in this body of his which he has trained to obey him—a sense of duty, a love for the job, ambition. These and the consciousness, of which he speaks to a friend, of "the power behind the rugged hills," encircling the helpless thousands in his charge, combined to keep the fever in subjection. No one realized better than he that he had been given the opportunity of a lifetime and he had no intention of throwing it away as he had seen others throw the great chance away, not being ready in body and soul. Somehow he pulled through the black days and got back to his stride.

He reorganized the military and civil hospitals, hired Cuban physicians as contract surgeons, bought medicine, bedding, food and worked, in effect, as superintendent of each and of all.

The death rate fell from an average of 200 daily to 37. But overhead in great circles, watchful, wheeled still the carrion birds.

In his office a thousand matters are brought before him. The people of Santiago, accustomed to the formality, the endless red tape of the Spanish system, marvel at the speed with which a query or a complaint is heard and answered. He has an ear for everybody, listening gravely to the recital of varied woes by unhappy souls who look to him not only for the wisdom but for the power also of a Solomon, to right all wrongs and settle all disputes. These pitiful Cubans, starved in body and soul, stir him as he has never before been stirred.

Matches Spaniards' Courtesy.

He meets the cultivated Spaniards with the same gentleness and understanding, the same firmness, and with a courtesy to match their own.

Prouder than ever in defeat, they come to him to protest against this or that invasion of the traditional privilege to live or die in whatever odor sanctity or defective drainage may direct. His answers give them no comfort in their medievalism, but they are soft-spoken, without a suggestion of militaristic bluster. He explains the menace of an epidemic, the significance of hygienic laws. This is a cooperative business, he points out; they are all working together for the same end. The conception is new to them, but they acquiesce, partly because they can do nothing else, largely because there is something in this quiet man in the gray shirt and khaki riding trousers which inspires confidence, even awe.

"This rule is the rule of the Pasha," Wood writes Mrs. Wood, August 8. "Yesterday it was the regulation of the price of food, meat ond all the necessities of life. Compulsion on every hand and a stiff rule with prison for every failure to obey open to every man, rich or poor, is bringing them to terms and permitting the starving to live, and also forcing the dirty and shiftless to work. The poor are delighted and the merchants who are strangling (as many would say) the people are being forced to let up."

He uses the strong hand elsewhere to good effect, pouncing on the shopkeepers who discount the pay checks of the street workers. He is no gentler to American grafters than to Cuban. Enterprising souls among the enlisted men who have imported vast quantities of Confederate bills and are reaping a fine harvest in the shops find his hand heavy.

Has Life and Death Power.

"My authority is absolute, even to life and death, if I choose to use it," he writes Mrs. Wood again. "I have not shot any one but have pardoned a great many of the poor devils of Spaniards who were in jail for all kinds of crimes and offenses except murder."

He sits as a summary court in the overcrowded prison. It is a vile place, a squat, gloomy pile of adobe, from which Barbour's squads took out more dead than from any other building in the city. Wood investigates every case and, like some patriarch of old, administers justice.

He reorganized the police force with Cubans, keeping the soldiers in the background.

"I never use the military force unless I find the police are inadequate," he writes Alger, "as I do not want ony rule of bayonets, if avoidable."

He is puzzled for a time by the frequent clashes between the police and their Cuban fellow citizens until it dawns on him that the trouble is in the uniform. The police are wearing the garb of the Spanish regime, and bitter memories die hard. He smiles and clothes them in khaki, and there is no more friction.

Large motters, small matters crowd in upon him; noisy matters, which are insignificant; casual matters in whose birth Clio and the Comic Spirit look at each other and call upon all the imps of irony to come and see. A lieutenant in his brigade, it seems, wants a helping hand.

"I have the honor to invite your favorable attention to the request of Lieut. John J. Pershing, Tenth U. S. Cavalry, for appointment in the Staff Corps during the war," Wood writes to the adjutant general July 30, 1898. "Lieut. Pershing has been on duty with his regiment during the Santiago campaign, and has performed his duties with marked gallantry and efficiency. Any consideration which you may be able to show him will be well deserved, and, from what I know of his ability, any position to which he may be advanced will be filled with ability."

Through the heavy tropical air, the enchantment of incredible fortune, comes no premonitory drum beat of distant, unimagined armies.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

The family name "Sweetser" is one of the relatively few names whose original meanings are rather clearly suggested by their modern forms. There is good evidence to show that this name is merely a corruption of "sweet sir," an expression which, through sarcasm or through seriousness, frequently became a nickname in early days. In many cases, however, this name has become confused with "Switzer" which means "the man from Switzerland." The corresponding German form "Schweizer" is sometimes replaced by "Sweetser" in English-speaking countries. A certain Richard Swetesire is mentioned in an English document of the last part of the fourteenth century.

The family name "Doolittle" is of English origin, and its obvious meaning must be taken literally. It was originally given as a nickname to idlers. A certain John Dolitel is mentioned in a fourteenth cenutry record. "Faypew," the French equivalent of "Doolittle," as also found in early English documents.

The family name "Koenig" (also spelled "Konig") is of German origin, and means "the king." There are various reasons for its first having been bestowed as a personal name. It was often applied to persons who had distinguished themselves because of unusual ability. It was also given in sarcasm to excessively proud persons. Sometimes it was retained as a personal name by persons who had taken the part of a king in a pageant. Finally, it will be recalled that in early days it was a common practice to display pictures and images before private dwellings, as well as before inns and taverns, as a means of identification. Thus, "Koenig" often means "he who lives at the sign of the king." The name appears to be first recorded in 1295 at which time a German document mentions a certain Chunrat der Kung."

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Brighter Children.

To those who are interested in the rising generation it sometimes seems as if the children of today know more, respond better and behave better for their age than did the children of 15 or 20 years ago.

There is at present no way of knowing positively whether there is any truth in this idea or whether it is simply a fond delusion on the part of elderly persons who can view the young with a benevolent eye largely because their own children are already grown up.

It, however, is known certainly that the children of today are taller and healthier than those of a generation ago.

There can be little doubt that the chief factor in this difference has been the widespread use of a better diet and health routine based upon actual knowledge of the child's physical needs.

It is not altogether fantastic, therefore, to suppose that the dissemination of knowledge of the newer ways of dealing with the behavior of children may have already brought results.

Modern children may well seem more intelligent because they have been guided to a more effective use of their natural abilities.

For the fullest development of native endowment, two things are necessary.

First, opportunity for growth in the form of a variety of experience; second, a personality unhampered by crippling emotional responses.

A child whose being is frequently convulsed with rage or jealousy, who is chronically irritable and peevish is surely unable to use to its fullest capacity the intelligence with which he has been endowed.

Certainly if there is anything in the observation that the children of today are more intelligent than the children of the past, the difference may be ascribed to the fact that mothers have become more appreciative of the mental and emotional needs of childhood.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood.—Use of the word "movie" in speech and in writing to describe motion pictures persists, notwithstanding the new and more descriptive "talkie."

NORMA TALMADGE

Those in the busines prefer "industry" or "profession," but the great mass—fans—like and probably always will continue to use "movie."

Fearing that "movie" was not dignified enough for their growing business, producers in 1910 started a serious effort to have another name coined.

When and where the term started is not known, but in 1909 "movie" got wide circulation in newspaper comic strips. In another year it was on its way toward Nation-wide usage.

The old Essanay company was the first to take up the campaign (probably for the advertising it would get, according to an authority, Terry Ramsaye) by offering a grand prize of $25 for a new name for motion pictures.

The winner of the contest coined "photoplay," but, like dozens of others suggested from time to time, it didn't stick.

Odd Words Tried.

In the experimental stages of pictures a series of odd words and terms, beginning with cinematograph and kinetoscope to nickelodeon, nickelette, nickelshow and theatorium were tried and discarded.

Essanay's "photoplay" didn't settle the matter of a name. The Vitagraph company for a long time was proud of its phrase "Vitagraph life portrayals,' while another firm toyed with "life motion pictures."

Norma's Start.

Going back into movie history, Norma Talmadge's attention was drawn to the movies in 1911, when she posed for the steroptican slides to accompany a popular song.

With her sisters, Natalie and Constance, she often gave shows in the Talmadge parlor in Brooklyn, and a chance visitor sugegsted Norma had screen possibilities.

Norma bravely went to a studio in New York, where she was told she would be called when she was needed. Meanwhile she was invited to look over the lot.

The first person young Norma spied was Florence Turner, her favorite. She rushed onto the set and into the screen to say hello to the star.

The "take" was spoiled and the first scene Miss Talmadge appeared in never got on the screen.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

FIGHTING PNEUMONIA.

IT seems probable that we are making some headway against the pneumonias.

Comparison of the mortality rates of the acute respiratory diseases prevailing now with those that prevailed during the last years of the preceding century show a definite improvement, though a smaller one than in the case of abdominal disorders. From time to time favorable reports come from laboratories and hospitals in which new remedies are being tried. A recent report bringing inspiring information was that of Drs. Cecil and Plummer. It related a very large experience with the use of the concetrated Felton serum in the treatment of type I pneumonias. Drs. Cecil and Plummer estimate that there are about 480,000 cases of pneumonia yearly in the United States, and that about 120,000 of these die. About two-thirds of these, or about 360,000, are cases of lobar pneumonia, the others being bronchial pneumonia, terminal pneumonia, and other miscellaneous pneumonias. Of these 360,000 about 96,000 are type I pneumonias.

They hold that type I pneumonia is as much a separate disease as is paratyphoid separate from type. Of these 96,000 about 24,000 die annually. A general use of the Felton concentrated serum, he estimates, should reduce this number of deaths to 12,000, and that would be well worth while.

When a diagnosis of pneumonia has been made the Sabin test will decide within four hours whether it is of the type I variety. If it is, an eye test should be made to prove that the sufferer is not sensitive to serum. This will not waste more than 30 minutes. If the Sabin test is positive and the eye test is negative, the use of Felton concentrated serum should be begun without delay. This serum is safe and causes no chills nor other unpleasant after effects.

Physicians know how to make the Sabin test and the eye test as well as the clinical diagnosis of lobar pneumonia, but the laws of probability are such as to justify the use of the serum at times when no tests are possible.

Type I lobar pneumonia is so infrequent in children under 3 that the serum finds no field in that group. The contrary is true of people between 3 and 40 years of age. Type I pneumonia is the common form of lobar pneumonia among them. In older people most of the pneumonias are of other types. Therefore, with them, it is wise to await a Sabin test.

NEEDS PEACE OF MIND.

L. H. C. writes: What is the cause of a 12-year-old boy's restlessness at night? He goes to sleep quickly and rests well for about an hour, but the rest of the night he is not quiet at all and in the morning he says he is tired. He isn't aware of the fact that he isn't quiet through the night. He is the nervous type, but otherwise well.

REPLY.

The cause is excitement. Have the boy eat a light supper. After that, stay quietly in the house reading, studying, playing backgammon or working puzzles. Have him go to a comfortable bed, in a comfortable room, at a regular hour.

Peace of mind carries with it a capacity for sleeping. The opposite holds also.

LOOS, ESPINOSA TIE FOR LEAD IN LOS ANGELES OPEN

Grid's Future Is Pondered By Big Six

Director Says a Cut in Coaches' Wages May Come.

Smaller Road Squads Seen; Missouri Marks Time.

By CHARLES GRUMICH.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A new undertone of uncertainty in the foot ball tutoring profession looms in the wake of the 1930 season of "depressed" gate receipts. From one source comes a hint that the coaches may have to take a wage cut.

E. C. Gallagher, athletic director of Oklahoma A. & M. College, says that if drastic retrenchment results from any reduced "take" at the stadium, coaches' salaries should bear part of the burden. This was offered despite the announcement the Aggies had a "banner" year in foot ball.

Caution enters the situation elsewhere. The University of Missouri is not expanding its present coaching staff. "We are just marking time to see what business conditions are going to be says C. L. Brewer, Missouri athletic director.

Only Ordinary Games Suffer.

One critic, who prefers anonymity, points to an impasse adding to the troubles that harass the lives of coaches. He asserts only ordinary, unattractive contests will suffer from defection of the cash customers.

"People have the money but are a little more particular as to how they spend it, he declares. "Coaches are pressed to turn out better teams."

Then they meet trouble if they overstep the code which bans recruiting, and must make teams out of voluntary applicants, not subsidized.

Whatever the cause, one Big Six Conference coach, Noel Workman, of Iowa State College, resigned after his team's sixteenth successive loss on the gridiron. In the second disastrous season, Iowa State's football receipts dwindled about 25 per cent, probably the greatest decline in the Big Six.

The ending of Workman's regime after five years was not linked in public announcements with the sports business depression or with the perennial laments of the "wolves," those ardent alumni and other partisans who howl dissatisfaction in the lean years.

One School Fails to Blame Coach.

One Big Six school which met reverses on the gridiron as well as in the box office countered the expected attack of the "wolves" with a campaign emphasizing that extraordinary playing talent was scare and that the coach's teaching ability had not become impotent. Apparently the viewers with alarm were placated.

Besides the strict surveillance to prevent subsidizing and recruiting by desperate chances, another problem confronts the profession.

Smaller squads must do what larger armies did formerly in games away from the home grounds under the economy plan calling for few men on trips, ordered by the bursars in their advice that coaches must "play them close to the ribs" until the financial end of the sport picks up.

Nice Chase Feature Won by Ginger Ale

Nice, France, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Ginger Ale, owned by Baron Edouard de Rothschild, today won the Grand Prix de Monte Carlo, a steeplechase handicap of 2 miles and a quarter. Dictateur was second and Baoule third. The winner, a 4-year-old by La Farina out of Sweet Gin, won by a length and paid 6 to 1 in the mutuels.

There were twelve starters and racing conditions were ideal. The race carried a purse of $6,000.

Marlboro Soccerists Win, 4-1, in Tourney Semifinal

D. C. Kickers Defeated Before Crowd of 1,000 at Silver Spring in Play for The Post Trophy; Goalies Star.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

THE Marlboro Soccer Club won its way to the finals in the Washington and Southeastern District cup tourney yesterday when it defeated the strong D. C. Kicker eleven in a fast game, 4 to 1. The score is not indicative of the heetic battle put up by the two clubs before a throng of 1,000 rooters in the Silver Spring Field. The winners led at half-time, 2 to 0. They scored their first goal three minutes after the opening whistle and their second within two minutes of half-time, giving the fans 38 minutes of scoreless soccer in the first 45 minutes of play.

Despite the two markers chalked up by the Prince Georges County kickers in the opening period it was the consensus of opinion that the German booters outplayed the ultimate winners in the opening period. Immediately after the Marylanders' initial goal, the Kickers launched attack after attack that kept the Marlboro backs on their toes constantly.

Binger Stars in Goal.

Louis and Randolph Mitchell, Frank Wyvill and Deck were towers of strength on the Marlboro attack but it is doubtful if the Marylanders would have gained such a decisive victory had it not been for the excellent work of Binger in goal. This worthy saved from every conceivable angle with the calmness that would have done credit to a veteran.

The victors' first goal resulted from a miscue of the outstanding D. C. Kicker. Sorg, of the latter club, blocked a shot from the toe of Bowie with his hand in the penalty area and R. Mitchell converted the resulting penalty kick into a goal. From that moment on Sorg performed in a most admirable manner and it was due to him, to a large extent, that the Marlboro kickers were kept on the defense for the greater part of the first half.

"Sorg, Bennerts and Benedickt peppered the Marlboro upright with lusty boots but the ever ready Binger, materially aided by R Mitchell and Buck, staved off the efforts of the attackers. Once the Kickers gave their supporters a real thrill when the leather shot under the Marlboro crosspiece but an overanxious German had propelled the sphere into the goal with his hand and the score was not recorded.

Marlboro Club Attacks.

Rallying from the fierce attack of the Kickers just before the close of the period, Marlboro carried the game to the German goal. Here, Bowie made a nice try for a score and while it may have carried through without aid, Louis Mitchell took no chances as he gave the ball a little more impetus with a clever head shot.

At the start of the second half it appeared that the German booters had slowed considerably and Marlboro was quick to take advantage of the fatigued German forwards. The echo of the restarting whistle had hardly died when Frank Wyvill crashed a terrific boot passed Hearth for the third goal of the day.

Shortly after this he Kickers scored their only goal. Hearth had moved from his position at goal in favor of Al Ulirich and taken a position on the forward line. It was largely due to the clever passing of Herath, in his new place, that the Kickers marked up their only tally. He passed with a neat shot to Benedickt in the late minutes of the game and the latter converted the boot into a goal.

Marlboro gained its final goal in the final five minutes of play. Deck socred from a scramble to safely salt away one of the hardest fought games of the season. By virtue of its victory Marlboro won the right to meet Washington-Concords on Sunday January 25, in the finals for the city title and The Washington Post Cup.

Ingram Lost To Navy as Coach

Action Is Surprise to Officials at Naval Academy.

weeks ago Ingram, in denying that he was negotiating for the post of football coach at the University of California, declared that he had "no idea of not returning to Navy."

Ingram, former gridiron and rowing star for Navy, and later William and Mary College and University of Indiana football mentor, has been coach at the academy since 1926.

The reports that he was negotiating for "Niba" Price's job at California followed others that he and the Navy athletic authorities had disagreed over the terms of his contract. During last year's spotty season Ingram was under a one-year contract. He asked for a three-year contract, friends said, and the Navy offered him one of two years.

Ingram is one of three brothers who have made athletic history at the academy. When he became coach in 1926, and turned out an undefeated eleven, his brother, Commander Jonas H. Ingram, was director of athletics. Another brother, Homer, died a year after graduation. "Navy Bill" resigned from the service in 1922.

Majors Won't Accept Coast's Draft Offer

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—E. S. Barnard, president of the American League, today said there was little chance of acceptance by the majors of the universal draft reservations voted by the Pacific Coast League yesterday.

The first two reservations, in which the Coast League asked that no player be selected for draft from a Class AA club until he has been in a league of that classification for two seasons, regardless of how much time he has spent in any other national association club, provided his contract was not assigned from a major league; and if a player is signed by a Class AA or Class A club without previous professional experience on or after August 1 it is to be understood his services during the balance of the year shall not be considered one season or service, will not receive consideration from the majors, Barnard said.

The other reservations were covered in the major draft proposal and are incidental.

$10,000 Mexican Race Is Won by Coe's Caruso

Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Caruso, running in the colors of W. R. Coe, Kentucky sportsman, scored a sensational victory in the California Handicap, the $10,000 added stake which headlined the racing program here today, beating out Up by a half-length. Third place fell to Nellie Custis. The time for the mile and a sixteenth over the slow track was 1:49.40.

Caruso, Up and Nellie Cust's waged a desperate battle down the back stretch, with the former going into a whisker lead in the last few strides and stretching it slightly at the wire.

JIMMY M'LARNIN, the "Dublin Dynamiter," has run roughshod over an imposing list of clever boxers, and at the age of 24 has probably fought and defeated more champs than any other man. Although victorious in his fights with champions, McLarnin never gained a title because the fights were not championship bouts. Among those beaten by McLarnin were Al Singer, Villa, Jackie Fields, Mandell, Young Jack Thompson, LaBarba and Kaplan.

The term "cloudburst" came into use years ago when torrential downpours of rain were not clearly understood. "Cloudbursts" are due to violent uprushes of air at the start of a thunderstorm, carrying the drops up instead of letting them fall. Then when they do fall, a great quantity of water comes down at once. Scientists compute that if a large thundercloud several miles in density did "fall" to the ground, the resultant rainfall would be less intense than an ordinary "cloudburst!"

By BRIAN BELL.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Two veteran golf campaigners, with swings very much alike, traveled different roads today to finish the second round of the Los Angeles $10,000 open in a tie for first place. Thin-faced Eddie Loos and plump Al Espinosa, Chicago pros, had 36-hole totals of 139.

The slight Loos went his untroubled way over the Wilshire Country Club course, compiling a score of 70, even par, and with his 69, of yesterday, held the lead for a couple of hours until the enthusiastic Al, frequently in trouble but sensational in his recoveries, turned in an amazing 67. As Espinosa had a good 72 in the first round a deadlock resulted.

Leo Diegel, of Agua Caliente, Galloping groat of the game, for the second time in two days matched old man par, step for step, and his 140 total established him in third place, a stroke ahead of Frank Walsh, Chicago, who added a great 69 to his 72 of Saturday.

Cox and Wood in Running.

Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, and his New Jersey neighbor, Craig Wood, followed in a tie with a two-day score of 143.

A group of stars with 36 hole totals of 144 remained close enough to furnish threats in the final 36 holes to be played tomorrow. These players included Tony Manero, New York, Harry Cooper, Chicago, Walter Hagen and Tommy Armour, Detroit, and Roland Mackenzie, Washington amateur.

Hagen and Mackenzie finished brilliantly to get into the select class. With a typical Hagen gesture, Walter gave the great crowd massed about the home green a big thrill, when he sent his second shot at the 18th, eight inches from the cup and holed the little putt for a birdie. Mackenzie, who has played great golf in this tournament, holed a long putt for his birdie.

Armour was a consistant performer, matching his 72 of yesterday. Manero slumped from an opening 69 to a fair 75, while Cooper slipped from 71 to 73.

Sarazen's Score Mounts.

Macdonald Smith struck a Smithian stride and turned in a score of 71 after 75 yesterday. Gene Sarazen, after starting with 71, took too many fives and wound up with 73. George Von Elm struggled manfully and finally put together a 77 after a brilliant 69 yesterday. Jack Forrester's game fell to pieces with an 81 marring his opening 69.

Espinosa for a time seemed threatened with disqualification, a rumor spreading about the course that Al absentmindedly had taken a practice putt on the tenth green yesterday before getting his putt down for his par three.

The matter actually reached the committee, but Gene Sarazen, who played with Al, said the Chicago pro had holed out before he took the practice putt, and with his explanation before them the officials exonerated Espinosa of any unintentional wrongdoing.

For the final 36 holes tomorrow the 51 players who scored 153 or better for the first two days' play will continue to the bitter end.

Loos' Play Subject of Gallery.

The play of Loos today furnished the talk of the course for the early afternoon, and Espinosa's performance was the chief topic of commentation at the close of the day.

Loos is one of the great army of golf pros who has concentrated his attention on teaching rather than playing and has engaged in comparatively little competitive golf.

However, he shot the 6,280-yard lakeshore course in Chicago in 62 and has had many rounds in the 60s. Today he played perfect golf, never taking three putts and occasionally getting down in one. His putts for the round totaled 32.

Espinosa was a bit wabbly getting to the green at several holes, but once on, his indecision vanished and he baged his putts up to and in the hole from extraordinary distances.

"Fore" Not Necessary, Rules Pittsburgh Judge

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Of course, the golfer who's a stickler for the rules will shout "fore" before he swats the ball. But Judge Joseph M. Swearing ruled today he can't be held liable if he forgets that little matter and the ball hits some one.

Leon H. Benjamin spoiled a gradn iron shot for Maurice A. Nernberg, Pittsburgh lawyer, by getting in the way of the ball. Nernberg, intent on getting the right stance, forgot to sound the traditional golf equivalent for "Look out below!" or "Stop, look, listen!" A jury awarded Benjamin $1,000 for injuries.

Judge Swearing decided there was nothing in law to compel Nernberg to broadcast an alarm and reversed the jury.

Apparently it's just an old Scottish custom.

EAGLES BEAT RICHMOND QUINTET

Rotary Club Victim, 45-35; Sweeney, Bennie Star.

THE Rotary five of Richmond, Va., formerly the Richmond Blues, lived up to advance notices yesterday afternoon in their clash with Skinker Bros. Eagles in the Silver Spring Armory before 500 persons, and gave the District team all sorts of trouble before bowing, 45 to 35. The triumph was the third consecutive one of the season for the Skinkers over strong road clubs.

A small Virginia lead was erased by the Eagles at the start of the second period, and the Washingtonians, aided materially by the sharpshooting of Sweeney and Bennie, ran up a 25-to-18 margin at the intermission. The second half was a repetition of the first, with the visitors gamely attempting to overhaul the fast-traveling Skinkers, but never quite succeeding.

Joe Sweeney and Ralph Bennie were the heroes of the victory, the former caging eight double-deckers and two fouls and the latter six field goals and a pair of charity tosses. Proctor, with a quartet of two-pointers, was the outstanding star of the Richmond outfit.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 11.—Washington's All-Stars had little trouble in disposing of the Baltimore Racquet Club team here this afternoon in a Winter Tennis League match, winning, 7 to 2. The Capital Cityans won five of the six singles and two of the three doubles matches.

Shore and the two Yeomans won their singles matches in straight sets, with Buchanan being the only District victor to be extended. He drew Skrentny as an opponent and after winning the first set, lost the second at deuce. He came back strongly in the third, however, flashing his best game to run out at 6-love.

S. Yeomans-Buchanan Lose in Upset.

The lone Baltimore singles triumph was credited to Hogan, who had a slight edge over Colin Stam. Latona won his match by default.

Skrentny, with Brockman as his partner, gave the home team its lone doubles victory. This pair dropped the first set to E. Yeomans and Buchanan but then rallied and upset the dope by taking the next two sets, 6—3 and 6—4.

15-Year-Old Golfer Wins at 40th at Miami

Miami, Fla., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A 15-year-old school boy from Chicago shipped his way to a 40-hole victory over a veteran of the links today as Win Day won the championship of the Miami midwinter tournament from Lee Chase, former New YoYrk State and Florida amateur champion.

The youngster stroked his way to victory in a repetition of the spectacular golf that marked his advance from the opening match play to the finals. He won the scheduled 36-hole match at the fourth extra hole.

After a morning of tough golfing, hampered by a high wind over the Miami Country Club course, Chase and Day settled down for an afternoon of spectacular shooting.

Day went to the 31st green to ship his way into the hole from beyond the award. On the 33d, he repeated the feat to oversome a one-up lead and stand even with his elder opponent.

Chase won the 34th, but missed a 3-foot putt on the 36th and the match was even. They halved the 36th with fives and repeated on the 37th.

Both golfers got down to work and scored birdie threes on the 38th. They halved the 39th. Chase faltered when he missed a 3-foot putt on the 40th and took a five to the youngster's four to end the match.

Nats Third in Games Won In Late Innings; Macks First

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

BASEBALL and horse racing are much alike in some respects—they don't pay off until the finish is reached and there is no premium for the early pace-setters. If these rules had not obtained last season, then the Athletics would not now be the world's champions, for they seemed to have the habit in 1930 of allowing the opposing team to think for six innings, at least, that it was going to win, and then of suddenly rallying to pack away the verdict.

Thirteen times they won battles in the seventh, while losing but four; they broke even in fourteen games won or lost in the eighth; they won thirteen of eighteen that were decided in the ninth, while they triumphed in six of the seven overtime contests in which they figured. These doings gave them an average of .696 for victories in games that were decided after the sixth round.

The Cleveland Indians were second in this respect, with the Nationals third. The Washington Club had the edge in victories in all late-inning decisions except the ninth. In the "lucky" frame, the Nats beat opponents eight times and were beaten by them on five occasions, while they won ten of their nineteen games which were decided in the eighth and six of their eleven extra-inning fracases. In ninth-inning uprisings, the Johnsons triumphed five times but were the victims on half a dozen other occasions.

Despite their punch, the New York Yankees had the misfortune of fading away more times than any entrant in the league except the Red Sox. They lost eleven out of fourten decided in the ninth, although having a one-game edge on those decided in the seventh, eighth and extra innings.

The figures, given above, show that while the "lucky" inning was only lucky for the winners, many more games actually were decided in that frame than in any of the other late rounds.

Dempsey Rates Stribling Best of Heavies; Predicts Schmeling's Defeat If They Clash

Sees Berg as Savior of Game; Frowns on 2 Champions.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Jack Dempsey ranks W. L. (Young) Stribling at the head of the heavyweight division and predicts today in his annual ranking of the world's fistic stars for the Ring, boxing magazine, that the pride of Georgia will whip Max Schmeling if and when they duel for the world's championship.

Furthermore, the former king of them all solemnly asserts that if he were to make another comeback, a thing he says he is certain not to do, the only heavyweight he feels sure he could knock out is Jack Sharkey, the Boston battler, who fouled Schmeling in a title go last summer. Dempsey stopped Sharkey once before.

Sharkey is ranked as the outstanding contender by the New York State Athletic Commission that recently vacated Der Maxie's title because of the latter's failure to sign immediately for another bout with the sailor man. Stribling and Schmeling are due to meet somewhere in the Midwest in June.

Idleness Has Hurt Sharkey.

"While Sharkey remained idle, awaiting the chance for another crack at Schmeling, Stribling has engaged in many contests," Dempsey writes in The Ring. "In the past year he has knocked out Phil Scott, Otto von Porat and beaten Tuffy Griffiths. He, in my opinion, is the hope of America.

"To him, I think, we must look to regain American supremacy in the heavyweight ranks, for it is my opinion that if Sharkey has ten more opportunities to win the crown, he will fall short of the mark. Were I to attempt a comeback, which I am certain I will not, as poor as I might be, there is one heavyweight I am sure I can knock out—none other than Jack Sharkey."

In refusing to rank two champions first in their divisions—Schmeling among the heavyweights and Tommy Freeman in the welterweight class—Dempsey said he was tempted also to "pass up" two others. He thought little of Mickey Walker's qualifications as middleweight ruler, although he recognized the Rumson bulldog as a "good, hard hitting, game fighter." He hesitated in rating Tony Canzoneri, champion of the lightweights, with Jack (Kid) Berg, the British star.

Berg Boxing's Hero of 1930.

"Berg," he said, "contributed the greatest achievement of the year. To him goes credit for bringing boxing back at a time when foul cries and discontent had all but caused a repeal of the sport.

All Hands Marking Time In Heavy Ring Wrangle

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—All was serene and peaceful along the fistic rialto today as managers and promoters, seeking to clear up the muddled heavyweight situation, took a day off from the endless succession of conferences.

"Pa" Stribling, father-manager of W. L. (Young) Stribling, the "Pride of Macon," expected to resume negotiations with promoters for the Hearst milk fund tomorrow.

These dickerings, barring an unexpected hitch, probably will lead to the signing of Stribling for a title match with Max Schmeling either at Detroit or Cleveland this June.

Former Titleholder Believes He Can Beat Sharkey.

"With his two busy fists, this young Englishman, unheralded, a foreigner with plenty of dash and fighting ability, took the fans by storm in a series of battles that made them forget the fouls that had dragged the sport into the mire and today he stands out as one of the leading figures of pugilism.

"His sterling battle against Kid Chocolate turned the tide. He took the measure of Canzoneri at his best, knocked out the junior welterweight champion, Mushy Callahan, and whipped Billy Petrolle, who a short time later gave Jimmy McClarnin the worst trimming he ever got. Berg must be ranked in a class by himself."

Dempsey named the champion, Maxie Rosenbloom, as the outstanding light heavyweight, although he considers the division weak. He groups Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo and Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro, in the second section.

Says Walker Should Risk Title.

After insisting Mickey Walker should stay within the middleweight division and defend his title against either Dave Shade or Len Harvey, Dempsey rates Young Corbett of Fresno, Calif., the best of the welterweights with the champion, Tommy Freeman, second. Jimmy McLarnin, defeat by Petrolle cost him coleadership of the division, Dempsey said.

Panama Al Brown, bantamweight champion, heads his class, with Newsboy Brown, Joe Scalfaro, Pete Sanston and Archie Bell close behind. Midget Wolgast is the best of the flyweights, with Frankie Genaro, a close second, but neither, in Dempsey's opinion, rates with the stars of the past.

"The year 1930 was a most unusual one in boxing, owing to the general business depression and the foul epidemic, both of which played havoc with the boxing game," Dempsey writes. "Then again it must be admitted that the caliber of fighters is not the equal of the period when I was in my prime and this also had its effect on the game receipts. Yet boxing stood up admirably despite these severe handicaps and as we enter a new year we find the prospects bright for a quick revival."

CAPITAL GOLFERS WELCOME TRIALS FOR AMATEUR

Hand-Picked Field Long Protested

Sectional Qualifying Seen as Boon to Tournament.

Stevinson and Shorey Praise Move; Both to Seek Places.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE announcement by the United States Golf Association, published in The Post yesterday morning, that hereafter competitors in the national amateur championship would be selected through sectional qualifying rounds, created an intense interest in all of the local golf clubs yesterday.

It will be remembered that when the last national amateur event was staged at Merion last September the list of eligibles did not include a single representative of this section. It was felt that this discrimination against District golfers was unfair and after considerable pressure had been exerted, Miller B. Stevinson, of the Columbia Country Club, was allowed to compete. It is true that in company with numerous others he failed to qualify for match play but the fact that this entire section was ignored in the eligibility list created a feeling of antagonism toward the national governing body.

Methods Protested for Years.

For many years there has been a persistent protest against the methods employed by the United States Golf Association in naming the players for amateur championship competition. Golfers who desired to enter the event sent in their names but their selection was in large measure a matter of personal influence with the self-appointed committee which handled the list of entrants. Consequently the field was a hand-picked affair and being thus limited to a fortunate few, the championship, instead of being a genuine affair, like the British amateur, in which every golfer of low handicap has a chance to win, was a contest between those who were lucky enough to have their names placed in the list.

The fact that in the future competition in the national amateur will be between players who, by their superior skill or good fortune, secure a place in the eligible list was a matter of universal approval among local golfers yesterday. Stevinson, the lone Washington representative in the national amateur last year, said yesterday that he would undoubtedly compete in one of the proposed sectional qualification rounds.

Stevinson Welcomes Change.

"I am glad that the change has been made," he said. "I will endeavor to qualify but if I fail it will be because some one plays better golf than I do and there will be no one to blame but myself. The United States Golf Association has done wisely in eliminating all suspicion of favoritism and personal influence and making selection depend upon skill. This system has proven sucessful in making up the field for the national open and it does away with all possible criticism. In this section we will be handicapped, undoubtedly, by the fact that as only 150 golfers are to be allowed to qualify, our quota will not be above two or three but, after

Lionel and Corinthian Clubs Will Combine

In an endeavor to keep intact that which the late Walter Newman worked hard to build, the Lionel Athletic Club has invited Corinthian Athletic Club members, left pilotless with Newman's demise last fall, to form a merger of the two organizations.

A meeting for this purpose will be held next Friday night at the Immaculate Conception Hall, Eighth and N streets northwest, starting at 8 o'clock.

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—Fair Grounds Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Avondale Purse of $1,200 at a mile and sixteenth features the card at the Fair Grounds today. EIL WEIR should make it four in a row. He won his last three races galloping. In his last, it was Patricia Marian, and before that Grecian Beauty that was the victim. Before that he beat Celtic Prince in the same way.

EIL WEIR does not require any particular track or track conditions. He wins at this, also the Jefferson Park track, and this being a purse race, he is not taxed with any weight increase, but goes with only 107 pounds. GRECIAN BEAUTY was second to the Brant colt in her last start, and previous to that she beat KADIAK, and this line should make her the contender, but she was four lengths behind EIL WEIR. KADIAK, a very consistent horse, and three times winner this winter, seems best of the others. Nine are to start, and STORM may figure in the event. BIDE A WEE also is not to be entirely overlooked.

FIRST RACE—Maiden 2-year-olds at 3 furlongs, opens the card with a large field contesting. WATAUGA did not do so well last out, finishing unplaced in the race won by Flo M., but the first time out she was third to Dolly's Baby, and on form, is the best of this field. She has always been well supported and is well bred Her best race was second to Cloirado. ROJO did not show much in a previous trial, but may improve. ADELAIDE M. was backed last out and may get in the picture.

SECOND RACE — Three-year-old fillies make up the field in the second race, at 6 furlongs. FALMOUTH BELLE seems consistent and is selected to win. She was third to Zaila in her last start. LITTLE PAN'S last race was good, she being third to Bunama, and may get the place here. DELCO DEL has rested up since the Fair Grounds meeting and is tabbed for third money. WIGROSE, on some races, is really best of all, but her ifi and out running makes her chances slim.

THIRD RACE—A good field goes in the third, the Golden Rod Purse. TADDYWAWA is easily best. She was third to Voltear her last start, and the strongest opposition she will meet is GOLDEN PRINCE, and he seems to be falling back in his racing. RAIN OR SHINE has a chance and should be no worse than third. He is best on a slow track. He was fourth in a good field his last start. GOLDEN PRINCE was beaten last out by Pegg's Pride. GENUINE ran well the other day and is fast when in form at 6 furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—MY HOBBY is selected in the fifth event. He won his last two races. Nicholson was his most recent victim, but he has not started at this track. He has the class and, if he is at his best, should win. ORMONBIRD may like the distance of a mile and a sixteenth better and is dangerous. NOGODALE, third last out, should figure in the race, and EAGER PLAY has an outside money chance.

SIXTH RACE—ONE CENT looks much the best in the sixth, gallop of a mile and a furlong. In his last race he was second to Aviator, which showing should make him favorite here. LUKE JR., which ran well at the other New Orleans track, winning one race, and fourth in his last start, should be the contender and might get in front. MISS PEGGY is rated next best on her recent race behind Poison Ivy and Blue John. VOLE on some races would have a chance, but not in recent efforts.

SEVENTH RACE—Three-year-olds go a mile in the seventh, a claiming race. This is a large and well-balanced field. ENGLEWOOD is selected to win. He was out of the money in his last start, third to Nervator before that, and on Christmas Eve beat a large field of fair platers, then 2-year-olds, at a mile and 70 yards. He seems to be a route horse and should find the distance in this race to his advantage. GERTRUDE READE, an impressive winner at Jefferson Park, may be the contender. She beat the crack Nervator in her last start, but that was 6 furlongs. SURPASS won the other day from Bully, William J., and others at a mile, and has a good chance to get third money in this outing.

SCHOLASTIC FANS DUE THRILLS

Four Stirring Games Promised in Title Series This Week.

OFF to a stirring start, the annual high school basket ball series hits its full stride this week with four games to be split between tomorrow and Friday afternoons.

Eastern, that odd assortment of giant and pigmie players, will be seen in action tomorrow against Coach Cliff Moore's fast Western High School team. Eastern, preseason dark horses, became hot favorites to cop the title by reason of the defeat of Tech, defending champions, last Friday.

Tomorrow's sencond game will be between Central and Tech, and brings together the two clubs which have been strong rivals almost since the start of the interhigh court games. Central will be making its first appearance in the circuit, and seems to have picked a tartar as initial opponent. Tech still rules favorite among many followers of local scholastic basket ball. They contend that 1931's is a repetition of 1930's series, when Tech lost its first game to Business, and yet came back to win out by a comfortable margin.

Central comes right back Friday with a tussle scheduled to be played against Coach Lynn Woodworth's crack young Business High team.

Tech is the other team concerned Friday, meeting Western in what promises to produce a more than average amount of fast play.

"I Hope You Do Not Abandon the Attack"

Says

DR. J. C. ELDRIDGE

Health Director, Hamilton County, Tennessee

...one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

CO-OPERATING WITH THE STATE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH
CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE

American Cigar Company,

New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

"Spit" is a filthy word. So is the practice of spitting. More serious than any consideration of nicety, however, is the very grave danger of contamination carried in the mouth secretions.

Your attack on this evil in connection with your recent cigar advertising is an effective stroke which should do much to awaken the public to this peril.

I hope you do not abandon the attack. If my endorsement is of any value, please feel free to publish it in your campaign.

Sincerely yours,
J. C. Eldridge
HAMILTON COUNTY HEALTH DIRECTOR.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Eldridge's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Eldridge writes: "Your attack on this evil in connection with your recent cigar advertising is an effective stro

Special to The Washington Post.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Jan. 11.—Despite the fact that they outscored their opponents by two baskets from the field, the Census Enumerators, of Washington, D. C., were worsted at the hands of the Knights of Columbus quintet here this afternoon, 31 to 26.

Four fouls played a prominent part in what was described by many fans as the finest court battle they have seen here this season. The Casey five was given the opportunity for eleven charity tosses and sank nine of them, while the visitors were missing all three of their awarded free throws.

Big Jim Birthright, stalwart Census center, was the individual star of the battle, scoring six two-pointers in the first half. In the second, however, Jim was thrown to the floor, injuring his knee, during a hot scrimmage and was unable to aid his mates thereafter.

The Washington quint led at half time, 20 to 16, with 500 fans cheering for them against the locals. The third period ended 24-all, and the Caseys, on Stakem's two long tosses, coupled with five free shots, pushed ahead in the final three minutes to win.

Another Clean Slate Hope of Va. Tankmen

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 11.—Virginia's varsity and first-year swimming teams are having daily drills in the Memorial Gymnasium under the direction of Gordon Peyton, former tank captain, who has been coach of swimming for two years.

Last season the Cavalier natators were not defeated in the South. This winter the varsity tank squad, of which Fred Hatch is captain, hopes to keep its slate clean again against all Dixie foes.

Because not many colleges in this section are equipped with regulation tanks, the Virginians are having some difficulty arranging a schedule. Washington and Lee, William and Mary and Duke are the only teams so far listed. The first-year swimmers have engagements with the two Virginia schools and with Staunton Military Academy, Augusta Military Academy and Central High of Washington. Other varsity matches are to be added to the tank card.

Hopilites Win, 46 to 13, Over Laurel Tossers

Special to The Washington Post.

Laurel, Md., Jan. 11.—Laurel Independents bowed to the Ellicott City Hopilites, 46 to 13, in their first Intercity League game played here this afternoon on the Armory floor before 300 persons. Another Laurel team, the Cards, met with better success and defeated the Olympia A. C., of Baltimore, 23 to 17, in a non-league preliminary attraction.

Two Washington quintets will play here tomorrow night, when the Western Electrics take on the Hopilites in a league game and the DeMolays tangle with the Laurel Cuards. The main game will start at 8:30 p. m., and the preliminary an hour earlier.

all, it will be a matter of the best players winning. I am willing to take my chances against the field."

John C. Shorey, of the Bannockburn Club, who applied last year for entry in the natonal amateur tournament and who was rejected, said last night that he would undoubtedly enter for competition in the sectional qualifying round.

Shorey Sees Chance for Everyone.

"The action of the United States Golf Associatoin," he said, "is absolutely great. It gives all of us, and especially those who have no influence with the ruling body, a chance to play in the national amateur. Of course, we have to make good in the qualification and this will be a severe test, but at least we will not have our applications turned down in an arbitrary manner. I will certainly play and will do my best to qualify."

Even with an eligibility restriction of a handicap of 4, there are a large number of local golfers who will endeavor to qualify. Dr. L. S. O'Tell, one of the leading players in the Indian Spring Golf Club, said yesterday that he heartily indorsed the new move and would be glad to compete, even if his name were not at the head of the list, in order to show his approval.

"This action ought to have been taken long ago," was the terse comment of Fred McLeod, the professional at the Columbia Country Club.

GRID FINALE IS WON BY PALACE

D. G. S. Eleven Beats Press Cards, 12-6, on Long Drive.

A SUSTAINED 56-yard drive in the last period, which culminated when Schriver shot off-tackle for 4 yards and a touchdown, enabled Palace-District Grocery Stores to close its football season with a hard-won 12-to-6 victory over the National Press Club Cardinals yesterday afternoon on the Seat Pleasant gridiron before 300 fans.

Billy Reagan scored the first Palace 6-pointer in the second quarter on a 3-yard-line buck. Joe Buscher, Cardinal half back, featured the contest by returning an intercepted pass 62 yards in the third period for the only touchdown made by his team.

The fine defensive work of Bob Pifer, 116-pound Press Club end, and the ball-carrying of Billy Reagan, Palace-D. G. S. quarter, stood out.

ALLEY-CLOSING BILL IS IN READINESS FOR ACTION OF CONGRESS

National Capital Park and Planning Commission Finishes Measure.

REPORT ON SITUATION IS RELEASED BY GRANT

Sanitation and Housing Are Set Forth in Statement by Group's Expert.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will probably send to Congress this week the District alley-closing bill, Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, revealed coincident with releasing a supplementary annual report of the planning body for the last fiscal year.

The measure is similar to the document formerly forwarded to Capitol Hill, save that it gives the District Commissioners, rather than the President, the authority to select the alleys and eliminates the amount of money to be set aside for acquiring the property.

The supplementary report of the commission contains a discussion of the housing program for the District by John Ihlder, housing consultant, in which the problem of alley-dwellers is thoroughly treated. There are in Washington today more than 250 inhabited alleys, in which there are approximately 2,400 dwellings containing a population estimated at from 11,000 to 13,000 persons, the report states.

Are Sizable Communities.

"Some of these alleys are communities of such size that they would be considered villages if they had a rural environment, "Mr. Ihlder states. "Navy Place, for example, contains 70 houses; O'Briens Court, 40; Snows Court, 41; Cooksey Place, 53 and Dixons Court, 44. These inhabited alleys have been a recognized problem since the years immediately following the Civil War."

Discussing the alleys further, Mr. Ihlder says: "During the many decades Congress and the District government have been dealing with the inhabited alleys effort has been directed principally at curing certain obvious ills, such as unsanitary conditions.

"The results have been disappointing because these efforts did not reach the root cause, which is that alley dwellings are concealed. They constitute hidden communities in which disease, vice and crime flourish. It does not matter whether they breed criminals and persons diseased morally, mentally or physically, or whether they attract such persons. Probably they do both. The facts are that they contain an undue proportion of these human liabilities and that, because of being hidden communities, they increase the difficulty of dealing with these human liabilities constructively.

Have Inadequate Outlets.

"Moreover, they have no direct outlets, or have inadequate outlets; the alleys do not have thorough ventilation. The wider ones are like cups into which the summer suns pours and which hold the heat night and day."

The report, which is to be submitted to President Hoover today, urges a housing program for the District that will be in keeping with the proposed Federal building plan.

"If Washington is to represent us fairly among the great world capitals, if it is to have the appeal it should have to the pride and affection of our own people, it must provide dignified, spacious and comfortable living conditions for those whose work calls them here or whose inclination prompts them to become residents. The prestige and appeal of the Capital do not lie wholly in its governmental structures, but do lie largely in its dwellings. The latter cover by far the largest part of its area and in many ways make the strongest and most lasting impression."

The report declares that the two essentials of this housing program should be spaciousness and "the allocation of the privately owned territory in accordance with the need and the relationship of one kind of district to another."

Water Supply Sufficient.

William T. Partridge, consulting architect of the Park and Planning Commission, declares in a study of the development of the planning of Washington that the L'Enfant plan was probably original, despite charges of critics that ideas were borrowed from Versailles and London.

In a discussion of the regional water supply the supplementary report states that the supply at present is "reasonably adequate to meet demands within areas already provided with water mains and service. * * * Future demand will, of course, depend on growth of population and manufacture and upon changes in the consumption rate." There are plenty of available sources of additional water supply, however, the report pointed out, these being an increase from Great Falls, the Potomac River at Little Falls, development of reservoirs on branches of Patuxent River above Laurel, Seneca Creek, Occoquan Creek and development of smaller Virginia streams for local use.

As for the District, the present supply and equipment is said to be of sufficient size to supply its needs for many years in the future.

Search Ends; Clock Maker To Adopt Boy

A story that parallels Chajrles Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop" was brought to light here last night with the news that Edward Frischnecht, 73-year-old proprietor of a watch curiosity shop at 1730 G street northwest, is bringing to Washington for adoption a young man who worked for him a short while.

The lucky boy, Charles Ashley, 17 years old, of Birmingham, an orphan, answered an advertisement for a helpers that Mr. Frishnecht put in a local paper last November. The youth worked steadily for the old watch collector and importer until three weeks ago, when he told his employer that he wanted to return to Birmingham to resume his studies.

But during the course of his employment—two days before Christmas, to be exact—Ashley picked up a purse containing $50. Identification papers in it led Ashley to the owner, Mrs. Martha Shank, of 1802 G street northwest, just a block from the shop.

Mrs. Shank gave the boy a reward. The gesture of honesty on the part of the youth left an indelible impression on the owner of the watch shop.

As he worked over old watches and clocks from all parts of the world, Mr. Frischnecht thought about the young man, who had left him. He remembered that Ashley's father had died twelve years ago; that he had supported his mother until last year, when the mother died, and that he was virtually penniless when he came into the shop looking for work last November.

Although he had been assured by the youngster that he would be able to look after himself, the watchmaker was not satisfied. Finally, he decided to find the boy and so reassure himself.

This took some trouble, as Ashley had merely said that he was going to Birmingham. Mr. Frisschnecht hired a detective and avertised in Birmingham newspapers. Ashley was found in the Y. M. C. A. there. Mr. Frischnecht telegraphed him money and the boy is expected here in a day or so.

The old man in the curiosity shop in in the Dickens story adopted a little girl who used to come into his shop to see him and then to work for him. That occurred in the days before the distractions of a machine age. Cynics have declared that the things that happened in the stories of Charles Dickens could not happen today.

Condition of Poincare Held Slightly Better

Paris, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A slow improvement was reported today in the condition of Raymond Poincare, eminent French statesman, who has been seriously ill for some time.

His physician said the patient may be permitted to sit up for a few minutes each day beginning at the end of the week. It is expected that it will be some time, however, before he can be removed to southern France.

CHIEF OF CRUSADERS HITS HOME RAID BILL

Brands Howell Measure as Fanatical Legislation; Predicts Reaction.

"HYPOCRISY," HIS VIEW

Efforts to force passage of the Howell "home raid bill" were branded as "injustice and hypocrisy" in a statement yesterday by John F. Dryden, executive commander of the Washington Crusaders. Its passage could only result in a reaction hurtful even to conscientious prohibition in the various dry States, he said.

"The Attorney General of the United States has advised against this proposed act, realizing that imposition of such fanatical legislation upon a defenseless people will create a state of unrest. Surely the results of the November elections were a plain indication that the people are tiring of fanaticism. Will not the passage of this bill add further to the business and financial distress in the Capital of the Nation? This persecution by Congress of the defenseless people of the District surely can not be right just because they can not strike back," Mr. Dryden declared.

"The greatness of the English-speaking people has been founded upon the sacredness of the home and the knowledge that the humblest man's cottage was as free from invasion as the palace of the king. If, by its vote, the Senate yields to the underlying fanaticism of the Howell bill, they will have surrendered these last fundamental rights of the citizen—for the preservation of which precious blood was shed."

Alcoholic Deaths Found on Decline

Ratio of Lives Lost Now Is Set at 4 Per 100,000; Was 5.9.

Deaths from alcoholism in the United States are considerably below the figures which prevailed in the preprohibition era, although there is greater accuracy in reporting this cause of death than there was formerly, according to Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, in a statement issued yesterday.

"At no time under prohibition has the alcoholism death rate, according to the figures of the Census Bureau, reached the figure which it had frequently touched during the license periods," he said.

"Not even the widespread wet propaganda, encouraging violation of the law, has been able to lift the ratio to more than four deaths per 100,000, as compared with 5.9 deaths in a normal year before national prohibition. The effect of the encouragement given by the wet groups to law violation is demonstrated by the increase from one to two deaths per 100,000 in the early dry years to 3.7 in 1929."

Associated Charities Will Meet Tonight

The annual meeting of the Associated Charities of Washington will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in Barker Hall of the Young Women's Christian Association building at Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

The principal speaker will be Linton B. Swift, executive secretary of the Family Welfare Association of America, of which the Washington Associated Charities is a member. His subject will be the "Present Trends in Family Social Work." The president, Coleman Jennings, will preside and reports of the members of his staff will be given. Officers for the coming year also will be elected.

Dismissed Policeman Arrested as "Drunk"

Former Policeman William F. Burke, 38 years old, who was dismissed recently from the Metropolitan Police Department because of drunkenness, was arraigned yesterday on the same charge.

Complaints were received at the First Precinct that Burke was disorderly at Tenth street and New York avenue northwest. He was taken into custody by Patrolmen M. L. Le Gate and M. W. Stottlemeyer and held in default of $35 bail on two charges. He gave his address as Lawrence near Twenty-second street northeast.

Pair Held in Opium Raid Freed on $2,500 Bonds

Charged with violation of the Harrison narcotic law yesterday, the two Chinese taken by police Saturday night in a raid at premises on Pennsylvania avenue near Fourth street northwest were released on $2,500 bond each.

Lee Chung, 45 years old, and Loy Lee, also 45, were arrested by the narcotic squad, who said they found a pound of opium in the establishment.

Football Player Hurt.

Godfrey Limerick, 23 years old, of Sixth street near H street southwest, was slightly injured on the leg in a postseason football game at Seat Pleasant, Md., yesterday afternoon. After treatment at Casualty Hospital he was discharged. Limerick was playing for the Palace-D. C. S. Team against the Cardinal Athletic Club.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

"STAND BY FOR MORE BOLONEY."

MR. LEE DE FOREST, radio pioneer, says the program makers are killing the goose that lays the radio egg. Advertising is now playing so great a part in broadcasting that aerial entertainment has become a small body of amusement matter entirely surrounded by ballyhoo for everything from animal crackers to suspension bridges.

* * * *

He believes the radio fan can get a better break in the matter of diversion today by throwing away his set and substituting a dictaphone record of the bunk heard at any advertising convention.

* * * *

* * * *

Just as a traveler in a motor car has a lot of pill, sock, tooth paste and garter advertisements blot out his view of a beautiful rural landscape, so the radio fan gets a broadside of ballyhoo for soft drinks, package foodstuffs and general boloney the moment he goes to the radio in the hope of a little soothing music.

* * * *

* * * *

He craves the voice of a sweet singer and gets a load of facts about cottage cheese, ginger ale, rubber boots, rubbing liniment, motors cars, raspberry jams and hot-water bottles.

* * * *

He longs for a little light comedy and gets a deadly barrage of facts and figures concerning superiority in the pork, breakfast food, pancake flour, undershirt, millinery and face powder industries.

* * * *

HE plans on hearing some golden words from a leader of public thought and finds himself buried beneath the most infinitesimal details governing the choice of shaving soap, hair oil, two-piece suits, cigarettes, gasoline, dyspepsia tablets, soup, nuts and banana oil.

* * * *

If the present-day radio programs are a diversion then an evening spent at a conference of advertising men is the height of good clean fun.

They do everything on the air now except take orders by inside aerial and make deliveries by B batteries.

Radio began as a scientific blessing to amusement lovers at home and is winding up as an unmitigated nuisance to all but the deaf.

There are many radio fans who have come to the conclusion that the old phonograph wasn't such a bad bet. It didn't always give any great variety of entertainment, but you could play both sides of the record without getting a single exhortation to buy any particular kind of baked bean, canned spinach, rubber heel, house shingle, automobile tire or sponge cake.

* * * *

Church Is Pictured As Wondrous Pearl

THE REV. HOMER A. KENT.

Common interpretations of the parables of the pearl of great price and the hidden treasure break down because they picture Christ as the pearl or the treasure, and the sinner as selling everything he owns to purchase them, the Rev. Homer A. Kent, pastor of the First Brethren church, 1842 Twenty-fifth street southeast, said in a sermon yesterday.

Those interpretations are contrary to the heart of the Gospel, since salvation is something which can not be bought, the minister emphasized.

His sermon in part follows:

"The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls who, when he found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it." Matt., xiii: 45, 46:

"The common interpretation of this parable is that Christ is the Pearl of Great Price and the merchant man is the sinner who seeks Him. A like interpretation is given of the parable of the hid treasure. Christ is called the treasure and the sinner is pictured as selling everything he has that he might purchase the treasure.

"But in many respects these interpretations break down. They are contrary to the heart of the Gospel. Salvation is not something that can be bought. It is a 'free gift.' The sinner does not buy Christ. Instead Christ buys him. Salvation is free and is to be received 'without money' and 'without price.'

"With this in mind, let us think of the church as the pearl of great price and Christ as the merchant man who went and sold all He had that He might purchase it for Himself. This is in harmony with the message of the Gospel. It gives dignity to the character of the church and exalts the grace of its Lord.

Linked With Church.

"Consider, first, the cost of the Pearl of Great Price. Parables have often been described as pictures of spiritual things. In the cost of the pearl of great price we have a picture of the most precious fact of the ages. Christ gave himself for the church.

"It will help us to appreciate the parable if we will keep in mind the esteem in which pearls were held in olden days. There is record of almost incredible sums having been given for single pearls. The pearl which Cleopatra is said to have dissolved and swallowed was valued at $400,000, and one of the same value was cut into two pieces for earrings for the statue of Venus in the Pantheon at Rome. There were certain defects which diminished the value of pearls. Thus the merchant man must have skill in the purchase of his pearls, lest he have something of an inferior character imposed upon him.

"We read that Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it. He shed His blood for its redemption. To be sure, He saw the defects that were in the church. He sees them now.. But in spite of the sins and failures He sees in His people. He loves them for what He can make out of them.

"What was the cost of the pearl? Let the Scriptures answer. 'He made Himself of no reputation and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and, being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. 'There is the cost of the pearl. Soul, you can not purchase Christ for yourself, but He has given Himself for you and you can receive Him as a free gift.

How Pearl Is Formed.

"Consider, secondly, the character of the Pearl of Great Price. It is common knowledge how pearls are formed. They are the result of accidental causes, such as the intrusion of a grain of sand into the body of the oyster. This irritates the oyster and it is obliged in self-defense to cover the cause of the offense. It does this by secreting a substance about the offending particle. This hardens and the irritation ceases. That which hardens is the beautiful pearl.

"Around the suffering of the Lord Jesus Christ the church is being formed. The church is not an organization or a social club. It is an organism. Its life is the life of Christ. Separated from him it can not function and it loses its vitality. He is the blood stream of the church.' It grows by his power.

"And so, as that pearl is formed little by little through the life of the oyster, the church is being formed by the life of Christ entering men's hearts, making them 'new creatures in Christ Jesus.' There is much thought for encouragement here. If Christ is the life of the church and the church grows about and in him, we can rest assured that the true church shall not fail in her task. 'The gates of hell shall not prevail against it.'

"Again, the pearl is a perfect symbol of unity. It is one. So is the church. All true Christians, of whatever denomination, are bound together by a common tie and own a common Lord.

Character as Pearl.

"The the pearl is a thing of surpassing beauty. They have been fitted into the diadems of kings and worn by queens and princesses. Scarcely any gem is more beautiful. And there is nothing more beautiful in this world than Christian character as it is exhibited through the faithful members of his church.

"Consider, thirdly, the preparation of the pearl of great price. Christ has purchased the pearl at tremendous cost. One day he is going to take it unto himself. But in the meantime he is getting the church in readiness for that presentation. He is adorning it and enriching it. He is also increasing it.

"The means which Our Lord has ordained for this preparation is the preaching of the Gospel. Through it the saints are enriched and sinners are called to repentance. He knew that the source of all evils in this world is sin, and the only way to eradicate sin is to regenerate the human heart. So he gave the Gospel to the world, and the business of the church is to carry that Gospel to the world.

"Therefore, let the church hold true to her marked-out course lest she drift upon the rocks and be lost. Let us seek to bring about a real revival of Christianity through the means given us and thus hasten the day when the pearl of great price shall be presented unto him who loved it and gave himself for it."

Sister, 9, Hauls Hurt Boy, 4, To Hospital in Toy Wagon

A toy express wagon was pressed into ambulance service yesterday afternoon when 4-year-old William Burroughs was hurt playing in the kitchen of his home on Fourteenth street near B street northeast.

The child was put in the express wagon of his sister, Frances, 9 years old, who pulled Bill to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated for a laceration to the scalp.

William fell against the kitchen sink while playing. After the doctor's ministrations, he returned home in the wagon, Frances again providing the motive power.

AUTO CRASHES KILL THREE IN CAPITAL AREA

Child Hit by Car Dies of Fractured Skull in Doctor's Office.

Son of Woman Freed in Slaying Case One Victim; Two Drivers Sought.

Death took a toll of three persons in automobile accidents, which also injured several persons in the Capital and its environs yesterday.

Struck by an automobile yesterday afternoon as she was crossing the street in front of her home, 1910 Irving street northeast, Bettie Jane Bennett, 5-year-old child, died shortly afterward in the office of Dr. Rush Conklin, nearby.

She was hit by a car driven by Thomas Howard Bell, 19 years old, of Franklin street northeast, near Twenty-eighth, police say. After the accident she was rushed to the physician's office, where she died from a fractured skull. Bell went to the Twelfth Precinct police station and was released in custody of his attorney to appear before the coroner's inquest, to be held this morning.

In Path of Car.

According to police, the child ran across in front of Bell's car, just as he was passing an automobile driven by Richard R. Phelps, Evarts street northeast, near Twenty-second street.

The parents of the child are Russell C. and Ella M. Bennett.

Raymond Gamble, 23 years old, eldest son of Mrs. Lulu Mae Gamble, who shot and killed Mrs. Elsie Davis last summer, and was freed when she pleaded the unwritten law at her trial in November, died in Casualty Hospital last night from a fractured skull received when a car in which he was riding left the road near Redds Corners, Md., and crashed into an electric light pole late yesterday afternoon.

Police Seek Driver.

The car was driven by Wallace Bolding, of Faulker, Md., Maryland police say. They are searching for him. Frank Osakowiecz, 36 years old, of Allensfresh, Md., was held at the Ninth Precinct Police Station, but released by Maryland authorities, who say Bolding was the driver. A fourth man, believed to be a Negro, received leg injuries, but police have been unable to locate him.

A Negro was killed at New York and Florida avenues yesterday when the taxicab in which he was a passenger failed to make the turn into Florida avenue and turned over four times after crashing into a tree and a lamp post. The man was taken to Sibley Hospital by Policeman S. H. Miles, of the Sixth Precinct, who was passing. He was later removed to Freedmen's Hospital, where he died of a fractured skull. He was Rudolph Butler, 25, address unknown.

Another passenger in the cab, William C. Shields, 24 years old, colored, of Four-and-a-half street near H street southwest, was treated at Emer-

Baby Suffocates In Front of Home

4-Month-Old Boy Is Killed by Blankets as He Lies in Carriage.

A 4-month-old baby boy, James Allen English, son of Mr. and Mrs. Beryl R. English, of Burnt Mills, Md., suffocated to death in the blankets of his carriage in front of the home yesterday afternoon.

The child had been left in the open for an airing. Mrs. Charles Latimer, of Takoma Park, Md., who was visiting at the English house, went out to bring him in. She discovered he was lying unconscious on his stomach, his head wrapped in the blankets. She placed him in her car and drove to the office of Dr. W. R. Haynes in Silver Spring, Md., but the baby was dead upon their arrival.

Mr. English is an income tax expert in Washington. The baby is also survived by a sister, Elaine, who is 2 years old. The body was taken to the funeral parlors of Warner E. Pumphrey at Rockville. No funeral arrangements were made last night, but it is believed that the child will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery, as the father was an army officer during the World War.

The girl wife became the stepmother of three children, all over 50 years old.

Rector in Slander Suit Kills Self With Razor

Rev. Dr. William T. Reynolds, Formerly in Charge of Grace Episcopal Church Here, Dies Penniless in Squalid Room.

The Rev. Dr. William T. Reynolds, former rector of the fashionable Grace Episcopal Church of Georgetown, who was recently involved in a slander suit between two wealthy Washington society women, committed suicide last night in a squalid New York rooming house by slashing his throat and wrist with a safety razor blade. He was penniless.

Dr. Reynolds was the center of a slander suit in the District Supreme Court last month, when Mrs. Maude Bell Ford, wealthy widow and real estate operator, was awarded a judgment of $4,000 against Mrs. Marguerite du Pont Lee, of the Delaware Du Ponts. Mrs. Ford alleged that Mrs. Lee had charged her with getting Dr. Reynolds drunk. The case is now under appeal.

Mrs. Lee's only comment, when she learned of the minister's suicide was: "I am not surprised." She lives at the Hotel Powhatan.

Dr. Reynolds had been living in the rooming house on West Seventy-fourth street for about a week. Thomas J. Williamson, the landlord, told police that Dr. Reynolds came to him and explained that he wanted a room, but could not pay for it until he received money from relatives.

Williams told authorities that Dr. Reynolds was very despondent because of his penniless condition, but became more cheerful after his two sisters, Mrs. Lewis A. Seitz and Mrs. Charles H. Lang, of Baltimore, came to visit him. They had promised to send him money and clothing, and to arrange for his return to Baltimore.

Throughout last week, Dr. Reynolds had corresponded with the Rev. C. J. Harriman, of the Episcopal Church of St. James the Less in Philadelphia.

Dr. Reynolds' body was found when Walter Owens, another lodger, went to the bathroom of the house to shave and saw the inert and bleeding form of the minister on the floor. Among his effects was found a note addressed to his two sisters, which police did not open.

Soon after police communicated with Father Harriman, a man who said he represented the Philadelphia

NATHAN STRAUS, 82, IS DEAD IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Nathan Straus, philanthropist and leader of American Jewry, died peacefully in his sleep at 4:30 a. m. today, at his apartment in the San Remo Hotel. Had he lived until January 31 he would have been 83 years old.

Death ended a coma into which he had sunk 24 hours before. He had been ill for two weeks, but few knew of it, and his death came as a shock to the city to which many of his philanthropies had been extended.

With him when he died were his son, Nathan, jr., his only daughter, Mrs. Irving Lehman, whose husband is a judge of the court of appeals, and Dr. Leopold Stieglitz, a close friend. The cause of death was given on the death certificate, signed by Dr. Stieglitz, as heart failure and high blood pressure.

Word of the death was cabled to another son, Hugh Grant Straus, in Paris.

In speaking of "the biggest things" Nathan Straus accomplished, his son today quoted from a book written by the philanthropist's wife, whose death occurred last spring.

These "biggest things" were his work for the relief of distress in the winters of 1892-93 and 1893-94; securing a supply of pure milk for infants and children, and the coming of the word "preventorium" to replace "sanitarium," with which the treatment of tuberculosis had been generally associated.

Mr. and Mrs. Straus in 1925 celebrated the golden anniversary of their marriage. During her lifetime she took an active interest in his philanthropies, and her death last May marked the beginning of the physical decline which resulted in his death today.

Funeral services Tuesday, in accordance with his wishes, will reflect Mr. Straus' simple code of living. The simplest possible services will be conducted at Temple Emanu-El. There will be no flowers. A plain, pine cas-

He said he intended to continue coaching, but that the school which employed him would make the announcement in "the near future."

Ingram's statement follows:

"It is with a great deal of regret that I confirm the announcement from Annapolis that I have severed my connection as foot ball coach at the Naval Academy. My reasons for arriving at this decision are known to the athletic department at the Naval Academy and any future statement in that regard must emanate from that source. Member of House Taken to Hospital

Representative Johnson, of South Dakota, Is Not Seriously Ill.

Representative Royal C. Johnson, Republican, of South Dakota, is at Mount Alto Hospital where he was taken Thursday for treatment, it was learned yesterday.

The cause of his illness has not been diagnosed, officials of the hospital said last night, but his condition is not believed to be serious. Representative Johnson is not confined to his bed, but is resting at his quarters at the hospital most of the time, according to hospital attaches.

ASHFORD TO BE LIMERICK CASE WITNESS AGAIN

Coroner Inspects Scene of Crime Pending Renewal of Inquest Today.

An alleged discrepancy in the story of Marion S. Ashford as told before the coroner's jury investigating the mysterious murder of Beulah Limerick prompted Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt to announce that the witness will be recalled when the inquest is resumed today.

Conflict between Ashford's assertion that he had been at the Limerick home only on the day of the murder and the statement of Patrolman Robert F. Langdon, who is held in connection with the murder, caused Coroner Nevitt's decision. Langdon says he saw Ashford in the Limerick house at Nineteenth street near East Capitol street southeast several weeks before the murder.

Ashford's extreme nervousness on the witness stand on Saturday elicited the question from Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins: "You are rather nervous, aren't you?"

Challenged by Langdon.

When Ashford testified on Saturday that he had been in the Limerick house but once, Patrolman Langdon stretched across the counsel table and said to his attorney, Harry T. Whelan: "That's the fellow I saw in the basement room with the girl a couple of weeks before she was killed."

Ashford perspired freely when on the stand and continually mopped his forehead. In response to Mr. Collins' question regarding his nervousness Ashford said:

"I am ill and should not be here."

Ashford lives on Allison street near Third street northwest.

When Langdon originally told his story of seeing a man seated in the murder room with the girl some weeks before the crime he said the girl introduced the man as Edwards. Police have succeeded in locating a man named Edwards who is said to be a friend of Ashford.

This Edwards also has been summoned to the inquest in the board room of the District Building. He is Hugh Edwards, of Goldvein, Va., an insurance agent. Edwards is said to have been a roomer with the Limerick family a year ago.

Coroner Visits Scene.

When Langdon related what he knew regarding this man, according to Mr. Whelan, he said the girl had told him that Edwards was an insurance man and lived down in the country."

Capt. Edward J. Kelly, assistant chief of detectives, took Coroner Nevitt to the scene of the crime yesterday and explained to him in detail the circumstances surrounding the shooting as reconstructed by the evidence. The coroner's visit was prompted by his desire to be familiar with the scene.

James O'Shea, counsel for Vernon Limerick, Richard Reed and William E. Paddy, who are being held with Langdon in connection with the murder, said last night that under no circumstances would he permit Mr. Collins to cross-examine his clients if they take the stand.

Mr. O'Shea said that possibly one or two of his clients will take the stand. This, however, will be depend-

DROUGHT HELP CALL APPROVED BY PRESIDENT

Public to Be Asked This Week to Contribute $10,000,000.

EMERGENCY MONEYS OF RED CROSS SHRINK

Not Only Farmers but Small Industrial Centers Also Are in Distress.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover, as head of the American Red Cross, yesterday authorized that organization to appeal for public assistance in the drought relief work undertaken in rural sections.

The Chief Executive approved this action in a letter to Chairman Payne after a conference between the two Saturday. Payne said he thought at least $10,000,000 should be requested from the public.

The President, after further conference with Red Cross officials, will issue a formal proclamation calling for $10,000,000. The appeal probably will be made some time this week.

The drought relief problem as now developed, the President said in his letter, "requires more than the available funds and is not wholly one of food, clothing and other personal care among farmers," but also includes the inability of smaller rural and industrial centers to organize to meet their local situations.

Payne Now Sees Need.

Chairman Payne has explained the Red Cross fund of $5,000,000 set aside for relief purposes early in the fall is rapidly dwindling and additional funds would be necessary in the very near future.

President Hoover's letter follows:

In accordance with our conferences during the past week I am glad, as president of the American Red Cross, to approve an appeal for public assistance to the association in the relief work it has undertaken in the rural sections.

"Last fall the Red Cross undertook the burden of personal relief throughout the drought States. At that time you set aside $5,000,000 of the association's funds and established a vigorous and active organization throughout the drought area. In our discussions then it was contemplated that at an appropriate time an appeal should be made to the generosity of the American people to assist the Red Cross in its burden.

Delay Thought Right Then.

"It was felt then that it would not be possible to measure the volume of requirements until we had reached the early stages of winter and that, in any event, it was desirable that the Red Cross postpone any appeal until such time as the community chests and committees on unemployment relief in the larger cities should have further advanced the raising of their funds.

"The problem, as now developed, requires more than the available funds and is not wholly one of food, clothing and other personal care among farmers who have suffered from the drought. There is also difficulty in the smaller rural and industrial towns as a double reaction from the drought and depression. I understand that these towns are unable to organize to effectively meet their problems as are the municipalities.

"The arrangement made by Secretary Hyde and yourself by which a representative of local Red Cross chapters will sit upon the local committees created by the Department of Agriculture for administration of the

FRACTURE OF SKULL REVEALED BY DEATH

Unidentified Man, Found in Street, Succumbs After Week in Hospital.

ARM IS TATOOED "S. M."

Another mystery confronted police last night in the death of an unidentified man who was found lying on a street in the Southwest section a week ago in an unconscious condition.

The man was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where he never regained consciousness. He was treated at the hospital for a laceration of the scalp and bruises. An autopsy performed yesterday at the District Morgue by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald revealed that the man had suffered a fracture of the skull.

The man appeared to be about 60 years old, was gray-haired, neatly dressed, about 5 feet 4 inches in height and weighed about 150 pounds. On his left arm the initials "S. M." are tattooed. Between these initials there is a tattooo reproduction of a leg and a star.

CHICAGO BOMB KING SHOT DOWN BY FOES

EIGHT BULLETS IN BODY

Chicago, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—James Belcastro, one of the 28 "public enemies," was shot eight times and probably fatally wounded tonight in the "Little Italy" section of the West Side.

Belcastro, known as the "King of the Bombers," was taken to the hospital of the House of Correction.

The shooting occurred within a block of the place where Patsy Tardi, leader of the "42" gang was slain last Wednesday while walking with a companion. It is a neighborhood long known for its violence involving liquor and vice gangs and their war for control of illicit profits.

Belcastro, in addition to his notoriety as a bomber, was also implicated in the terrorism in the "bloody twentieth" ward during the 1928 primary, in which Octavus Granady, Negro political leader, was killed.

COMMISSION TO TAKE UP DUTIES THIS WEEK

Wheeler Organizing Drive to Block Salary Payment; Situation Unique.

(Associated Press.)

With the full backing of President Hoover, the new Power Commission will go ahead with its duties this week, although the names of three of the five members will appear on the Senate's calendar as unconfirmed.

This anomalous and unprecedented situation, resulting from the sharp exchange between the President and the Senate coalition of Democrats and Republican Independents, presents new problems for legislative and legal authorities.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, who led the contest for reconsideration of the nominations of Chairman Smith and Commissioners Draper and Garsaud because of their dismissal of two employes of the old commission, said yesterday he saw nothing that could be done to halt the commission from functioning after the refusal of the President to return the nominations to the Senate as requested.

G. O. P. Leaders Back Hoover.

While Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, was organizing a drive to withhold appropriations for salaries from the three commissioners, Republican leaders rallied to the position taken by President Hoover that the men were legally confirmed and any action now by the Senate against them would be an encroachment upon the independence of the executive assured by the Constitution.

The Senate voted, 44 to 37, for reconsideratoin of the nominees it had confirmed just before the Christmas recess, but there was no prospect that such a vote was likely on a move to withhold funds from the commission. Senator Walsh said he was uncertain of his position on such a move, adding he believed there was no way by which the legality of the commissioners' position could be questioned in the courts.

Meanwhile, interest centered on the next move of the commission and whether it would reemploy Charles A. Russell, the solicitor, and William V. King, the chief accountant, whose termination of services, along with other employes of the old commission, started the Senate drive against Smith, Garsaud and Draper.

At Odds With Secretary.

After the Senate had confirmed them and they had taken the oath of office, the three commissioners sent out notices to the employes of the old commission saying their services were terminated by the law creating the new commission. The commission later announced it would consider applications of all old employes for reemployment.

Russell and King were at odds over a long period with Frank E. Bonner, executive secretary of the old commission. The controversy was aired in Congress several times, with some senators charging that Bonner was protecting the "power trust." Russell and King were lauded by some for opposing Bonner.

President Hoover said yesterday the controversy presented "no issue for or against power companies." He recalled it was upon his recommendation that the new commission was organized and that he had recommended giving it authority to regulate all interstate power rates.

Watson Predicts Indorsement.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, expressed the belief today that Mr. Hoover's statement "will be indorsed by the people."

The appropriation bill for the independent offices will not come before the Senate for some time. This measure carries funds for the commission.

Wag Spikes Punch at Club; W.C.T.U. Women Get Giddy

Harmless Fruit and Tea Drink Potently Bolstered With Alcohol; Guests Become Happy and Gay, But Employes at Inn Solve Riddle.

Chicago, Jan. 11 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Members of the W. C. T. U. at the national headquarters in Evanston, and particularly in Lake Forest, where the crime was committed, are in a rage over the humiliation they experienced when a wet sneaked into a clean party and spiked a harmless drink.

This violation of the law took place Friday night at the Deerpath Inn during a ladies' night social given by a club. Many of the women are members of the W. C. T. U. and have records as outstanding fighters against liquor.

Mrs. William M. Gourley, who stumped the State for Lottie Holman O'Neill, the Antisaloon League candidate for United States senator, said, "Some lawless person thought he would have some fun."

The punch, which had a tea base with fruit juices, was mixed harmlessly. Mrs. Gourley noticed that the women who had been sampling it appeared gay and happy. She took a generous swallow. Then her face contorted, her eyes flashed. She shouted, "You're serving liquor here." This was denied. Mrs. Gourley walked out with a part of the contents of the glass in her hand. Other members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union who had absorbed the punch were not certain what it contained. Dr. A. J. Risser was summoned. He was a leader in the party.

"I don't know what is in it," he said.

Experts from the inn were called, drank the punch and said it was 50 per cent alcohol.

"This stuff is strong enough to knock a mule," was the decision. The punch was emptied in the sink.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

The abolition of city slums through public and private effort would be social service of the first order. Public discussions concerning them seldom appear, because building and tenement laws with the high rates of wages have greatly modified these sections. But they still exist. The present seems a time when State and local governments might join with philanthropic persons in rebuilding these areas.

Environment is a powerful factor in human development. But all that is necessary can not be contributed by housing. Many country houses would make slums if concentrated in a large city. But with no crowding and abundant light, air and water the character of houses in the country is not so important.

It will take more than a combination of such improvements to abolish the slums. The problem is also personal. Changing the outer garment will not be enough. Elaborate mansions often shelter bad people, while good people live in poverty. We must reach deeper and change the soul.

The mental and moral atmosphere must be renovated. Fine houses will be in vain unless those who occupy them come under the influence of education and religion.

Leaders in Congress Plan Night Sessions if Needed

(Associated Press.)

Congressional leaders determined yesterday to resort to night sessions this week, if necessary, to reach legislative measures that have piled up as rebellious legislators disputed with President Hoover over the Power Commission and drought relief.

The emergency drought relief appropriation, with its controversial $15,000,000 food loan provision, will receive first attention. House Republican chiefs are prepared to seek a special rule today to send the measure to conference in an attempt to eliminate the Senate's food loan proposal.

The Senate, after a week spent in a futile attempt to remove three members of the Power Commission, will take up today the six nominations of President Hoover to the reorganized Tariff Commission. A fight is certain against two of these—Edgar Brossard, of Utah, and Alfred P. Dennis, of Maryland. Concerned over the failure of any of the necessary appropriation bills to get through the Senate, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, announced yesterday he would seek night sessions later in the week, if progress was not shown.

House leaders also are contemplating night sessions if any trouble develops.

The eleven appropriation measures carrying funds for next year's operation of the Government must be passed before March 4 adjournment, to avoid an extra session.

Watson and Senator McNary, of Oregon, the assistant leader, continued to be confident that the extra session would be avoided, but the Republican independents, who will hold the balance of power in the almost evenly divided House and Senate in the new Congress, are still in a position to force the special meeting, which some members of the group are demanding.

This week is expected to bring a showdown in the House over the compromise for Government operation of the Muscle Shoals, Alabama, power and nitrate plant.

An appeal by the Red Cross for an additional $10,000,000, to meet distress in the drought-stricken States, may ease the situation over the Senate's food loan provision, to which the administration has objected. John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, has given assurance the organization can supply food and clothing to all drought sufferers.

Demands have been made by Senator La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, for additional relief for the unemployed, but Senator Watson said yesterday he had received new assurance from Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of President Hoover's employment committee, that his organization can meet "every situation."

The Senate also has on its calendar of special business for this week the nomination of Eugene Meyer, of New York, to be governor of the Federal Reserve Board. A sharp fight is in prospect, but his friends expect confirmation. Late in the week the Senate will act on the motion of Senator King (Democrat), Utah, to reconsider approval of the measure authorizing $30,000,000 for modernization of three battleships.

The first outbreak of the session in the Senate over prohibition also is in prospect. The Law Enforcement Commission is expected to submit its long-awaited prohibition report to President Hoover during the week and he is prepared to transmit it to Congress.

The bill of Senator Howell (Republican), Nebraska, to establish a new and drastic dry enforcement act for the Capital also will be the order of business for the Senate.

In a statement last night the newly organized Cuban Patriotic League ridicules the statement recently issued by Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, who pictured the situation in Cuba as peaceful and the people as quiet and apparently contented.

"The picture painted by Mr. Britten of conditions in Cuba, or, we should say, the picture painted for Mr. Britten by President Machado, is true only as illusions are true," says the league.

"Cuba is today as gang-ridden as Mr. Britten's home town, Chicago, with this difference—Cuba's gangsters wear the mask of government, while those in Chicago do not."

Cousins, House Orator, Now in Poverty in Iowa

Iowa City, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Robert Cousins, "silver-tongued" orator in Congress a generation ago, now lies broken in health and poverty stricken in the University of Iowa Hospital.

Mr. Cousins, 72, served in the House of Representatives for four terms and is remembered for his stirring plea for an appropriation for relatives of the men killed in the sinking of the battleship Maine.

Karachi, India, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Twenty persons were seriously injured today when police dispersed a meeting and procession by national congress adherents. The police made three charges in an hour.

At Bombay the president and three members of the local war council were arrested on a charge of obliterating census numbers on some premises. The nationalist congress recently decided to boycott the census.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP PLAN IS REJECTED

St. Lawrence Project Board Urges Marketing by Utility Firm.

SEES SALE NEAR SITE

New York, Jan. 11 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Sale of the bulk of the power from the proposed St. Lawrence development to industries near the dam, and disposition of the remainder through privately owned systems, is recommended by the marketing board of the St. Lawrence Power Development Commission in a report released today.

The marketing board consists of Col. John P. Hogan, of the firm of Parsons, Klapp, Brinckerhoff & Douglas, consulting engineers, and Dr. John Bauer, statistician.

The board rejects public transmission and distribution of power as economically disadvantageous, if not impracticable, and proposes marketing through "existing utility interests," meaning the Niagara-Hudson Power Corporation.

Transmission of the power to distant markets, such as New York City, whether publicly or privately, is likewise thrust aside as economically disadvantageous.

Although cautiously worded, the report presents a picture containing the following elements:

1. The development of a huge new industrial center in northern New York, near the proposed power site on the American side of International Rapids.

2. Transmission and distribution of the remainder of the power by Niagara Hudson, under some sort of contract with the State.

Great weight is given to the argument that constant improvement in production of electricity from coal makes it impossible for water generated power carried a long distance, to compete with power generated by steam. The board insinuates that still greater economies in steam generation may further reduce the present advantage of water power before 1937, the earliest estimated date for the generation of electricity on the St. Lawrence.

Head of Banking Group Denounces Norris' Plan

St. Louis, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Henry T. Ferriss, St. Louis, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, in a statement today described as "dangerous" the Norris bill for Government operation of power plants at Muscle Shoals, now held by conferees of both House and Senate.

The bill, Ferriss said, "threatens to put the Federal Government into the field of business in competition against the legitimate and established enterprise of the people themselves." He described the measure as an "entering wedge" and a move that would eventually lead to the entrance of the Government into any line of business in competition with private enterprise.

Divorce Pictured As Home Breaker

Rev. James A. Smyth Places Blame on Courts in Sermon Over Radio.

The Rev. James A. Smyth, in his second and concluding sermon on the Washington Catholic radio hour, yesterday mentioned the divorce evil as one of the most devastating influences in the country today.

"What is destroying the homes of our country today, but the divorce courts?" asked Father Smyth. "Do you know that our country leads the nations of the world in the evil of divorce? In 1929 there were 205,102 divorces granted in the United States.

"This means that on an average there were 561 divorces granted every day of the year. In certain sections of the country one out of every three marriages ended in divorce. The average for the entire country was one out of every six marriages.

"If we lead the nations in the number of divorces issued by our courts, must we necessarily lead the nations in the number of broken homes?—for every divorce means in most cases a broken home."

Temblors Make Convicts Fear Isles May Sink in Sea

Six Mexicans on Tres Marias Hurt by Leaps During Earthquakes as Century-Dormant Volcano Rumbles, and Whole Town May Flee.

Mexico City, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Three days of intermittent earth shocks have caused great fear among inmates of the penal colony on the Tres Marias Islands, off the western coast of Mexico, that the islands may disappear into the sea.

Six prisoners were injured several nights ago in jumps from dormitory windows when the shaking became severe, Gov. Mugica has reported. He said flames and smoke issued from small craters off the shore of the three islands and 27 shocks were felt in three hours.

The century dormant volcano of Cerobruco, south of Tepic, in the State of Nayarit, is reported to be rumbling, smoking and threatening to erupt. It was in the crater of this volcano that bandits held J. B. Bristow, San Angelo, Tex., oil and mine man, prisoner for 32 days last spring. It was in the crater itself that negotiations were completed that eventually led to his release.

A geological commission has set out to study the situation and if it is deemed dangerous steps will be taken to evacuate the people living in the danger zone. The small town of Jala lies almost beneath the summit of the crater, which rears its head about 7,000 feet above sea level.

The nearby Tres Marias Islands were discovered in 1532 and for many years were hideaways for pirates. Some years ago the Mexican federal government acquired them and established a penal colony where the prisoners engage in agriculture and work in the salt pits. The largest of the island group is Mother Mary, where the main penal colony is located. It comprises about 36,000 acres and a ridge of mountains 1,400 feet high extends through its length. The other islands are Mary Magdalena, containing about 20,000 acres, and Mary Cleofas, of about 6,000 acres. A woman's penal colony recently was established on Mary Magdalena Island. The islands are about 75 miles from the mainland of the State of Nayarit.

The federal weather station here said that while the earth shocks might continue, they would gradually diminish in intensity.

DAVIS UNDISTURBED BY OUSTER THREAT

(Associated Press.)

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, said in a statement yesterday his "life, both private and public, was an open book, containing no blots of dishonor or chicanery" and that he was not afraid of any attempt to remove him from the Senate.

Davis expressed astonishment at the announcement of Chairman Nye, of the Senate campaign funds committee, that he would offer a resolution declaring the Pennsylvanian's seat vacant, because of excessive campaign expenditures.

"What purpose is impelling Senator Nye in his insistent demand that my seat in the Senate be declared vacant?" Davis asked in a formal statement. "Surely no evidence has been uncovered at the hearings held by his committee, in its probe of the primary and election contests in Pennsylvania, to even hint of scandal or the exhorbitant expenditure of funds in my behalf."

Credits Personal Popularity.

On the contrary, he added, the hearings "proved facts commonly acknowledged in and out of Pennsylvania, namely that the personal popularity of 'Jim' Davis, built largely on his integrity and humanitarian achievements, assured his nomination and consequent election to the United States Senate, without the need of a large campaign fund."

To Nye's charge that approximately $1,200,000 was spent for the Davis ticket, the former Labor Secretary said the hearings also revealed that many of the contributions to the Republican campaign chest were "specifically earmarked: 'not to be used for Davis,' or 'this donation is for Mr. Brown.'"

Francis Shunk Brown was the unsuccessful candidate for the gubernatorial nomination.

Used Mainly for Brown.

Checks given by Secretary Mellon, R. B. Mellon and W. L. Mellon, Davis said, carried the "terse but emphatic order that they were for Mr. Brown exclusively."

The Pennsylvania senator, who took the oath early in December after Senator Nye had lost by a big margin a proposal to bar him pending further inquiry, called attention to a letter to the Nye committee by Charles B. Hall, Philadelphia councilman, which said less than 5 per cent of the campaign funds raised were used in Davis' behalf.

"In view of these facts," he concluded, "I must admit that I am perplexed by Senator Nye's insistent demand to unseat me in the Senate."

Funds for Vivisection Opposed in Resolution

The District Vivisection Investigation League, in its meeting Saturday at Stoneleigh Courts, adopted a resolution asking members of Congress to oppose any appropriations to experiment on living dogs in the District.

A letter was received from Clarence Darrow, criminal lawyer, who said he believed that the contemplation of the suffering of animals costs more than it counts in the advancement of knowledge.

PHILIPPINE TROOPS TAKE TOWN; KILL 11

Constabulary Drives Rebels From Tayug; Barricaded Convent Stormed.

2 WOMEN AMONG SLAIN

Manila, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—The town of Tayug was recaptured late today by the constabulary, who stormed a convent in which a large band of rebels had barricaded themselves. Eleven persons were killed in the fighting, two of them being women rebels.

The town was taken yesterday by a band of several hundred persons, who killed several residents and burned the constabulary barracks, the postoffice and ten other buildings while sacking the town.

Reports from Pangasinan Province, on the northwestern coast of the Island of Luzon, the largest of the Philippine group, indicated, but did not definitely establish, that the capture of Tayug was the result of an uprising of peasants against their landlords, and not action by religious fanatics, as previously reported.

The trouble was believed to be much more serious than at first reported. A tense situation prevailed also at the towns of Santa Maria, Umingan and Rosales, while the public peace in Nueva Ecija Province was regarded as none too secure.

At Santa Maria workers formed into mobs which were regarded as menacing although no definite movement had been started. The superintendent of the Esperanza estate at Rosales reported great unrest among the peasants and expressed fear for the maintenance of order. In view of this well informed circles here surmised that more than Agrarian trouble was at the bottom of the movement, which was provoked by opportunist leaders capitalizing on the disappointment of 1,000 tenant families on the Esperanza estate in losing their claims to land in a recent Supreme Court decision. These claims involved 25,000 acres, about one-fourth of the estate. In addition rice prices were low and economic conditions generally bad.

Although the trouble is now confined to Pangasinan Province, unrest was great in Neuva Ecija and Gov. Santos, of the latter province, requested the stationing of troops in Lupao, a border town, to prevent a spread of the trouble.

Ratio of Lives Lost Now Is Set at 4 Per 100,000; Was 5.9.

Deaths from alcoholism in the United States are considerably below the figures which prevailed in the preprohibition era, although there is greater accuracy in reporting this cause of death than there was formerly, according to Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, in a statement issued yesterday.

"At no time under prohibition has the alcoholism death rate, according to the figures of the Census Bureau, reached the figure which it had frequently touched during the license periods," he said.

"Not even the widespread wet propaganda, encouraging violation of the law, has been able to lift the ratio to more than four deaths per 100,000, as compared with 5.9 deaths in a normal year before national prohibition. The effect of the encouragement given by the wet groups to law violation is demonstrated by the increase from one to two deaths per 100,000 in the early dry years to 3.7 in 1929."

Cremation Club Plans Discussed by Atheists

At the meeting of the Washington Chapter of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism yesterday at 623 Louisiana avenue northwest, plans were discussed for the formation of the Capital City Cremation Club, which will be commonly known as the 4C.

Albert D. Bell, former clergyman, said, "Burying the dead instead of burning them continues chiefly because of the Christian belief in the resurrection of the body. The percentage of the earth's surface used for cemeteries and disfigured by tombstones constantly increases. There must be a stop some day, or the earth will become a vast graveyard."

46 NATIONS TO SEEK ECONOMIC REMEDY

(Associated Press.)

A remedy for the world-wide business depression will be sought at the May meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce.

This was announced yesterday by Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the American committee of the organization, who said representatives of 46 nations would attend the meeting.

Strawn said the conference would "endeavor to investigate carefully the distinction between cause and effect in the present situation, with a view to establishing to what extent remedies can be sought and the first steps of recovery hastened by coordinating sectional endeavor."

"From this, as from previous economic depressions," he added, "there will be eventual and, we hope, speedy recovery. When that time will come no one seems able to forecast. Certain it is that recovery can only be brought by cooperative individual effort and not by governmental action.

Russia Named as Factor.

"Perhaps the most ominous clouds that overhang the whole economic world is the dumping on the world markets of large quantities of grain, raw materials and semifinished products by Soviet Russia, at prices less than the normal costs of production.

"That is a factor in the situation, the duration and extent of which can not be measured."

Delegates from Europe, Latin America, the Far East and the United States will present a comprehensive trade picture, and these reports will form the basis for thorough and frank discussion.

The conference also will consider results of an inquiry by a special committee into economic relations between the United States and Europe. Dr. Alberto Pirelli, of Italy, is chairman of three plenary sessions that will be devoted to the report.

Seeking Advantages.

The work of the special committee, Strawn said, is directed toward showing how and why greater economic progress has been made by one or another Continent, and how advantage may be taken of the methods and practices successful in one area by another.

"The American members of the International Chamber, Strawn said, "fully realize the World-Wide extent of the present depression and its effect on our National and financial structure. The decline in buying power has once more focused attention upon the shift which has taken place in the character of our exports over the past decade, and the stabilizing influence of large foreign markets upon our basic industries.

Europe Waits On U. S.

"More than ever is apparent the dependence of Europe and the other countries of the world upon the prosperity of the United States.

"The conviction is held in many quarters abroad that the first step toward business recovery in Europe is the resumption of normal buying in the United States. Until our people, by the renewal of purchases abroad of raw materials and finished products, can reduce surplus stocks and bring about a stable price level in the more important countries, European business leaders see no probability of substantial improvement in the world economic situation."

CHICAGO BOMB KING IS WOUNDED BY FOES

Belcastro is the third "public enemy" to have been shot by enemies. Jack Zuta, Moran lieutenant, was slain at Delafield, Wis., and Joe Aiello was mowed down by a machine gun ambush on the Northwest Side.

Two assailants fired at Belcastro as he stepped from the doorway of a building in which his brother-in-law, Rocco Fannelli, lives. Fannelli is also a "public enemy." He runs a grocery store below his apartment.

At the hospital, it was found that Belcastro had wounds in his right arm, side and forehead. Eight bullets had entered his body.

Questioned by police, Fannelli and his wife and Belcastro's wife, Rose, said the victim had gone downstairs to get something out of his automobile, parked in front of the building.

$150 Theft of Clothing Is Laid to Young Men

Two young men, who gave the names of David J. Kinane, 20, of Lynn, Mass., and Charles Bertscher, 20, of New York, were arrested last night and charged with the larceny of $150 worth of women's clothing. The pair admitted, police said, taking the clothes from the car of Louis W. Zim, a guest of a local hotel, as the machine stood parked on Eleventh near E street northwest, Saturday. The clothes were the property of Mr. Zim's wife.

The arrest was made by Detective J. A. Mostyn, of the First Precinct, who traced the stolen clothing to a rooming house on F street near Third, northwest, where it had been sold to an unsuspecting party.

24 STATES OPPOSED TO DRY LAW, CLAIM

Curran, Foe of Prohibition, Says 12 Others Will Be Ready in 2 Years.

HITS CONGRESS' FAILURE

(Associated Press.)

The prediction that 24 States are now ready to vote for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and that the twelve additional ones necessary for repeal would follow within two years, was made yesterday by Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. At the same time he analyzed the delegations of twelve States in the next Congress as containing 19 out of 24 Senators in favor of submitting the repeal question to the people, and 113 out of 160 representatives ready to cast similar votes.

"As to the other States," Curran said, "there are several more senators and at least 42 more representatives now ready to submit this question, but there are not yet two-thirds of each house willing to do so.

Function Is Administrative.

"The function of Congress in this matter is not one of decision, but merely the administrative duty of allowing the people to vote on the question. How much longer is Congress going to deprive the people of the right to vote?"

Curran reviewed the antiprohibition history of the twelve States, which he said had "met the extreme constitutional requirement." They were Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Montana and Washington.

As listed by him each of these States will send to the next Congress two senators ready to vote for submission with the exception of Maryland, Ohio, Louisiana, Montana and Washington. He listed one senator in each of these States.

In the list of representatives Curran placed 32 of the 43 in the New York delegation, 21 of 27 in Illinois, 14 out of 16 in Massachusetts, 3 out of 3 in Rhode Island, 10 out of 22 in Ohio, 5 out of 5 in Connecticut, and 5 out of 6 in Maryland.

Names Nineteen Senators.

The 113 representatives were listed as follows: "Treadway, Granfield, Foss, Holmes, Rogers, Andrew, Connery, Underhill, Douglass, Tinkham, McCormack, Wigglesworth, Martin, Gifford, Burdick, Aldrich, Condon, Lonergan, Freeman, Tilson, Tirney, Goss; all of the New York delegation except H. J. Pratt, Parker, Crowther, Snell, Culkin, Davenport, Clark, Taber, Stalker, Sanders and Reed; all of the New Jersey delegatoin except Goldsborough, Longworth, Hess, Harlan, Kniffen, White, Lamneck, Fiesinger, Mooney, Crosser and Bolton, of Ohio; all of the Illinois delegation except Johnson, Allen, Chiperfield, Hall, Holaday and Adkins; all of the Wisconsin delegaton except Cooper, Nelson and Frear; Fernandez, Maloney, Montet and Derouen, of Louisiana; Evans, of Montana, and Horr, of Washington."

Employment Data Declared Blocked

(Associated Press.)

The administration was charged yesterday by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, with "resistance to the creation of adequate plans for the prevention of unemployment."

In a statement issued through the Democratic national committee, the New Yorker criticized President Hoover for failure to include funds in the first deficiency bill to carry out provisions of the Wagner act for collection of employment statistics. The measure was signed by the President shortly after Congress adjourned last July. Wagner said accurate information on employment was "crucial and fundamental."

"It was confidently expected that the first deficiency bill, which has passed the House and is now pending in the Senate, would provide the necessary funds," he added. "As a matter of fact, the only appropriation assigned to the Department of Labor in the deficiency bill is $12,500 to replace equipment destroyed by fire. Not a dollar is appropriated to carry out the purpose of the statistical bill."

Man Instantly Killed By Bullet During Row

William Coates, colored, 19 years old, of K street near Second street southeast, was shot and instantly killed last night during an argument in a house on Second street near L street southeast.

According to police, Coates was standing nearby while his brother-in-law, Frank Coates, 30 years old, was engaged in an argument with two other men, and when he approached to join the argument, was shot by one of the men. Police of the Fifth Precinct are searching for Arthur Brookes, of Van street near First street southeast.

3,000 See Virginian's Body; Identity Still Is Mystery

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11.—Mystery still surrounds the death of the middle-aged man whose body was found yesterday beside a stream where it had evidently been tossed Friday night from a 40-foot bridge near Mechum's River, 12 miles west of Charlottesville.

More than 3,000 persons, many from distant points, viewed the body today in an undertaking establishment, but none could identify the man.

It is assumed the Chicago method was reversed, that the victim was gagged, hacked into insensibility and then taken for a "ride."

Finding of four stained blankets and an automobile robe 4 miles east of where the body lay face downward and arms folded, suggests the occupants of the death car were headed for a point east or north of Charlottesville, perhaps out of the State. Hanging on a bush close by was a woman's scarf.

Inspection of the man's clothing revealed little toward identification. A blue serge suit, cream-colored shirt and heavy underwear literally were covered with stains. On an inside pocket of the trousers is a laundry mark, D1729. A black leather belt contains a silver buckle with the letter "R."

Deputy Sheriff W. Abbot Smith and Constable H. J. Haney said all the pockets, save one, had been turned wrong side out, evidently to give the impression that robbery had been the motive for the slaying. The pocket unturned contained a pack of cigarettes and a few sticks of chewing gum.

Picture wire had been used in strangling the man and his mouth had been gagged with a handkerchief, over which was stuffed heavy cloth.

Of a half dozen gashes inflicted, the most severe was on the back of the head, but either one of the four on the forehead would have been sufficient to cause death. Neither shoes nor hat were found at the stream.

ACTION ADVOCATED UPON WORLD COURT

SEE RESERVATIONS MET

New York, Jan. 11 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—Senate action on America's entrance into the World Court, either at the present session or at a special session called expressly for that purpose, is implored by 7,586 prominent citizens, representing every section of the nation, in a petition made public here today.

The petition, directed to the Senate, asks that the postponement voted by the Committee on Foreign Relations, which would put off the issue for another year, be reconsidered. It then contends that there is no reason why essential legislation would be interfered with by an immediate vote on the Court.

"We believe," the petitioners say, "that to delay action on the court protocols for another year would lead to attempts to postpone action indefinitely, and would result in a serious setback to the movement for world justice and enduring peace."

The list of signers on the petition includes 161 bankers and business executives, 98 bishops, 208 university and college presidents, 602 clergy, 285 deans, professors and teachers and 100 judges and lawyers. New York State leads the roll with 1,093 signers. Illinois is next with 899, Massachusetts third with 610, with these in order: Minnesota, 508; Iowa, 495; Pennsylvania, 453; California, 371, and Ohio, 317.

The petitioners agree with President Hoover and Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, that the protocols submitted to the Senate in December meet the Senate reservations. They then declare that it will be practically impossible for the President to carry on the foreign relations of the country if the action taken by the Senate in 1926 on the court is now repudiated.

The fact that the United States is a signatory of the Kellogg antiwar pact they see as a further compelling reason why the Senate should take prompt and favorable action on this country's adherence to the court. They assert that consideration by the Senate should not consume a great amount of time. They assert that the issues were settled in 1926.

20 TRAPPED IN MINE GET OUT BY TUNNEL

AIR SUPPLIED BY PIPE

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Crawling through a tunnel dug through debris of rock, earth, steel and timber by their comrades, 20 men entombed in the Hetch Hetchy Coast Range Tunnel, came to the surface early today, showing little evidence of their 30-hour ordeal.

All were in good spirits and although tired and hungry, none was known to have suffered seriously. Trapped last Friday night when supporting timbers gave way 800 feet under ground allowing debris to clog the tunnel, the men probably owed their lives to the action of Welby Morgan, 28-year-old nozzleman.

When the cave-in started, Morgan dragged a 20-foot length of four-inch pipe beneath the falling rocks, although he was twice knocked down before reaching safety. Air was supplied to the imprisoned men through the pipe as well as small quantities of food.

Late yesterday the burrow was first pushed through to the men. It was large enough to allow Oscar Nelson, smallest of the crew, to crawl to safety. A piece of wreckage prevented enlarging the tunnel and the rescuers were forced to make a new opening over a slightly deviated course. Delay in bringing out the other 19 men led to a circulation of rumors that another slide had occurred.

Relatives and friends waited impatiently around a bonfire during the night after Nelson had been brought out. A nearby house was kept heated and when the men were brought to the surface they were taken there for examination and rest.

BALDWIN DEFENDED ON DEBT AGREEMENT

Former Prime Minister Held Guiltless in Statement by Conservatives.

SEEKS TO END CRITICISM

London, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—The part played by Stanley Baldwin, former prime minister and Conservative leader, in settlement of the British debt to America is defended in a statement circulated by the central Conservative office among Conservative members of Parliament.

It is asserted the statement was issued "in view of misunderstandings which apparently exist in some quarters" regarding the debt negotiations.

Political observers recall that both within his own party and without Mr. Baldwin had been attacked for having made a bad business deal in 1923 and the present statement is regarded as an attempt to silence criticism once and for all.

The statement, which is a lengthy statistical analysis, opens with a discussion of Great Britain's position at the time of Mr. Baldwin's visit to the United States, says that, leaving aside formal repudiation, the British government faced two alternatives: First, to postpone making a settlement and continuing to pay £50,000,000 sterling annually; secondly, to agree to pay not less than £65,000,000 annually for 25 years.

As a result of Mr. Baldwin's negotiations, it is stated, Great Britain instead of paying £65,000,000 annually now pays £33,000,000 until 1932 and £38,000,000 annually thereafter.

DEATH REVEALS MAN HAD SKULL FRACTURE

treated the case declared that an X-ray examination of the man's head, made within 12 hours after he was admitted to the hospital, did not reveal a fracture. These physicians and Dr. MacDonald admitted that an X-ray examination does not always reveal a fracture.

Dr. MacDonald said that he first suspected a fracture when he noted a discoloration behind the left ear of the man. Drs. J. J. McCarthy, John A. Shay and J. Garden, of Gallinger Hospital, who treated the man, said they did not see this discoloration.

The man died at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. A diagnosis of his case at the hospital revealed that he was a victim of uremic poisoning and Bright's disease. Police believe that he had either collapsed on the street, as the result of his ailments, or was the victim of foul play. Detective John Collins, of the homicide squad, is conducting an investigation.

The man was found on the sidewalk at Delaware avenue and C street southwest at 11:55 o'clock on the night of January 9, by J. C. Wilson, of 1331 K street northwest. Wilson took him to Gallinger Hospital. Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt, upon receiving a report of the case from Dr. MacDonald and police, said that he would order an inquest for the earliest possible date. This inquest can not be conducted, Dr. Nevitt pointed out, until the Limerick case and two others on the calendar are disposed of.

Dr. Nevitt also said that an examination of the body would be made to determine whether the man was addicted to drugs.

HEAD OF CHASE BANK PREDICTS UP TREND

WOULD MODIFY TARIFF

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the governing board of the Chase National Bank of New York, will tell shareholders in his annual report tomorrow he believes the next important move in business will be upward.

He asserts collective efforts to maintain prosperity by such means as easy money and rigid maintenance of prices and wages have prolonged and not alleviated the depression by delaying necessary readjustments. He believes the tight money of 1921 necessitated quick adjustments and hastened recovery from the previous depression.

Nevertheless, Mr. Wiggin says "we are approximately at the worst of the depression." He expresses confidence that "the credit fabric is strong enough to stand any additional strain which continuance of the depression may impose upon it," and thinks "nothing is to be gained by concealing unfavorable factors."

The financier expects "conditions at the end of 1931 to be a good deal better than they are at the end of 1930."

Of securities, he says, "I do not know whether we shall see lower prices in the stock market or not, but there are many stocks and bonds now selling for less than they will be worth in normal times."

He expresses the conviction that it would be good business for the United States Government to initiate now a reduction in interallied debts; suggests modification of the tariff and advocates, to promote security markets stability, reduction in the capital gains tax from 12½ to 7½ per cent.

Expressing "no sympathy with price fixing palliatives," he acknowledges advantages of restricted production in special circumstances.

MRS. OWEN PLANS DEBUT FOR SINGER

Representative to Present Barytone Trained as Family Friend.

FIRST HEARD IN SOUTH

(Associated Press.)

An ambitious Capital debut is planned by Representative Ruth Bryan Owen for a Southern opera singer, whose talent she recognized when he was a struggling young student and friend of her own stage-artist son.

Benjamin DeLoache, 24-year-old barytone of the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company, is the Florida representative's protege.

His friend, John Bryan Owen, will be absent from the concert, because he is now playing Shakespearean roles nightly with Fritz Lieber in New York; but another son, 17-year-old Reginald Bryan Owen, who shares rooms with DeLoache, will be in the audience of hundreds of diplomats, Government officials and other friends of Mrs. Owen.

Heard Four Years Ago.

It was in a little hotel in Asheville, N. C., four years ago, that Mrs. Owen first heard the singer. He was only a stripling, but his flexible voice filled a big room with dramatic sound.

"My son, John, who first recognized Benjamin's ability, had been so enthusiastic that I arranged to hear him," Mrs. Owen recalled yesterday. "When I did, I realized that here was genius. So I was not surprised when, about a year later, he sang "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," over the radio, and was one of the national winners in the Atwater Kent audition.

"Then he received a scholarship at the Curtiss Institute of Music, in which Mrs. Edward Bok extends to musicians of unusual talent the opportunity to study with the greatest masters. He is continuing his work under his master of the past two years, De Gogorza, while singing in the opera company. I wanted a circle of my own friends to be the first audience, on January 26, of his successful concert career."

Holidays and vacations, young De Loache has spent in the Owen home. Last year he was one of those who gathered about the Representative's Christmas tree.

Town Pays Tribute.

Because he was a young Southerner alone and away from home, working tirelessly to perfect his art, but even more because of his talent, she said, she took an interest in him. The united citizenry of his home town of Camden, South Carolina, joined in paying tribute when he won the radio award, but Mrs. Owen's encouragement considerably antedated that.

"The great singer must have, in addition to his voice and perfected technique, a fidelity of dramatic interpretation," Mrs. Owen said. "I thought of this when that beautiful voice stirred us in that hall in Asheville, and I was confident."

Acrobat Injured In 30-Foot Drop

Performer Misses Trapeze on Stage at Earle; Head Is Cut.

Harry Angstadt, 21 years old, an acrobat appearing this week at the Earle Theater, was injured last night when he fell 30 feet from a trapeze to the floor of the stage. He was rushed to Emergency Hospital by the fire rescue squad.

The accident occurred at the 9 o'clock performance of the show. Lights were dimmed and a hush fell over the audience as Angstadt prepared for his "death-defying leap" from one trapeze to another. He swung high in the air and loosed his grip from the bar. As he hurtled through space with outstretched hands to catch the trapeze on the opposite side of the stage, it became apparent he was going to miss. Women screamed, and the lights suddenly went out as Angstadt struck the floor.

At the hospital it was said he was suffering from a severe head laceration and body bruises. Maxine Doyle, mistress of ceremonies at the theater, announced to the audience that his injuries were not serious. Angstadt was appearing in the act of "Four American Aces and a Queen." He said he was staying at the Houston Hotel.

the white monoplane would be able to fight against a prevailing gale from the northeast and reach these islands safely.

The local wireless station continually crackled out requests for news of the plane from ships, but no information was received.

The cargo-carrying plane, piloted by Lieut. William S. MacLaren and Mrs. Beryl Hart, was due at about 11:15 a. m. (8:15 a. m., E. S. T.).

The plane left Hamilton, Bermuda, at 11:15 a. m., E. S. T., yesterday and was expected to arrive here about 8:15 a. m., E. S. T., this morning. The distance for the hop is 2,045 miles.

Anxiety for the safety of the two aviators was increased because of poor visibility and a choppy sea, which, it is believed, would prohibit landing anywhere but in a sheltered harbor. A strong easterly wind which prevailed this morning decreased this afternoon. The sky continued overcast with a visibility of about 15 miles.

A lighter with fuel aboard for the plane awaited its arrival in the harbor. A crowd of persons who had gathered to watch the preparations dispersed as hours passed without any word of the fliers.

The plane Tradewind, when it left Bermuda, carried 300 gallons of gasoline, which, it was estimated, would be sufficient to keep it in the air until 6 p. m. E. S. T. Sunday. Backers of the flight said this supply of gas would be enough to carry the plane to the mainland of Portugal, and advanced the possibility the plane might have continued directly to Europe without stopping at the Azores for refueling.

FUR TRADE CONTROL NEW AIM OF SOVIET

BIG MOSCOW SALE SOON

New York, Jan. 11 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Soviet Russia, as a part of her campaign to take from other nations their places in the commercial sun, has undertaken to seize control of the world's fur market, it was revealed today.

One of the first steps is the Soviet plan to forbid the shipment of undressed furs to the United States. By dressing the furs in Russia it would not only give this work to Soviet labor, but would draw fur buyers to that country.

Sol Schild, vice president of the Eitingon-Schild Co., which has had contracts with the Red government for several years for delivery of millions of dollars in undressed furs, admitted that Russia was putting the lid down on the export of undressed furs.

Mr. Schild explained that the plan had not been wholly effective, but added that eventually he expected to see a complete ban on the export of undressed furs. This would close to the United States and to other nations one of the principal sources of furs, making Russia a virtual dictator of prices.

In February a great sale will be held in Moscow at which $2,000,000 in Russia-dressed furs will be put on sale. This is a small amount in the world trade, Mr. Schild pointed out, but he said it shows the Soviet's aim.

As for American importations of dressed fur, Mr. Schild said that the tariff made them prohibitive.

Expects Complete Ban.

Mr. Schild pointed out that Russia, as a great producer of raw furs, could build up something very close to a monopoly. In 1929, the value of fur products in the United States was $277,058,936, of which $101,404,856 was added by manufacture. This shows that the undressed furs, after being brought into this country, were dressed and fashioned so that the value was boosted by almost half the original value.

"Capitalist" Charges Denied.

Moscow, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Charges of "dumping" and use of forced labor were denounced at the closing session of the central executive committee today by President Michael Kalinin, who declared they were made by "foreign enemies" and capitalists for the purpose of "throwing dust in the eyes" of discontented laboring classes throughout the capitalistic world.

He said the capitalists were attempting to alibi the world economic crisis by blaming it on the Soviets, but said they had not succeeded and were only making the situation worse.

The committee announced a congress of Soviets of the U. S. S. R. would be held in Moscow March 5.

THREE DEAD IN AUTO ACCIDENTS NEARBY

gency Hospital for lacerations and later held for investigation at the Second Precinct station.

The driver of the cab was Walter Clinton Geary, colored, 23, of Ninth street near W street northwest, police say. After the crash he ran, police say. They are searching for him.

Virginia Clark, 16 years old, of 1511 Park road northwest, who shot herself last November in a houseboat anchored near the Highway Bridge, and lay for weeks in Emergency Hospital between life and death, was treated last night at Emergency Hospital, along with two girl companions, for slight injuries sustained in an automobile accident at S street and Florida avenue northwest.

The girls were riding in the automobile of Curly W. Levis, which struck a car driven by Franklin Thompson, Negro, 42, of 3701 Massachusetts avenue northwest. The other girls, treated for shock, were Marion Kentz, 17, O street near Twentieth street northwest, and Catherine Pomeroy, 17, Thirteenth street near Monroe street northwest.

Mr. Levis, 28 years old, of O street near twentieth street northwest, was not injured. Mrs. Pearl Levis, 34 years old, also escaped injury.

Four Hurt in Collision.

Four persons were injured near Woodridge, Va., early last night in a triple collision. Mrs. E. H. Embrey, of Stafford, Va., received internal injuries, when a car driven by her husband struck a truck driven by Pleasant Gunn, Negro, of Danville, Va. An automobile in which three youths from Brooklyn, N. Y., were riding crashed into the other two vehicles. The three boys received severe lacerations. They were Walter Anderson, Richard and George Hill. All the injured were treated by a physician nearby.

Hurt in an accident yesterday morning, when the car in which he was riding left the road and crashed into a tree near Redds Corner, Md., Sidney Richards, 19 years old, of Anacostia, was treated for a possible fractured skull at Casualty Hospital.

Cab Crashes Railing.

No one was injured in a freak accident in which a taxicab, driverless, crashed into the porch of the home occupied by the Rev. D. A. Berry, 3040 Q street northwest, damaging the railing, early yesterday morning.

The driver, Richard Dalton, 32 years old, of L street near Fourteenth street northwest, told police that a woman passenger jumped from the cab. He stopped and went back to assist her, and his cab coasted back into the porch when the brake failed to hold. Police say the woman was Caroline Fisher, 34, of Fourteenth street near Clifton street northwest.

Two Negroes were held at the Seventh Precinct police station on charges of hitting the parked car of Griffith Evans, who lives on Observatory Circle northwest. They are George Warrick, 24, of Nauck, Va., and Clarence Washington, 30, of Balls court northwest. Police say Warrick was driving when the car was struck, but that he ran, and Washington drove their car from the scene of the crash. Both were charged with leaving the scene of an accident and driving with defective brakes.

ket will be used. The usual practice of admission to the services by tickets will be abandoned. At the philanthropist's specific request Temple Emanu-El will be open to the general public.

The services will begin at 10 a. m., and no eulogy will be spoken, a brief sketch of Mr. Straus' life—a life that began in Rhenish Bavaria, in 1848—will be read by Prof. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale University. Psalms will be read. Burial will be in the family vault in Cypress Hills Cemetery.

Since his return from Europe last year, when he was brought ashore in a wheel chair, Mr. Straus has found it necessary to use that conveyance to move about.

Born in Bavaria.

Nathan Straus was born at Otterburg, Rhenish Bavaria, Germany, January 31, 1848. A few years later his father, Lazarus Straus, became involved in an unsuccessful revolutionary movement there and the family was forced to emigrate hastily to America. They settled in Talbotton, Ga., in 1854, where Lazarus Straus opened a little store.

Nathan, who entered school at Collingsworth Institute, was eventually given a corner in the store. Knowing that face powder was a luxury difficult for the Southern woman to obtain, he began his business ventures by grinding a 25 cent lump of talcum powder into four balls which he sold for 10 cents apiece—a gross profit of 15 cents.

When the Civil War came, sweeping away the little store and leaving behind a collection of debts, Lazarus Straus moved to New York where Nathan joined in the efforts to establish another business and repay the family debts.

Became Store Owner.

After graduating as class orator from Packer's Business College in 1866 he became a traveling salesman for the crockery business which his father and brother Isidore had established in the basement of Capt. R. H. Macy's store then at Thirteenth street and Sixth avenue. The debts were gradually paid, the crockery business grew, with branch factories established in Europe.

Nathan and Isidore became members of the firm of R. H. Macy & Co., eventually obtaining sole ownership. Several years later Nathan Straus and his brother bought an interest in the department store of Wechsler & Abraham, of Brooklyn, and the firm name was changed to Abraham & Straus.

Mr. Straus' health was noticeably affected by the Titanic disaster in 1912 when the lives of his brother Isidore and his wife were lost. He retired from business soon afterward and devoted himself to philanthropic work.

In 1875 Mr. Straus married Lina Gutherz at Mannheim, Germany. Four children were born to them.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover last night issued the following statement:

"The death of Mr. Nathan Straus removes from our national life a venerable figure which will be sadly missed, a Jewish leader whose vision of service transcended all limits of race or creed and philanthropist whose benefactions, especially in behalf of children, were of permanent value."

JOINED SERVICE IN 1892

Brig. Gen. F. A. Winter, distinguished retired surgeon of the United States Army, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital from heart disease after a lengthy illness. He was 63 years old.

Gen. Winter retired in 1922. During the World War he was chief surgeon with the American Expeditionary Force at the line of communications and was later chief surgeon of the A. E. F. in England. After the war he became commandant of the Army Medical School in Washington.

Born in Francisville, La., Gen. Winter received his education at St. Vincent's College, Cape Girardeau, Mo., Bethel Military Academy, Va., St. Louis University and St. Louis Medical College, where he received his M. D. degree.

He was appointed assistant surgeon of the United States Army, March 9, 1892; captain assistant surgeon, March 9, 1897; major surgeon, Thirty-seventh United States Infantry, July 5, 1899. He received an honorable discharge February 20, 1901.

clergyman, called at a New York police station and sought permission to take Dr. Reynolds' body to Philadelphia for burial. Mrs. Seitz and Mrs. Lang had previously telegraphed they would arrange the funeral.

Mr. Williamson said Dr. Reynolds had explained that he once was the head of flourishing churches in Baltimore, Philadelphia and Chicago, but did not volunteer the cause of his poverty.

Soon after the alleged slanderous remarks of Mrs. Lee, Dr. Reynolds filed suit against her for $100,000 but later withdrew it, saying, he could not prosecute the cause "as a Christian."

During the suit, Mrs. Lee identified as hers some ardent letters in which Shakespeare and other writers were quoted. In one of these, Mrs. Lee warned Dr. Reynolds against Mrs. Ford, "as being an adventuress."

The basis of the suit were remarks which Mrs. Lee was alleged to have made at a healing service conducted by Dr. Reynolds in a fashionable church near Washington Circle.

Dr. Reynolds left the Georgetown church soon after the suit was filed.

Police Hold Three In Holdup Inquiry

Trio Is Alleged to Have Plotted Robbery of Oyster Man.

Police yesterday were holding three men for investigation. They said that charges of attempted holdup and robbery would be placed against the three today.

The men, who gave their names as James Burke, 24, of Pittsburgh; John Richards, 23, of Philadelphia, and William T. Hardy, 30, of Washington, were arrested Saturday when Precinct Detective A. J. Mostyn received information that a man was waiting in an alley for Harry Maynard, proprietor of an oyster shop on Fourteenth street, near I northwest, in the rear of Maynard's shop. Mostyn said he found Burke brandishing a revolver.

At the entrance to the alley he found Richards, he said, and after questioning the pair at the station house, he arrested Hardy. An anonymous telephone call to police resulted in the arrests, police said.

Antarctic Discoveries Give Norway Priority, Says Envoy

Halvard H. Bachke, Norwegian Minister, in Radio Talk, Asserts His Government Opposes System of Dividing Up Polar Regions in Sectors.

Norway's views concerning the title to lands in the Antarctic region, a question which has gained increasing importance with the publication of results of the Byrd expedition to that area, were explained yesterday, by Halvard H. Bachke, Norwegian Minister to the United States, in an address over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The diplomat spoke from Washington in the weekly Conclave of Nations program. He was introduced by Senator Peter Norbeck of South Dakota.

"It can very well be said that no other country at present possesses such large economic interests in the the South Polar regions as Norway," the minister asserted. On the question of sovereignty he said:

"The Norwegian government is firmly opposed to this system of politically dividing up Arctica and Antarctica in sectors of quadrants and has made no concealment of its opposition thereto. The Norwegian government has not as yet claimed sovereignty to the territories discovered and taken possession of in the name of Norway by Amundsen during his stay in the South Polar regions, but it has made known that it considers these discoveries and annexations as constituting a valid base for a claim of priority in the acquisition of such territories whenever the requirements of international law as to effective occupation of a new territory shall have been fulfilled."

Mr. Bachke told of the deeds of Norwegian explorers in Antarctica, including the discovery of the South Pole by Roald Amundsen in 1911.

"Once we had explored these inhospitable regions, our knowledge of whaling and fishing made it possible for us to establish a whaling industry in the Antarctic seas, which is without any precedent. It employs a large fleet of floating factories, whale catchers and some transportation vessels. The crews of all these vessels amount today to about 10,000 men, almost exclusively Norwegians."

UNIT IN CHEST DRIVE HEADED BY PERSHING

Government Departments to Be Organized for First Time in History.

HOOVER APPROVED PLAN

Gen. John J. Pershing, war-time leader of the A. E. F., has consented to act as chairman of the governmental unit in the Community Chest campaign, according to an announcement yesterday by Edward F. Colladay, Community Chest campaign chairman.

Mr. Colladay also announced that John C. Koons, former Assistant Postmaster General, now vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has been appointed executive director of this unit, and Herbert L. Willett, jr., formerly with the Near East Relief and the Gorgas Memorial Foundation, is to be executive secretary.

Formation of the unit was made possible by an executive letter from President Hoover, asking that the time-honored rule of refusing to permit Government departments to be organized and solicited for any charitable purpose be rescinded in the case of the Community Chest. Every Cabinet officer has complied with the request of the President, as well as the heads of all the independent bureaus.

"We of the various Government services, drawing our subsistence from Washington and living either in the city or nearby, have as much right to participate in this great movement as any other residents of the Capital," said Gen. Pershing, in accepting the chairmanship.

This will mark the first time in history that the Government departments have been thrown open to organization and solicitation for any charitable purpose. The seriousness of the situation was placed before the Chief Executive and he was told that a crisis exists in Washington this year, which led to approval of the plan.

Under direction of Mr. Koons, the various departments and independent bureaus are being organized so that every employe will be given an opportunity to subscribe to the Community Chest.

Among the prominent division chairmen appointed to date are: Wilbur J. Carr, Assistant Secretary of State; C. E. Stewart, Assistant to the Attorney General, for the Department of Justice; Robe Carl White, Assistant Secretary, Department of Labor; Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury; R. W. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary, Department of Agriculture; Ernest L. Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Harold N. Graves, executive assistant, Postoffice Department; Frederick H Payne, Assistant Secretary, War Department; Maj. John B. Cutter, Assistant Director, Veterans' Administration; Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director, Office of Public Buildings and Grounds; George B. McGinty, secretary, Interstate Commerce Commission; Gen. C. M. Saltzman, chairman, Federal Radio Commission; A. L. Flint, general purchasing agent, the Panama Canal; James H. Van Wakeman, chairman, International Boundary Commission; Capt. D. B. Wainwright, jr., coordinator, Federal Coordinating Service; Capt. N. B. Farrell, Navy Yard; Maj. P. W. West, U. S. Soldiers' Home, and United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder, the judiciary. Marshal Snyder will appoint a vice chairman for each of the courts.

With a view of enlisting the Protestant pastors of the city in the 1931 Community Chest campaign, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Washington and chairman of the committee on Protestant cooperation for the Community Chest campaign, has invited the pastors of all Protestant churches to a luncheon meeting to be held today at 12:30 o'clock at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest. The Right Rev. William F. McDowell, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will preside at the luncheon.

Jimmie Cooper Presents a New Mystery Melodrama.

"THE BLUE GHOST."

Somewhere near the end of "The Blue Ghost," now on exhibit at the Belasco, a discerning customer remarked: "This thing is getting to be monotonous."

The remark was out of order. It should have been delivered just at the end of the first act—or, about the middle of the second act, when the hired hands of the press reached for their overcoats and hats and sadly made their way into the night.

Mr. Jimmie Cooper stands sponsor for "The Blue Ghost." Mr. Cooper is the gentleman who puts on burlesque shows, usually on display in the Gayety Theater. Just why this particular offering ever strayed away from the honky-tonk circuit is one of the mysteries of show business. In that sense it is a mystery play.

Students interested in cause and effect may get some enjoyment out of "The Blue Ghost," if there are any students interested in cause and effect. Outside of that there is precious little to be said for a makeshift piece of mystery melodrama that is not much of a mystery and no drama—unless the turning down of lights, the shrieking and yelling of spooks, and the firing of blank cartridges comes under the head of drama.

Troops Dig to Save 170 Buried in Slide

Little Hope Is Felt for the Victims of Ecuadorean Avalanche.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Railroad emergency crews worked feverishly today to extricate the bodies of 170 track laborers who were engulfed by a landslide along the Guayaquilquito Railroad yesterday, but had little hope of finding anyone alive. President Isidro Ayora sent troops to aid in the rescue work today.

Railroad officials said the slide was of such enormous proportions the normal movement of trains would be impeded for a month.

The men buried were removing the debris from an earlier slip when overwhelmed. The great mass of earth and stones poured over their bodies and into the river, thereby pushing a rush of waters toward the nearby town of Huigra, menacing it.

Fatal Shot Blamed On Drinking Party

Man Who Fired Gun Says Victim and Woman Began Fighting.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 11.—Otis Crank, Lynchburg, was shot and killed early this morning near Jacksontown, just outside the city limits. Tom Powell, of Campbell County, is to be charged with the shooting.

Powell, who claims he was struck by Crank, is at Memorial Hospital suffering from a scalp wound.

Powell said they both attended an all-night drinking party. This morning, he said, Crank and a woman began fighting and he tried to separate them, when Crank struck him and he fired the fatal shot. Crank is survived by his widow and three small children.

CROSS-SEA PLANES GREETED AT BAHIA

Squadron of 11 From Italy Halts on Coast Trip to Rio de Janeiro.

WILL LEAVE IN TWO DAYS

Bahia, Brazil, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Eleven Italian seaplanes, victors in a crossing of the South Atlantic last week, arrived here at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, thus completing the first stage of a triumphal flight along the coast to Rio de Janeiro.

Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, who is commander of the flight, and his companions received a warm welcome from city officials and the people, who cheered as the planes circled over Bahia before gliding down upon the bay.

The seaplanes, ten of which came from West Africa to Natal in 17 hours 18 minutes last week, the eleventh coming down at sea because of minor trouble, but joining them later, left Natal at 8:30 this morning.

The distance between the far northern point and Bahia is 560 miles, as flown by the mail planes of the Pan-American Airways, but the Italians went farther, to the City of Joao Pessoa (formerly Parahyba, capital of the state of the same name until named for a leader who was slain last summer), where Balbo dropped the following message:

"The Latin Fascist Aces, leaving immortal Rome and flying over the territory of a great sister nation, at the city of Joao Pessoa, bow before Brazil's martyr."

The flight was uneventful, except that the planes met headwinds most of the way to Pernambuco.

After two days at Bahia the Italians will go to Rio, where they will be honored guests of the government and the Italian colony.

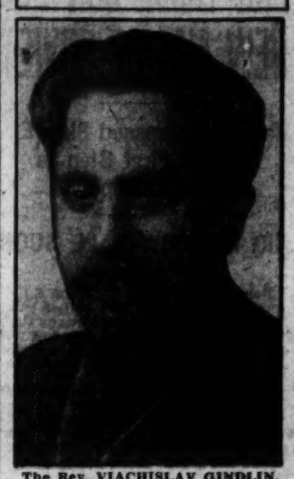
AIDS BENEFIT



The Rev. VIACHISLAV GINDLIN.

Russian Concert Is Also Planned to Aid Jobless in City.

A tiny church, located in the mid-city section of Washington, and with five years of effort and struggle for existence behind it, will be the beneficiary, along with unemployed workers of the city, of the Russian concert and the bal masque to be held in the Willard Hotel January 24, under the auspices of persons prominent in social and diplomatic circles.

Proceeds from the ball will go to St. Alexander's Russian Orthodox Church at 1317 Twelfth street northwest. The pastor of the church is Archpriest Father V. Gindlin, named to this church by Archbishop Metropolitan Platon, who was appointed head of the Orthodox Church in the United States and Canada by Patriarch Tikhon of Russia, now deceased.

The committee in charge of the ball is headed by Bojidar Stoianovitch, Attache at the Legation of Jugosalvia, and includes, among others, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. Robert L. Owens, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Gen. William E. Horton, Commissioner Harry E. Hull and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend.

PLANE'S FALL FATAL TO GUARD SERGEANT

MACHINE HITS CHANNEL

Philadelphia, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A sergeant was killed and a lieutenant saved himself in a parachute as a Pennsylvania National Guard airplane dropped 2,500 feet into the back channel at the Philadelphia Navy Yard today.

Sergt. Garland C. Brantley, 30, of Newtown Square, Pa., was the man killed. The pilot of the plane was Lieut. Albert F. Santa Maria, 40, of Ardmore, a former Royal Flying Corps pilot, of England, who was giving Brantley a flying lesson.

Santa Maria dropped from the plane in his parachute after the machine had plunged to within 1,000 feet of the earth. His parachute caught on a trestle, leaving him hanging 125 feet in the air before sailors could release him.

Brantley was killed when the plane hit the water. Officials of the navy yard were unable to explain why he, too, did not leap, as he had a parachute.

Santa Maria said that something went wrong with the controls of the plane, and that he was unable to fix them.

Mexican Planter Kidnaped.

Mexico City, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—El Universal dispatches from Guadalajara said today that a rich plantation owner named Cuquio has been kidnaped by bandits who threatened death if 10,000 pesos (about $4,800) were not paid. The family prepared to provde the ransom.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Deweys Dined At Legation by Polish Envoy

Greeted by Many on Return From Sojourn at Warsaw.

AGAIN the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Filipowicz have brightened an otherwise dull Sunday evening with a dinner. Last evening they entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, who are visiting here. The Deweys recently returned from Poland, where for years Mr. Dewey was financial adviser to the Polish government.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey were popular during their sojourn in Warsaw. Mr. Dewey so endeared himself to official Warsaw that when he advised on readjustments in the financial system, no matter how it "went against the grain," his counsel was accepted in a friendly spirit.

Their daughter, Mrs. Frederick Alger, then Miss Suzette Dewey, was married in Warsaw, the event being among the outstanding social functions of that season. The family's departure from Poland caused genuine regret, for each had a definite place in the life of the Polish capital.

The dinner last evening was unusually interesting, for it offered many of the guests a first opportunity to greet Mme. Filipowciz, recently returned from Europe, and to welcome the Deweys, who are stopping at the Mayflower.

Other guests were the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, under whom Mr. Dewey served as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury before his appointment to Poland; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, Mrs. John R. Williams and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Rawls, of Aiken, S. C., who are visting her; Mr. and Mrs. Gist Blair, Dr. and Mrs. E. Dana Durand, Mr. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Shattuck, of New York; Mr. George Harrison, of New York; Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benning Spencer, Mr. Robert Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, Mrs. George Mesta, and members of the embassy staff.

The French Ambassador, M. Paul Claudel, will be the guest of honor on Sunday evening, when the Bureau of Commercial Economics will present a film at the Shoreham Hotel at 9 o'clock. The Military Attache for Aeronautics of the French Embassy, Maj. Georges Thenault, will speak during the film presentation on "The City of Pau, Southern France; Mohammedan Paradise, the French Sahara; Le Touquet-Paris Plage, and the Blue Bird."

Capt. and Mrs. Hugh W. Rowan and their daughter will sail for Europe tomorrow on the Leviathan. After a short stay in England, where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Archibald H. Rowan at their country home in Surrey, they will go to Berlin, where Capt. Rowan has been detailed as Assistant Military Attache at the American Embassy.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver E. Pagan entertained at dinner last evening in honor of Justice and Mrs. Oscar R. Luhring. The other guests were Justice and Mrs. Charles Robb, Justice and Mrs. Josiah van Orsdel, Justice and Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Representative and Mrs. Richard Yates, Mrs. John Henderson, Miss Kasa Spellman, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Christian, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Dodds, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Mr. Day, Mr. William Smith and Mr. Oliver Pagan 3d.

Mrs. William O. Hankins and her son, William O., jr., of Danville, Va., are visiting Maj. and Mrs. Hampden Wilson, Mrs. Hankins' parents.

The following Washingtonians are stopping at Hotel Everglades, at Miami, Fla.: J. H. Lawrence, Maj. and Mrs. Willis Hale and their daughter, Mrs. Polly S. Nevin and her son; Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Rabbit, Frank Frost, Commander A. H. Douglas, of the U. S. Naval Station; Lieut. Frank Ward, Commander F. Ceres.

Will Be Married

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS ALICE ELIZABETH HERSEY, daughter of Maj. Gen. Murk L. Hersey, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Hersey, who has announced her engagement to Mr. Richard M. Wick.

Mrs. Runyon Coming Here For Musicale

She and Daughter Will Be Mrs. Townsend's Guests This Week.

Mrs. Clarkson Runyon and her debutante daughter, Miss Jane Runyon, of New York, will come to Washington tomorrow to be the guests of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend and to attend the morning musicale Wednesday, at which Mme. Claudia Muzio will be one of the artists. Mrs. Runyon has been interested in Mme. Muzio since she sang with the Metropolitan Opera. They will attend Mrs. Townsend's luncheon, which follows the concert.

On January 27, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice and Miss Julia Berwind, of New York and Newport, will come here for a concert the following day, and a luncheon to be given in honor of Beniamino Gigli, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, and Mme. Aida Doninelli, lyric soprano, also of the Metropolitan.

Last spring Mr. and Mrs. Rice entertained at one of the most outstanding musicales of the New York season, when Mr. Gigli and Miss Otero gave the program. They will stop in Washington en route to Palm Beach.

Mlle. Reine Claudel and her brother, M. Pierre Claudel, daughter and son of the French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel, have returned from New York where, on Saturday evening, they were guests of Miss Marion Rumsey Cartier at a dinner dance in the salon of the Seaglade at the St. Regis. Among other guests were Mr. Marc Peter, jr., son of the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, who makes his home at New York; the First Secretary of the French Embassy, M. Pierre Henri de la Blanchetai, and Miss Natalie Mai Coe, who recently visited in Washington.

Mr. Louis P. Hall, accompanied by Mrs. Hall and their three children, is sailing for Europe on the Leviathan tomorrow. Mr. Hall is returning to his post in Paris, where he is trade commissioner.

Senor Jose M. Coronado, Charge d'Affaires of Colombia, will be guest of honor this evening at a large dinner given by members of the staff of the Pan-American Union at the Shoreham.

Senor Coronado was a member of the Pan-American staff for years. His former colleagues are honoring him in recognition of his ability in representing his country. It is expected there will be about 60 guests.

Mrs. George Steele, wife of Capt. Steele, Naval Attache of the American Embassy at Paris, has left for Switzerland, where her son, John Dupuy, is at school.

Club to Honor President and The First Lady

Invitation Issued for Reception, Tuesday, January 20.

The President and Mrs. Hoover are the guests in whose honor the Congressional Club has issued invitations for a reception, Tuesday evening, January 20, at 9 o'clock, at the club, on New Hampshire avenue.

Mrs. Arthur L. Willard, wife of Vice Admiral Willard, is stopping at 2400 Sixteenth street. At the end of the month, Mrs. Willard will sail for Panama to join the admiral, who is there with the Atlantic fleet. Mrs. Willard will remain about six weeks before returning to Newport. Admiral Willard was formerly commandant of the Washington Navy Yard.

The winter exodus, halted momentarily by the funeral ceremonies for Marshal Joffre, has been stimulated anew by the weather, but the American Embassy circle has become more active with the return of Ambassador and Mrs. Walter E. Edge.

Recently Mrs. Edge, with Mrs. Norman Armour, wife of the First Secretary of the Embassy, acted as sponsor when Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, wife of the First Secretary of the American Embassy at London, was elected a member of the Comite France-Amerique. Mrs. Thaw will be remembered for her several years of popularity in Washington, and as one of the handsome Morgan sisters, the other being Lady Furness and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt. Mr. Thaw recently was transferred from his post at Paris to London.

Mr. and Mrs. Thaw frequently are seen with the Prince of Wales at London and Paris.

The following officers were installed at a recent meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives Relief Society of Denver, at the Jewish Community Center: President, Mrs. William Levy; vice president, Mrs. Harry Sherby; second vice president, Mrs. Alexander Koplin; third vice president, Mrs. Charles Goldsmith; recording secretary, Mrs. Jack Veax; financial secretary, Mrs. Barney Robins; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Joseph Millenson, and treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Kaminsky.

Mr. Isadore Hershfield gave an interesting talk about the activities of the society.

Jangled Nerves?

IT doesn't pay to go galumphing through life sleeping on an old mattress. You know how they get old and crochetedy. They lose resiliency—pack so that elbows and shoulders and arms get numb. They don't conform to the body. Every time you turn over (and we change our sleeping positions on an average 34 times a night) it takes ages for us to get comfortable again.

Why don't you let us make a coil spring mattress out of your old one? You'll sleep on layers of downy felt supported by resilient coil springs that cushion every curve. You'll admit after one night that you never knew what sleep comfort meant before.

The cost is only $12.50 to $22.50. Isn't that a trifle to pay for 20 years of slumberjoy?

THE RED CROSS APPEAL.

The public will gladly respond to President Hoover's appeal for $10,000,000 to provide for Red Cross ministrations in the drought regions. If more than this sum should be needed it will be contributed. The people will not permit starvation to bring to death any citizen under the flag if they are given a method to carry relief. The Red Cross is the only suitable means for distributing relief, and the largesse of the public is the only proper source of Red Cross revenue.

Congress has no authority to take money from the Treasury with which to feed the people in the States. The Federal Government can not be made the almoner of the States without creating an evil as great as hunger itself. If invasion and defeat stared the country in the face there might be an excuse for rupturing the Constitution and making the Government the supporter of the people, but there is no present excuse for this outrage of law and order. The people can take care of their own, and they can take care of the Government, too.

The attempt to take tax money required to maintain the Government and use it as a dole for needy citizens is a defiance of the Constitution and common sense. Congress should sweep away this nonsense. It should confine Federal aid to loans, all of them to be repaid to the Treasury. Money exacted from the people by taxation is officially stolen when it is diverted from the uses prescribed by the Constitution. There is no occasion for misappropriating funds in order to feed the needy of Arkansas or any other State. Let Congress employ tax money to maintain the Government, and let charity begin and end where it belongs—at home, among the people.

Taking money from the Treasury to finance the Red Cross would be a misappropriation of tax receipts.

Congress can not set up a charity relief organization without wasting valuable time as well as stolen funds. The starving can not live long enough for all the red tape to unwind. The Red Cross is already in the field. Its chapters are composed of citizens in each community who are familiar with local conditions. No graft, no swollen salary list, no stealing of food from the starving is possible under the Red Cross system. All of this would be possible under the scheme proposed by the Caraway amendment. But the scheme could not go into operation for several weeks, during which many lives would be sacrificed. Then would come embezzlement, bootlegging of supplies, bloated salaries, official dereliction and negligence, and other scandals resulting from the unsystematic and sudden distribution of millions of dollars.

The bill appropriating $45,000,000 for loans to drought-stricken farmers has been held up by the attempt to set up a Government charity organization financed from the Treasury. The House and Senate ought to shake off this attempt without another day's delay. The legislators who persist in this attempt are working ruin to farmers who might extricate themselves if they could obtain immediate loans.

RICHES FOR PHILANTHROPY.

Every year the sum of philanthropic bequests grows larger. In spite of adverse economic conditions last year New Yorkers bequeathed $36,985,396 to altruistic ends. This is $10,000,000 more than was set aside for this purpose in wills filed for probate in that city in 1929. In addition more than $50,000,000 was given by living donors for schools, hospitals, children's agencies and homes for the aged. This is a splendid showing for a single city.

The growing tendency of wealthy individuals to devote part of their fortunes to the welfare of humanity makes an interesting commentary on civilization. Most men who yearning to help smooth the way toward human happiness. Hardly any of them make provision for administering charity, but they do seek means of improving conditions and of removing the causes of poverty and distress.

Methods of spending such money have been greatly improved during recent years. It was once the custom for wealthy donors to establish memorials to themselves. But the modern custom is to endow worthy establishments already in operation, or to intrust the expenditure of the bequest to a group qualified to know how it can be best applied. Some donors have even insisted that their fortunes be spent within a specified period to avoid financing some agency that might outlive its usefulness.

In the growing popularity of altruistic endowments can be seen a trace of the philosophy that a wide distribution of wealth works to the benefit of all. When men who have spent their lives in creating wealth turn a large share of it to education, research, investigation, &c., the benefits are diffused throughout the whole country. They become a most wholesome influence in modern society.

THE SENATE'S FUTILE GESTURE.

Senators who attempted to intimidate the President and take over the power to remove Federal officers now sheepishly acknowledge that it would be a "futile gesture" to vote to reject the nomination of officers who have been confirmed and are in office.

The whole plan to punish these Federal officers by distorting the purpose of a Senate rule was a "futile gesture." The threat to besmirch President Hoover as a hireling of the power trust unless he acceded to the Senate's demand was a "futile gesture." His exposure of this political plot was so effectual that his assailants now deny that they intended to accuse him of betrayal of trust. The record stands against them. Senator Norris, with more hardihood than his insurgent colleagues, bluntly asserted that President Hoover was on the side of the power trust.

Several senators voted for the recall of the nominations because they were not willing to resolve their doubts against a Senate rule. Now that the fact has been made clear that a Senate rule can not remove Federal officers, these senators can not be expected to follow the President's assailants into further folly. One rebuff, resulting in the humiliation of the Senate by exposing its ignorance of the Constitution, is enough for some senators. Others, like Mr. Brookhart, may proclaim that the Senate can make rules in violation of the Constitution, but they will be merely making "futile gestures" if they do.

The plan to convince the country that a group of senators is the only guardian of the public against a rapacious "power trust" comes to an inglorious fizzle. Insofar as the plan included an attempt to dishonor the President of the United States it brands the perpetrators themselves with dishonor. The commissioners chosen by the President and confirmed by the Senate are special guardians of the public interest in power matters. The law requires them to select their own assistants. The Senate has found that it can not browbeat these commissioners into appointing the proteges of certain senators. Assistants will be chosen on their own merits. The presumption that the proteges of certain senators merit appointment is now destroyed by the action of the Senate, and the public would look with disfavor upon the restoration of those particular persons. The public interest can be safeguarded by others who would not be charged with serving senators first and the public afterward.

In this Government of checks and balances it is a wholesome thing when an attempt at usurpation of power is put down with promptness and finality. Certain senators who have posed as constitutional authorities have lost their prestige as lawyers, and may be expected to think twice before they again resort to unconstitutional methods in an attempt to browbeat the President.

PRICE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS.

The dairy advisory committee, organized under the agricultural marketing act to represent dairy cooperative associations, at a meeting held in Washington this week adopted a resolution calling for a reduction in the retail price of dairy products, especially city market milk, in harmony with the reduced cost of raw material. The reduced buying power of the public in the present depression, according to the committee, has resulted in a constantly declining demand for dairy products, with the result that farm prices for such products have declined until they now stand at a level beneath the cost of production. The retail price has not declined in the same percentage. The call for price cuts obviously is made in the hope of stimulating the consumption of dairy products.

When the agricultural marketing act became effective a hue and cry arose from commission men and wholesalers of farm products against the use of Government funds to set up agencies in direct competition with their businesses. One of the salient objects of the marketing act, however, was to cut down the size of the machine required to get a unit of farm produce to the consumer's table and to set up machinery whereby the spread between farm and retail prices might be reduced and the savings passed on in part, at least, to the individual farmer. If the situation revealed by the resolution of the advisory committee is true it illustrates one of the evils that have for years affected adversely the economic position of the farmer. In the face of falling price levels for dairy products the distributing agencies through concerted action have apparently maintained the retail price at an artificially high level while they have taken every opportunity to reduce the prices paid the farmer for his product. Falling price levels have affected adversely the return of the farmer without benefiting the consumer, but greatly benefiting the distributor. This was one of the evils the agricultural marketing act was expected to remedy. Such a situation constitutes the best possible argument for the setting up of cooperative marketing associations.

The advisory committee, of course, in passing the resolution dealt in generalities. Locally, housewives report that the price of dairy products is coming down. Butter to- than it has for years. But the housewives of other cities apparently have not fared so well.

A resolution calling for general reductions in retail prices of dairy products may or may not produce tangible results. It should, however, stir the interest of Congress and of the Federal Trade Commission. Are profiteers taking advantage of falling price levels to exploit both the producers of farm products and the consuming public? Is there need for Federal intervention in the food markets in the interest of ameliorating the misery and distress that is abroad throughout the land?

MINNESOTA'S PRESS GAG.

"The freedom of speech and of the press should remain inviolate, and any law which constitutes an entering wedge into that inviolability is unsafe," says Gov. Floyd B. Olson, of Minnesota, in recommending repeal of the law which attempts to limit freedom of the press in that State. Gov. Olson as county prosecutor was responsible for application of this law which resulted in the destruction of a Minnesota newspaper. The fact that he is now advocating its repeal encourages the hope that the legislature will soon remove this stigma from the statute books.

Repeal of the law is necessary because the State Supreme Court held it to be constitutional. It is difficult to understand how such a law was enacted in a country where freedom of the press and of speech is everywhere guaranteed. Now that the people of Minnesota have had a demonstration of how a judge, under this statute, can put a newspaper out of business without trial by jury, it seems impossible that the law will be allowed to stand.

When a newspaper alleged to publish "malicious, scandalous and defamatory matter" can be destroyed by a court injunction, freedom of the press has disappeared. Any judge who has a grievance against a publication might crush it. This Minnesota statute is so obviously vicious that it is unworthy of a modern State. If the legislature does not repeal the act, its validity should be brought to a test in the United States Supreme Court.

NOTABLE FLIGHTS OF 1930.

From the New York Times.

Aviation closed its ledger of 1930 with sharply clipped wings, insofar as production of planes is concerned, but turns the yet unmarked page of the new year with a record of remarkable gains and of solid achievement in practically every other phase of the conquest of the air. Progress all along the line marked aeronautics, in both its heavier-than-air and lighter-than-air branches, in the United States and abroad during 1930. This was manifest in the extension of airlines, in a notable increase in passenger carrying, in accomplishment of sensational distance flights over land and water, in the stepping-up of speeds and in improvements in planes, motors and in the radio aids to flight to increase both safety and comfort.

During the twelvemonth just ended the North Atlantic and the South Atlantic were both conquered by air by planes and dirigibles. The westward passage from Europe to the United States was made successfully by airplane no less than three times. Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith having flown his veteran Fokker, Southern Cross, from Australia to Ireland, thence hopped with his companions, Van Dyk, Stannage and Saul, to Newfoundland and, after refueling, in another single flight to Roosevelt Field, Long Island.

Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, instructor at the pilots' school at Sylt, took off unheralded on what was ostensibly a training flight with three members of his organization, Zimmer, Albrecht and Hack, and, flying by stages by way of Iceland, Greenland and Nova Scotia, brought his Dornier Wal to the waters of New York Harbor.

Finally, Capt. Dieudonne Coste, with his second on previous record flights, Maurice Bellonte, shook the dust of France from the wheels of his huge Breguet, the Question Mark, after months of careful preparation, and, despite fog and storm, held the air until he had set them down on Curtiss Airport, Valley Stream, Long Island, in the first unbroken flight from the soil of the Old World to that of the United States; a return salute for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's New York-Paris flight of 1927. Coste's westward winging has been hailed as perhaps the greatest flight, from the point of view of preparation and execution, in the history of aviation.

Notable flights in 1930, not involving the ocean crossings, were many. They included both distance flights and speed flights. Women as well as men were the pilots. Col. Lindbergh, accompanied by his wife, flew in his Lockheed-Sirius from Los Angeles to New York in 14 hours 45 minutes, making one stop, breaking the existing coast record. But it was not long to be his. Capt. Frank M. Hawks, holder of the nonstop record in both directions, sent his Travelair Mystery S, hurtling from west to east in 12 hours 25 minutes 3 seconds and then proceeded to break a whole series of intercity records in this fastest of commercial planes.

He flew to New York from Detroit in 2 hours 45 minutes; from Washington in 58 minutes; from Boston in 53 minutes; from Philadelphia in 20 minutes. Capt. Hawks believes that the speeds around 4 miles a minute which he has set up are practical ones for certain phases of aviation, and can be used in a "pony express" service of the air between cities and from coast to coast.

Other notable flights of the year included those of the DO-X to Lisbon, and of the Junkers G-38, largest land plane, round Europe; the first nonstop hop to Panama, made by Capt. Roy W. Ammel from Barren Island, New York's municipal airport, to France Field; Miss Amy Johnson's remarkable solo flight from London to Australia in 19 days; Kingsford-Smith's breaking of the record over the same route when he reached the Antipodes in 9 days 23½ hours; Miss Ruth Nicholls' recent flight from Pacific to Atlantic in 16 hours 59½ minutes; the first flight of Capt. Lewis H. Yancey, with Zeb Bouck and William Alexander as pilot, to Bermuda, where the seaplane Pilot Radio landed and spent the night on and took off from the open sea, and the flight of Roger Q. Williams, Capt. Boyd and Lieut. Connor in the veteran Bellanca Columbia to Bermuda and return

REFUGEE.

At times when I have fled the wintry blast,
The drifted snows and dull, dark skies of gray,
As one who from some terror runs away
To hide in safety till the danger's passed,
Seeking the sands of summer where are cast
Soft waves of pleasure round the feet of play,
I find myself beneath the laughter gay,
Wishing I'd not been frightened quite so fast.
Sunshine and safety and the constant blue
Of cloudless skies of summertime have palled,
I want once more to battle to be called;
To stand and brave a blizzard's fury through,
And then I'd trade the coward's peace I know
Upon my cheeks to feel the norther blow.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

IF you are not more fortunate than the majority of your fellows, there will come a time in your life when you must choose between disloyalty to a friend and disloyalty to your standards of right.

Some well-loved friends, with whom you have associated on terms of moral equality—whose companionship you have enjoyed without misunderstandings or misgivings—whose ideals and convictions have seemed as decent as your own—will stoop to some dishonor or immorality that you could not forgive in any one else.

He will hide the truth from you, and you will be the last to believe him guilty, but in time his guilt will be established and your day of testing will be at hand.

What shall you do?

If he had merely broken a law or surrendered to some temptation and now felt contrite and shamed, your course would be clear. The very minimum of decency would require you to remain loyal. Your love for him would multiply to meet his greater need.

But his wrongdoing is an established practice—a way of life of which you believed him incapable—a violation of honor for pleasure or profit, deliberate and habitual.

Should you forsake him? Alas! he has already forsaken you.

Your friendship was a spiritual contract based on the assumption that each of you would continue faithful to the ideals and standards that served as the foundation of your mutual interest.

The terms of the contract could not be changed without mutual consent, and your friend's violation of the terms left you no choice in the matter.

He did the choosing. He was offered a choice between your respect and the profit to be gained from evil, and he chose the profit.

He valued your love and comradeship less than he valued the advantages he could gain by shaming you.

How can he accuse you of disloyalty if you continue to stand where you always have stood? You have not changed. The change has been in him. You have not moved. It was he that descended to lower levels.

Would he magnify the wrong he has done you by asking you to share his guilt by condoning it? Does he value you so little that he would drag you down to the lower level he has chosen?

Then you are well quit of him. Loyalty doesn't require lying in a gutter of the other fellow's choosing.

Senator Davis' Seat.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

According to reports in Washington yesterday, Senator Nye will initiate a movement next week designed to deprive Senator Davis of his seat on the ground of excessive expenditures in his primary and election campaigns. The people of Pennsylvania will not view such a movement with complacency. They have known what it is to go for years with only half representation in the Senate and they are quite aware of the peculiar prejudice entertained by the North Dakota senator and his fellow Western insurgents against all things Pennsylvanian.

In this instance there was wide condemnation by those of both parties of Mr. Nye's original attempt to bar Senator Davis from the seat to which he was duly elected. The investigation since conducted by Mr. Nye's committee has disclosed no evidence or even suggestion of illegal or improper expenditures in Mr. Davis' behalf. It is well known that of the total amount reported as spent for the Brown-Davis ticket in the primary a comparatively small portion was devoted to the senator's candidacy. Opinions differ as to the amount of money which ought to be expended in a political campaign in a State as large as Pennsylvania. But whatever the opinion, no Federal law governs primary outlays. It is to be hoped the Senate will stand firmly against Mr. Nye's proposal to nullify, through an extra-constitutional procedure, the choice of a senator made by a sovereign State.

Crooked Congressmen.

Topeka Capital.

Those who fondly imagine that the statesmen who founded our Government were more honest and self-sacrificing than the statesmen of the present might ponder over this historical fact: When the first Congress convened, continental currency was hardly worth the paper it was printed on. It had, however, been issued by the Continental Congress and Alexander Hamilton insisted that the credit of the new Government should be maintained and its currency redeemed at par. When it became evident that Congress would pass the redemption measure, couriers went out and gathered up the currency held by Revolutionary soldiers and others for a song. In those days there were no railroads and no daily newspapers. News did not get around fast. After the measure did pass, it was discovered that most of the members of Congress who voted for it had Continental scrip or currency in their pockets when they voted.

Scrambling the Presidency.

Utica Press.

Norris is not the first statesman to criticise the electoral college and suggest or propose a change. But the criticisms and substitutes have never enlisted any important following in Congress or among the public. Making the race for the Presidency a free-for-all for which any one may enter, may be the senator's idea of democracy, but the country would not long consent to be ruled by Presidents such chance would be likely to give it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Why Not Open Army to More Enlisted Men as Aid to Unemployment? "No!" Thunders the Pacifist. "Let Them Starve First!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The national defense act of June 4, 1920, provided for the maintenance of a Regular Army of 280,000 enlisted men. Since 1921 the strength of the Regular Army has been successively reduced from 280,000 to less than 120,000. The present strength of the Regular Army is entirely inadequate to serve as an agency for facilitating a general mobilization and for its many peace-time duties as outlined in the recent report of Gen. Summerall, retiring chief of staff.

As an aid to unemployment why not have Congress appropriate enough money to bring the enlisted strength of the Army up to 280,000 men? The increased strength to be for one year and open to men regardless of dependents. This would permit at least 150,000 men to enlist for one year.

Benefits to unemployment? Transfer 150,000 men from the ranks of the unemployed to the ranks of the Army; as the soldier is fed, clothed from the skin out, housed, given medical attention, &c., in addition to his pay, and, as the minimum monthly wage is $21, each man enlisting could keep $8 per month for spending money and make a monthly allotment of $15 to his dependents aggregating $2,225,000 each month to be sent by Army paymasters to the dependents in each State of the Union; the Government would need to let new contracts for clothing of all kinds for these 150,000 recruits, for food to feed them, for medical supplies, for fuel, light, shelter, arms, ammunition, animals, forage of all kinds, and other needed supplies.

This would not, in itself, solve the problem of unemployment, but it would do much to oil the wheels of business in every category, and would train 150,000 men for the future defense of their country, sending them back to their homes improved in health and better citizens.

Of course, this obvious and simple remedy will never be applied. Why? For three reasons: First, because it possesses no appeal to the average politician; second, because it is in conflict with the economy flowl which has always made the Army and the Navy the goat; and, third, because the dyed-in-the-wool pacifists would rather have 150,000 people starve than receive military training.

A Moment Should Be Allotted to Pedestrians to Cross Street in Safety—Boston Does It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Quite often I have gone downtown via Lafayette Square, the front of the Treasury, crossing Fifteenth street at G street.

At that intersection, Fifteenth and G streets, no protection whatsoever is provided for the walking public. When the light is green for Fifteenth street traffic, it is obvious that no one can cross with any legal protection of any kind. When the light is green for Pennsylvania avenue traffic it is also obvious that no one can cross with legal protection of any kind, said traffic being routed via Fifteenth street.

In Boston they furnish protection in downtown sections of the city by having all auto traffic stopped for one minute out of each three minutes, taking turns. Automobile traffic north and south bound goes for one minute; automobile traffic east and west bound goes for one minute; then pedestrian traffic for one minute. Boston is an industrial city, where time is more valuable than it is here. Yet we do not care for our own, and our visitors, as Boston, a city where time is more valuable, cares for its own and its visitors.

The whole thing revolves on this: Should we refuse to grant pedestrian residents and visitors protection, even if it should cost us a few minutes a day?

WALKER CHAPMAN.

Social Disorder Criticized for Permitting Corruption of Youth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allowing for a changed environment that governs our customs and mode of living, I do believe that public interest in present conditions should be more of a personal nature if the youth of our Nation are to have respect for law and order and the preservation of American ideals.

Current literature clearly indicates conditions of a nature to warrant alarm. Disrespect for law and order, a neglect of home environment and a failure to practice Christian principles inculcated in youth, are now the rule. Laws should be considered for the control of forces opposed to our form of government. Efforts should be directed to a more personal interest by parents and organizations in home training and church teaching, with particular stress upon the danger of many social affairs not properly chaperoned, automobile trips of a questionable character, and week-end parties in a wicked environment.

The above is not in criticism of our youth, but rather in criticism of the social disorder. Conditions must be corrected if the generation to follow is to be representative of American principles. Any nation without faith and character can not hope to progress.

Danger of Impaired Health of Federal Employes in New Buildings With Small Windows.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thousands of the present and future residents of the District of Columbia will have to spend most of their lives in the New Internal Revenue and Commerce Buildings.

Has the Government protected their health and welfare in these buildings? I have seen nothing in the newspapers commensurate with the importance and interest of the subject.

Judging from the smallness of the windows and their spacing far apart, and the number of courts and deeply set columns, the health and comfort of the workers have been sacrificed to produce a certain architectural effect desired by a few faddists.

PROGRESS IS NOTED IN STEEL INDUSTRY

Bankers and Executives Are Now Looking to Spring for Recovery.

AUTO OUTPUT INCREASES

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Industry was earnestly engaged in the past week with getting back to work after the interruptions of the year end.

Progress was particularly notable in the steel industry, in which operations are still expanding. But numerous miscellaneous lines as well were finding in the abnormal depletion of inventories an automatic impetus toward increased activity.

Nevertheless, business sentiment remained cautious, and executives were distinctly inclined to keep their feet on the ground. The pickup thus far has been in the main merely the usual resumption of activity after inventory shutdowns, and starting from an extremely low level, it has not gone far toward overcoming depression.

Passing of Worst Seen.

But bankers and executives were largely agreed that spring is the time in which to look for recovery, and felt that in the meantime there is sufficient reason to believe the bottom has been touched to maintain the better feeling which has come with the new year. Furthermore, Col. Arthur Woods, heading President Hoover's employment committee, believes this month should see the passing of the worst in that situation.

Retail trade appears to be making response to intensive January sales efforts. Merchants report that lowered prices are bringing purchasers who have been hesitant for some time. The New York automobile show resulted in a substantial increase in sales over last year's show.

The steel news was generally encouraged by a stiffening of steel scrap prices and increasing orders, although ordering thus far has been largely in small lots for quick consumption. Early this week the industry was back above 40 per cent of capacity in its rate of ingot output, or back to the level of the end of November, and further substantial gains are expected this week. Reopening of some of United States Steel's mills is expected to boost the corporation's output perhaps as much as 7 per cent.

Unfilled Orders Gain.

Its unfilled orders in December increased 303,960 tons. All plants in the Youngstown area are expected to increase aggregate output by about 5 per cent.

Commodity prices during the past week were marked by some improvement in agricultural prices, notably live stock. Copper, silver, lead and cement, however, were among numerous industrial products to show recession. While the domestic market for copper was very quiet, the export price was reduced to a domestic basis of 10 cents, or off ½ cent. Silver dropped below 30 cents, but recovered substantially yesterday, perhaps in response to reports of the development of plans to stabilize the metal to improve trade with the Far East.

Statistics appearing for December reflected little but the extreme quiet of that month, already well known. Automobile output, however, showed a fair increase, against the normal seasonal trend, and despite the shutdown of the Ford Motor Co. plants late in the month. The upturn was primarily due to the early start made by the Chevrolet division of General Motors. Freight car loadings, as reported for the last full week of the month, were the lowest in several years, but again showed less than the normal seasonal drop.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—New municipal financing scheduled for this week totaled $51,485,505, compared with offerings of $18,933,000 in that classification last week, the Bond Buyer reports. The total to be awarded included a $30,000,000 Province of Ontario 4½ per cent issue scheduled for Tuesday. Domestic issues amount to $21,485,505, of which the largest is an issue of $15,000,000 Arkansas six-month notes for highway construction, scheduled for Thursday. Tulsa, Okla., will place an issue of $1,750,000 improvement bonds Friday.

The average yield of all active cash dividend-paying stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange was 8.0 per cent at the beginning of January, according to the monthly compilation by Moody's. This contrasts with the peak of around 9.5 per cent reached at the middle of December and the average of 8.35 per cent on the first of that month.

Northeast Appliance Corporation, manufacturers of automotive equipment, and the Delco-Light Co., makers of individual electric plants, water and gas systems, have consolidated their activities in a new corporation, the Delco Appliance Corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors.

Dissolution of General Baking Corporation, after the exchange of its common and preferred stock for common and preferred stock of General Baking Co., the operating unit is proposed.

A group headed by Harris, Forbes & Co. has purchased for early public offering an issue of $4,000,000 Texas Power & Light Co. first and refunding mortgage gold bonds, 5 per cent, due 1956.

A group of bankers are offering today at 98 and interest an additional issue of $25,000,000 Pacific Gas & Electric Co. first and refunding mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds, series F, due 1960. The bonds are to yield 4⅝. A majority of the funds obtained from these will be used to retire certain bonds and recently acquired companies bearing a higher rate of interest.

Public offering is scheduled today of $34,984,000 Detroit Edison Co. general and refunding mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds, series D, due 1961, at 100 and interest, yielding 4½ per cent, and $3,000,000 Arkansas Power & Light Co. first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds, due October 1, 1956, at 98 and interest, yielding 5.14 per cent.

Motor vehicle registration and gasoline taxes have increased 510 per cent since 1921, according to the 1931 edition of "Highway Tax Costs," compiled by John E. Walker, former special assistant on taxation to the Secretary of the Treasury, which was released today by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The survey says that registration and gasoline taxes on highway vehicles now practically equal the total expenditures for State highways and are almost twice the maintenance costs of all State and local highways.

A. G. Spalding & Bros. today reported for the fiscal year ended October 31, net profit of $1,635,484, equal to $3.74 per share on the common, against net of $2,050,417, equal to $4.90 per share for the previous fiscal year.

STOCKS MAINTAIN FIRM MOVEMENTS

Share Mart Seems to Have Completed Early Phase of Recovery.

CREDIT AGAIN CHEAPENS

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—The taking up of the holiday slack in industry during the past week has bolstered the financial markets.

Sentiment in Wall street has been particularly cheered by the maintenance of a good investment demand for bonds, which has spilled over into preferred stocks. The equity share market appeared to have completed a phase of recovery, and to have stalled at dead center, but at least it did not have the substantial technical reaction which was expected in some quarters.

Resumption of activity in the steel and automobile industries was cheering, although an automatic comeback after the holidays is a regular development. In addition, however, the steel industry found grounds for real encouragement in the firm tone of the scrap market, and motor manufacturers were pleased with the results of the New York motor show.

Steel Operations Gain.

Steel operations early in the week were back above 40 per cent of capacity, and the figures for next week are expected to show another substantial gain.

Bonds made good progress during most of the week, although a fair volume of new financing took the edge off the listed market toward the end. Shares showed a firm tone much of the time, but ended the week only 3-5 of a point above the end of the preceding week, as measured by the price index of 90 shares.

The investment market was helped by further cheapening of credit. Call money held at 1½ per cent all the week, with large offerings unofficially made at 1 per cent. Some 30-day time money was offered at low as 1¾ per cent.

Rediscount Rates Cut.

Chicago, San Francisco, St. Louis and Atlanta Reserve Banks brought their rediscount rates down from 3½ to 3 per cent.

In view of the fact that the stock market has made a recovery of about 10 points from its December lows, some traders looked for a substantial corrective reaction, but the advance was well-maintained. Opinion varied as to whether the steady tone of the market represented a resting spell, or efforts to distribute stock bought for support purposes around the December lows.

At any rate, there was no real pressure of liquidation at any time, and while the prospect of having to digest unfavorable earnings statements and dividend announcements made traders cautious, optimists pointed out that the worst was undoubtedly known, and that the actual bad news might in many cases be expected to precipitate more short covering than fresh selling.

Colored Police Precinct Urged.

A colored police precinct in the District of Columbia, a project introduced by the Rev. H. R. Randolph, of the A. M. E. Zion Church, was urged by the Hillsdale Citizens Association at its last meeting.

INVESTMENT ISSUES GAIN SUBSTANTIALLY

Bankers State Bonds Offer the Best Evidence of Trend Changes.

NEW FLOTATIONS LOOM

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—The bond market, in the opinion of investment bankers, offered the best evidence of the change in sentiment that has followed the gloomy days of mid-December.

Prices of investment securities, rising steadily throughout the ten days of the new year, have improved so substantially that many observers see in this movement the first signs of the general financial and industrial recovery which has been predicted for 1931, although it is recalled that bonds made a couple of false starts in 1930—a paradoxical bond year—conditions are believed to have changed sufficiently to permit a more encouraging estimate of the current movement.

Few 1930 Highs Surpassed.

Some bonds have not only regained their recent losses, but have surpassed their 1930 highs. The Standard Statistics index of 30 issues, evenly divided among rails, utilities and industrials, has won back two-thirds of last year's decline and is now 6 points above the 1930 low, reached in December. The upturn has been strongest in high grade issues, but one of the encouraging signs last week was the pickup in second grades and foreigns.

The unusually rapid recovery, it is pointed out, may be followed by some irregularity as new financing comes into competition with seasonal issues and as profits are taken by holders who bought for a turn, but the apparently complete disappearance of some of the unfavorable factors that contributed to the nervous liquidation last month, it is held, gives ground for belief that declines will be well resisted.

Heavy Financing Seen.

The increasing volume of new offerings is said to foreshadow even heavier financing later in the quarter. Improvement in market tone and prices stimulates public sale of bonds by corporations, which have been forced to go to the banks for funds that under more normal conditions they would have obtained from new financing.

Several large loans are in prospect. One is the $100,000,000 issue for which the St. Louis Southwestern Railway recently obtained Interstate Commerce Commission authority. Another issue of similar size is contemplated by the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York. Plans for flotation of both, however, may be delayed until market conditions have improved still further. Borrowers naturally want to get money at as low interest rates as possible, and a strong market favors financing on such a basis.

Much of the current demand is coming from banks and insurance companies, but there has been a flurry of inquiry from private investors who apparently have recovered from their fears. With easy money assured for an indefinite period, institutional buying might be expected to continue provided there is no recurrence of circumstances that would bring a resumption of liquidation.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The beginning of the long-awaited inland point-to-point radio communication system, sending telegrams between cities in the United States without telegraph wires or poles, appears certain within the near future as a result of the opinion of the District Court of Appeals in the short-wave cases.

The Radio Corporation of America and the Mackay Radio Telegraph Co., which were unsuccessful almost two years ago in persuading the Federal Radio Commission to allocate a large portion of the continental short wave frequencies to them, have practically achieved their purpose through court channels. These two competitors in the communication field are now merely waiting until the commission obeys the instructions of the court before inaugurating their intercity radio services.

The organization which impressed the commission so effectively with its ambitious plan to link 112 cities with radio communication circuits and was consequently awarded 40 of the coveted channels, is now out of the running, and it is these frequencies which have been remanded to the commission with the instruction that they be reallocated to the other appellants, which are RCA and Mackay.

THE inauguration of Gov. Ritchie of Maryland for the fourth consecutive term Wednesday may prove to be another straw to show which way the wind is blowing in connection with the forthcoming presidential campaign. Columbia and Station WBAL, Baltimore, will broadcast the event, which will be the first time microphones have ever been placed in a historic State House at Annapolis.

Max Kobre, local 10-year-old concert violinist, will play a Mozart concerto, Drdla's "Serenade", and a Hebrew melody on Wednesday afternoon (WRC, 2 p. m.).

"Heart's Desire", or, "You Cur, Sir!" is the title of the old-time drama to be presented by the Three Bakers tonight (WMAL, 9 p. m.).

Vi renting a bungalow just as Joe, not aware of this, renews a lease on their house, promises unusual complications in "Mr. and Mrs." tomorrow night (WMAL, 10 o'clock).

THOSE interested in the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom need not journey to New York today to hear what takes place at the luncheon given to Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago (WRC, 2:15 p. m.; WMAL, 2 o'clock).

Miss Addams also will be heard in the Homemakers Club this morning (WMAL, 11:45 o'clock).

George Hicks, formerly of Washington, but now a chain announcer in New York, when broadcasting the daily stock reports the other day, suddenly realized they would not fill out the time allowed. There was no standby musician on hand to fill in. Just then Announcer Edward Thorgersen looked into the studio.

Hicks switched his microphone off long enought to order Thorgersen to the piano. He ended the stock reports and announced there would be a brief piano interlude before the next program. A surprised Thorgersen played and saved the day for Hicks.

A WOMAN called up a New York studio and asked the name of a certain program's violinist. When told, she said:

"Well, please thank him for me. No sooner had he begun playing than my canary began to sing—for the first time in five years."

Lew Hahn, New York department store head, will speak at the Advertising Club luncheon in New York this noon (WRC, 1:15 p. m.). Herbert S. Waters, of James McCreery Co.; Col. Michael Friedsam; Samuel Reyburn, of Lord & Taylor, and Franklin Simon also will be present.

Ben Alley, tenor, once was a road paver in West Virginia, earning a weekly wage of $15. Brad Browne was a court stenographer. Bert Lown, orchestra leader, first catered to the public as hat check boy at Westchester dances.

ONE radio decision handed down by the District Court last week was so involved that a radio writer, endeavoring to interpret it, wrote a story for his paper without discovering that in the brief he was using pages 2 and 3 had been transposed.

Jane Arrt INTERPRETS the MODE

Paris, Jan. 11.

I WARNED you that patent leather was going to be heard from soon, didn't I? And that time has come now. It's being used extensively in many of the largest collections—and charmingly!

M. Patou, who was about the first to realize the possibilities of patent leather as a trimming, uses in his establishment a much softer quality than that used formerly. It is similar in texture to fine oilcloth, and it lends itself o-o-oh so easily to decorative touches.

Patent leather was used on a great many of the tweed and tweed-printed silk or linen dresses I saw, and made odd and attractive collars, cuffs, belts and ties. Black, dark brown and dark blue patent leather is piped with white on some of the prettiest frocks.

I think, my deahs, that you will find this patent leather a very welcome addition to the world of trimmings because it is so delightfully adaptable. And, speaking of its adaptability, what do you think I saw made of it? It was—sh-h-h, trousers! Yes, the lovely ones, too, for a beach pajama. They were shiny and black, these new pajama trousers, and slit from the knee to show an insertion of pleated white satin. 'N' over a white satin blouse there was a tiny patent leather eton jacket. Cute?

Fans are always so lovely! Today the geometrical fan is often the whole color note to a costume—a fan, for instance, in subtle colors—like the one in the corner of today's sketch.

• • • •

Joseph Paquin has certainly combined beauty of fabric with grace of line in this charming afternoon frock I have sketched for you today. The material, deep red marocain, lends itself beautifully to the form-fitting waist and very full skirt of this model. And the lovely collar and the tabs on the flaring cuffs are of white, which shades subtly to red.

Secret From Paris!

A clever Parisian couturier, just a few steps ahead of the others, anticipated the inevitable return to favor of the graciously feminine form that admits and glories in lovely, firm contours. And this couturier conceived and achieved a certain brassiere which, upon first sight, seems to be just the average dainty and fragile garment that well-bred women always wear. But, wonder of wonders, it is ever so much more. Because while it is being worn it molds the bust and strengthens the muscles that have been allowed to become flabby—or preserves youthful contours forever.

And then we, ever on the lookout for secrets for you, made an illustrated leaflet telling you exactly, clearly and technically how to make this clever brassiere for yourself. This leaflet you may have by simply sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post.

We hope you have formed the habit now of looking for Dare's weekly fashion letter in The Sunday Washington Post.

Au revoir!

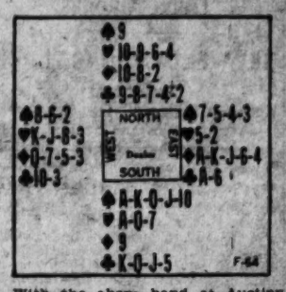
A TRUMP LEAD POSTPONED.



With the above hand at Auction Bridge South would bid one Spade which West would pass and North would be too weak to make a denial bid. East, however, would bid two Diamonds, South two Spades, West three Diamonds and South three Spades which would end the auction.

At Contract Bridge, if South bid three Spades he would not get a raise from North and would play at less than a game contract. If he made the artificial forcing bid of two Clubs, North would have to bid two Diamonds; taking out one artificial bid with another. South then would bid two Spades to show the first of his declarations, and North would keep the bidding open with another artificial bid—two No Trumps. Then South would show his second declaration by bidding three Clubs which bid North would raise to four (showing preference and obeying South's command to keep the bidding open). South would bid four Spades to show he greatly preferred Spades; but North, with five Clubs and one Spade, would bid five Clubs. Declarer's combined hands would lose only one Club and one Diamond because North could discard his Hearts on South's Spades and then trump South's losing Hearts—unless West should open Diamonds and East win the first trick and return a Heart through South's tenace. That, however, would not be a probable development.

While it might work well in this case, it is dangerous to give partner a choice between a solid five-card Major and an Aceless four-card Minor.

The South who played this hand (at Contract) preempted with an initial four-Spad bid.

The adversaries started by winning a Diamond trick and South ruffed the second Diamond. Then came the key play—the Club King from South instead of an immediate clean-up of the adverse trumps. East's Club Ace won, and he returned the Diamond Jack on which South discarded a Heart (Declarer's second clever play); East then led a Heart and South went up with the Ace and drew the trumps. Declarer's Clubs being established, he was able to discard South's losing Heart on dummy's long Club.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

A Trusting Wife.

DEAR FRANCES McDONALD: I have been married nine years, have a daughter of 8 and two boys, 4 and 3. Throughout my married life I have been happy with my husband and he seemed happy, too, and fond of his home. In fact he was a real home man. Unfortunately his work kept him away from his home most of the time, but when with us he seemed perfectly content.

Now, out of a clear sky, I received from him one day a letter asking me to leave him, and his mother would take the children and care for them. You can imagine the shock of this as we had never had even a quarrel in all our lives. I was not jealous and never had reason to be. He, on his side, was always affectionate and sweet. It was entirely unlike him and I could not make out what it was all about. He told me I could have the youngest child and his mother would take the other two. And he asked for a divorce.

As our religion does not countenance divorce and the splitting up of families that way, I went to his mother for advice. She knew no more than I did, but advised me to stand my ground and fight for my rights. She would, of course, take the children if he left me or anything like that, but not just to humor any whim of his. So we are going along as if nothing had happened and she says all will come right in the end.

However, I can certainly not act as a wife under such circumstances and the other woman is now writing him at our home quite boldly. I would like to read these letters she sends as I feel justified under the circumstances in finding out what is going on and what ideas she has in regard to him. Have I the right to do this? Would it make it easier for him to divorce me? I would give him the letters as usual, but just read them first. Ordinarily it would never enter my mind to do such a thing, but it seems we have both suddenly changed into two different people entirely. When I ask him anything about them he laughs—which just about kills me. I am disgusted with him.

His mother believes he is just infatuated with some girl as most men get from time to time, and will soon forget all about it. Do you think she is right? And just what is expected of the wife while the little game lasts? The girl keeps after him with letters although he has not seen her in two months. However, I believe he sends her money. I also have found out her name although he does not suspect this. Should I take steps to make her leave him alone? She is not free to marry him. Although he may not know it. Can I make her leave him alone? I certainly will never part my children or break up my home. I can not go out to support the children when they are so young unless I give them up, and why should a good mother be forced to give up her children because a man wants a little fun?

Do please advise me what to do. I felt he would forget her, but now that they correspond I feel different. What do you think of the affair?

A TRUSTING WIFE.

If you are right in your surmise about him sending money then the end of the romance is already in sight. In any case the chances are always 1,000 to 1 in favor of the wife. Men are so constituted that even as they kiss they are condemning the one they kiss. For them such pastimes are permissible, but for womankind taboo. And so they judge and sentence the woman who so eagerly accepts their caresses as evidence of something or other, and secretly compare her in their minds with the wife at home who is above such odious behavior. The wife scores in proportion to her ability to maintain the superiority of her position. For that reason there must be no opening of mail, no undignified questioning or nagging. Maintain the serenity of the one who has all the law and the prophets on her side. Not the holler than thou air, but the air of serenity your position justifies. Things will come right, however unjust the situation. Be serene.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

Allow mud stains to dry and brush carefully before any other treatment is used. Sometimes nothing else is needed. The following agents are satisfactory:

Soap and water—If the fabric is washable, use soap and water.

Wood or denatured alcohol—Sponge the stains with alcohol.

Water—Sponge the stains with water.

Cut raw potato—For black silks of firm weave, brush thoroughly and rub the spot with cut raw potato. This leaves a thin film of starch on the surface of the cloth, which can be brushed off when dry. This treatment is too harsh for any but rather smooth, firm goods, and leaves a spot on all but black materials.

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN"

IF January 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:45 p. m. and from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. The danger hours are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 4 p. m. to 5:45 p. m.

The astrological signs of January 12th point to a day of achievement, not, however, untinged by disappointment. In every and any line of endeavor there will be opportunities for progress and advancement, although one in whom you have trusted may go back on you.

A child born on this January 12th will be full of mischief, but free from malice. Adulthood will see it virile and mentally strong, with great force of character. It will possess a dominating, but not domineering, personality, intelligence, common sense and practical vision.

You, if born on a January 12th, have many striking characteristics. You have will power, ambition, and the ability to "make good." Perseverence and concentration are also good traits in your "make up," and in order to achieve your ends, you are willing to work unceasingly and conscientiously. You will never be happy in a subordinate position, and, in order to bring out the best that is in you, absolutism is essential.

You, quicker than most people, can undress a problem, and get at the real truth. You talk freely of your work to others. Not so much, however, to secure ideas from them, but, in talking, new ideas come to you, and many of your problems have been solved in this manner. Although your best efforts are made without outside help, you are not a friend of solitude, and you always seek the association of others.

You revel in the limelight, but applause does not turn your head. It serves as an inspiration for future energies. You are slow to anger, but, once aroused, it takes a long time to pacify you. A very sincere friend and implacable enemy. In the home, you relax, and with spontaneity, become a homely soul. You will not only influence your mate, but your way with children is such as to engender love and to command, at the same time, their respect.

ARRANGING CUT FLOWERS.

WE all know persons who tell us that they "just love flowers." and yet we can not help but wonder, when we see the way they handle them, how much the blossoms really do mean to them. Those who really care never handle flowers roughly, nor are they guilty of neglect—they want to enjoy them as long as there is a vestige of beauty left; nor do they pluck more blossoms than they can care for, nor lift roots as well as flowers. All these little traits indicate how much we really appreciate flowers.

During the last few years we have been aroused to a deeper interest in the art of the Japanese, who have a knowledge of plant life that is generally recognized. Each season they introduce new varieties of plants that have definite individuality; the colors are true and the constitutions of the plants are strong and vigorous, the result of the attention they pay to detail.

The Japanese are not only florists, they are artists as well, and in nothing is this more evidenced than in the way they arrange their cut blossoms. The grower may be a more or less practical business man, but the man who handles the flowers is an artist. The scheme of decoration must be harmonious, the composition pleasing, the receptable of the right shape, the surroundings suitable.

There are seven rules which the Japanese are said to apply to each arrangement:

First—Avoid all angles.

Second—Only on rare occasions use more than one variety of flowers in single arrangement.

Third—Use much foliage and few flowers.

Fourth—Use only the foliage belonging to the variety of flowers you are arranging.

Fifth—Never crowd a composition.

Sixth—Study the composition from four sides.

Seventh—Place each branch or blossom as nearly as possible in the same position as nature placed it on the growing plant.

The last rule seems to be the keynote of their wonderful success in arranging flowers. They realize that we can not excel nature in creating beautiful effects, but we can follow in her lead. In the country where there is an absence of brick walls and where nature has been the decorator, we see few straight lines and many curves. We also see a variety of coloring, but with green predominating. While there may be a great mass of foliage, there is never any effect of crowding. Again, no matter from which angle we view a vista, the effect is pleasing.

All these things the Japanese have noted, and they have realized that the same rules that apply to the natural effects can be applied to cut flowers. If these are followed there will never be too much or too little foliage, and there will be no appearance of crowding.

Success in arranging flowers also depends upon the receptacle in which the blossoms are placed. A vase or bowl should bear the same relation to flowers that a frame does to a picture—it is merely a setting that should enhance the beauty of that which it holds. The receptacle should never be ornate; the outline should be simple and the color subdued.

Every woman who longs to decorate her home knows intuitively the arrangement of flowers which will make it most beautiful. Every one of us who has the slightest love for the beautiful interprets this desire in our own way.

The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

CHAPTER IX.

Under the midsummer sun, Santiago stewed in its misery and filth. To the eye, which, from the heights, had looked longingly upon it for two weeks and more, the city had seemed to hold a three-fold beauty. Desire gave it enchantment; all that youthful hearts had dreamed of tropic moons, guitars and grated windows, gave it romance. Yet it had more than an imagined splendor. The white walls glistened, the red roofs burned and luxuriant foliage, richly green. One thought of Samarkand; a Samarkand that flowed, dazzling, down long hillsides to a harbor that was like a mirror of emerald and brass.

A city of dreams; a city of death over which the buzzards wheeled by thousands. In normal times, ship captains had a habit of saying that they could smell Santiago 10 miles at sea; and the city had stood a siege and suffered famine and pestilence. Piles of mango skins, ashes, old bones, lay here and there on the broken and neglected pavements; filthy rags, dung, kitchen refuse, poisoning the air and giving sustenance to hundreds of buzzards and myriads of flies. The gutters were open drains, broken here and there by holes and pockets filled with decaying garbage, and into them at intervals trickled rills of foul, discolored water from kitchens and cesspools.

Finds City Dying.

Gaunt shapes stretched pitiful arms from the windows, begging for bread until they fell back and died; naked children, with extended abdomens and beseeching, frightened eyes, cowered in doorways or picked over the refuse for food. Here and there dead horses lay, dead dogs, dead cats; dead men, too. The red-beaked vultures flew up flapping before Wood as he rode into the city.

"Long lines of wan, yellow, ghastly-looking individuals," Wood wrote afterwards, "dragged themselves wearily up and down the filthy streets avoiding the dead animals and heaps of decomposing refuse, or sank wearily in some friendly shade, seeking to recover strength in sleep. Frightful odors poured out of abandoned houses, speaking more strongly than words of the dead within. The very air seemed laden with death."

Wood went to the palace on the plaza and took up his headquarters in a room adjoining Shafter's. The palace was a one-story building of stucco, glistening without, shaded and cool within. The American flag, raised over it with ceremony four days previous, looked odd there. Odd, too, Wood felt—an unknown doctor in April; in July autocrat of an ancient city, successor of Cortes and De Soto, Narvaez and Ponce de Leon. Life could be incredibly romantic, he must have thought, and a little dizzying.

"In these strange changes," he wrote Mrs. Wood on July 21, "here I am military governor of Santiago, stuck up in the old palace opposite the picturesque old cathedral with the whole town under military law, including all in the harbor and the Spanish prisoners, some 12,000.

"I don't know how this will turn out, but it is a bit strange to be receiving all kinds of deputations from church authorities, Spaniards, &c., and the whole thing seems like a dream. The crews on the ships (transports) are some of them in a state of mutiny and I have ordered them put in irons and kept on bread and water, &c. So on the whole the day has been fairly lively all along the line. * * *

"The archbishop is a great chap about here and a very fine looking old gentleman, who at dinner recently wanted to wade in American blood, but is now a little anxious about his enormous Spanish pension."

Faces Staggering Task.

Wood faced a task which, for all the light-hearted optimism of his letter, appalled him and might have appalled the cleanker of those other Augean stables. The private houses were more sickening in their filth than the streets; the hospitals were worse than the residences, the bakeries and markets were a nausea to the senses. The water system had been designed mainly for the benefit of certain officials and church dignitaries; and during the siege it had ceased altogether to function. There was no sewer system at all. Each household had its sink and cesspool, generally within a few feet of the kitchen, spilling their contents in the courtyards and saturating the mud floors of the dwellings themselves. Householders dumped their garbage into the streets.

All this would have been evil enough in a city sheltering only its normal population. But Santiago, which had some 50,000 souls in it under ordinary conditions, now held within its territory, or closely adjacent, more than double that number.

Wood faced four tasks, all of immediate urgency; to feed the hungry, to care for the sick, to clean the city, to bury the dead. They were all, indeed, parts of the one overwhelming need to meet the threat of an epidemic. He plunged at once into all four. Wood found considerable food in the city, secreted by the authorities for the use of the Spanish troops, and established depots where rations were distributed to frantic, milling thousands.

Opens Food Stations.

He issued 18,000 to 20,000 rations a day; on one day, 51,000. In every ward of the city he established food stations, with a doctor in each, making house-to-house visits, and sent squads to the hospitals, prisons, convents, asylums.

The cleansing of the city began in horror. The death rate was more than 200 a day; many died alone, many were deserted in death, and corpses lay for days undiscovered. Wood's men invaded the charnel houses and bore their horrible burdens in carts to the outskirts of the city.

"Men could not bury the dead fast enough," Wood wrote later, "and they were burned in great heaps of 80 or 90 piled high on gratings of railroad iron and mixed with grass and sticks. Over all were turned thousands of gallons of kerosene, and the whole frightful heap reduced to ashes. It was the only thing to be done, for the dead threatened the living, and a plague was at hand."

Day after day the black column of smoke stood monstrously over the city. One day a rainstorm quenched the burning pyre. Barbour had no more kerosene, and when he sought to purchase what he needed he found that the price had leaped to a Spanish dollar a gallon. Wood gathered 30 or 40 of the merchants in his office.

Calls Profiteering Murder.

"I have called you here," he said, "to tell you what you are doing. We have come to Cuba at your call to relieve your distress." He spoke icily, but without a trace of passion. "You are repaying our efforts by trying to make money out of us and out of your country's distress. You profess to be patriots and to be grateful. You are queer patriots and have a queerer way of showing your gratitude. I call such conduct murder." No one offered a defense. The price of kerosene resumed its normal level.

Everywhere were fires consuming the accumulated rubbish of decades. Here and there whole streets were aflame, with kerosene among the cobblestones and running in the gutters. The Cubans worked as never before in their lives.

"I make from one to two pilgrimages on horseback daily through the town," Wood wrote his wife, "and keep every one hustling along as best I can."

Wood turned his attention to the water system. Water was scarce, and of all the city's needs, the most urgent.

Wood sent for the city engineer. The gentleman was a Spaniard and he was lolling in bed when Wood's messenger arrived. "Manana!" Tomorrow—perhaps! A more urgent demond brought the same reply. Wood sent a corporal with a detail. They brought the man in his nightgown.

"We had no end of work," Wood wrote, "in getting the old broken-down system of water supply, built in 1839, in anything like working order. Thousands of leaks existed which had to be consistently patched up, and frequently the main was injured by disorderly bands outside of the city. In fact, life was one great struggle to get even with the situation."

Stricken With Yellow Fever.

Meanwhile yellow fever had appeared here and there and the danger season was at hand. Wood recognized the fatal terror of the name and banned it from Santiago. No one had "yellow fever." Thousands had "pernicious malaria." That term had a familiar home sound and bore no ominous suggestion of abrupt disaster.

The doctor-governor was blinking no realities. On the island in the harbor he built a hospital for "contagious diseases."

"Yellow fever is here, but under good control," he wrote Mrs. Wood the middle of August. "It has been here for months and is less now than a short time ago and of a mild type. * * * If I can pull this place through without an epidemic I will have accomplished a great work and saved thousands upon thousands of lives, all of which is worth working for."

He was himself stricken with fever. His skin turned a sickly yellow; his temperature ran up to 102 and 103, and he worked eighteen hours a day. His officers caught him off his guard as he leaned against a door post for support and remonstrated with him. "The work has to be done," he told them, "and I have been put here to do it."

Pride in this body of his which he has trained to obey him—a sense of duty, a love for the job, ambition. These and the consciousness, of which he speaks to a friend, of "the power behind the rugged hills," encircling the helpless thousands in his charge, combined to keep the fever in subjection. No one realised better than he that he had been given the opportunity of a lifetime and he had no intention of throwing it away as he had seen others throw the great chance away, not being ready in body and soul. Somehow he pulled through the black days and got back to his stride.

He reorganized the military, and civil hospitals, hired Cuban physicians as contract surgeons, bought medicine, bedding, food and worked, in effect, as superintendent of each and of all.

The death rate fell from an average of 200 daily to 37. But overhead in great circles, watchful, wheeled still the carrion birds.

In his office a thousand matters are brought before him. The people of Santiago, accustomed to the formality, the endless red tape of the Spanish system, marvel at the speed with which a query or a complaint is heard and answered. He has an ear for everybody, listening gravely to the recital of varied woes by unhappy souls who look to him not only for the wisdom but for the power also of a Solomon, to right all wrongs and settle all disputes. These pitiful Cubans, starved in body and soul, stir him as he has never before been stirred.

Matches Spaniards' Courtesy.

He meets the cultivated Spaniards with the same gentleness and understanding, the same firmness, and with a courtesy to match their own.

Prouder than ever in defeat, they come to him to protest against this or that invasion of the traditional privilege to live or die in whatever odor sanctity or defective drainage may direct. His answers give them no comfort in their medievalism, but they are soft-spoken, without a suggestion of militaristic bluster. He explains the menace of an epidemic, the significance of hygienic laws. This is a cooperative business, he points out; they are all working together for the same end. The conception is new to them, but they acquiesce, partly because they can do nothing else, largely because there is something in this quiet man in the gray shirt and khaki riding trousers which inspires confidence, even awe.

"This rule is the rule of the Pasha," Wood writes Mrs. Wood, August 8. "Yesterday it was the regulation of the price of food, meat ond all the necessities of life. Compulsion on every hand and a stiff rule with prison for every failure to obey open to every man, rich or poor, is bringing them to terms and permitting the starving to live, and also forcing the dirty and shiftless to work. The poor are delighted and the merchants who are strangling (as many would say) the people are being forced to let up."

He uses the strong hand elsewhere to good effect, pouncing on the shopkeepers who discount the pay checks of the street workers. He is no gentler to American grafters than to Cuban. Enterprising souls among the enlisted men who have imported vast quantities of Confederate bills and are reaping a fine harvest in the shops find his hand heavy.

Has Life and Death Power.

"My authority is absolute, even to life and death, if I choose to use it," he writes Mrs. Wood again. "I have not shot any one but have pardoned a great many of the poor devils of Spaniards who were in jail for all kinds of crimes and offenses except murder."

He sits as a summary court in the overcrowded prison. It is a vile place, a squat, gloomy pile of adobe, from which Barbour's squads took out more dead than from any other building in the city. Wood investigates every case and, like some patriarch of old, administers justice.

He reorganized the police force with Cubans, keeping the soldiers in the background.

"I never use the military force unless I find the police are inadequate," he writes Alger, "as I do not want any rule of bayonets, if avoidable."

He is puzzled for a time by the frequent clashes between the police and their Cuban fellow citizens until it dawns on him that the trouble is in the uniform. The police are wearing the garb of the Spanish regime, and bitter memories die hard. He smiles and clothes them in khaki, and there is no more friction.

Large matters, small matters crowd in upon him; noisy matters, which are insignificant; casual matters at whose birth Clio and the Comic Spirit look at each other and call upon all the imps of irony to come and see. A lieutenant in his brigade, it seems, wants a helping hand.

"I have the honor to invite your favorable attention to the request of Lieut. John J. Pershing, Tenth U. S. Cavalry, for appointment in the Staff Corps during the war," Wood writes to the adjutant general July 30, 1898. "Lieut. Pershing has been on duty with his regiment during the Santiago campaign, and has performed his duties with marked gallantry and efficiency. Any consideration which you may be able to show him will be well deserved, and, from what I know of his ability, any position to which he may be advanced will be filled with ability."

Through the heavy tropical air, the enchantment of incredible fortune, comes no premonitory drum beat of distant, unimagined armies.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

The family name "Sweetser" is one of the relatively few names whose original meanings are rather clearly suggested by their modern forms. There is good evidence to show that this name is merely a corruption of "sweet sir," an expression which, through sarcasm or through seriousness, frequently became a nickname in early days. In many cases, however, this name has become confused with "Switzer" which means "the man from Switzerland." The corresponding erman form "Schweizer" is sometimes replaced by "Sweetser" in English-speaking countries. A certain Richard Sweteeire is mentioned in an English document of the last part of the fourteenth century.

The family name "Doolittle" is of English origin, and its obvious meaning must be taken literally. It was originally given as a nickname to idlers. A certain John Dolitel is mentioned in a fourteenth cenutry record. "Paypew," the French equivalent of "Doolittle," as also found in early English documents.

The family name "Koenig" (also spelled "Konig") is of German origin, and means "the king." There are various reasons for its first having been bestowed as a personal name. It was often applied to persons who had distinguished themselves because of unusual ability. It was also given in sarcasm to excessively proud persons. Sometimes it was retained as a personal name by persons who had taken the part of a king in a pageant. Finally, it will be recalled that in early days it was a common practice to display pictures and images before private dwellings, as well as before inns and taverns, as a means of identification. Thus, "Koenig" often means "he who lives at the sign of the king." The name appears to be first recorded in 1295 at which time a German document mentions a certain Chunrat der Kung."

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Brighter Children.

To those who are interested in the rising generation it sometimes seems as if the children of today know more, respond better and behave better for their age than did the children of 15 or 20 years ago.

There is at present no way of knowing positively whether there is any truth in this idea or whether it is simply a fond delusion on the part of elderly persons who can view the young with a benevolent eye largely because their own children are already grown up.

It, however, is known certainly that the children of today are taller and healthier than those of a generation ago.

There can be little doubt that the chief factor in this difference has been the widespread use of a better diet and health routine based upon actual knowledge of the child's physical needs.

It is not altogether fantastic, therefore, to suppose that the dissemination of knowledge of the newer ways of dealing with the behavior of children may have already brought results.

Modern children may well seem more intelligent because they have been guided to a more effective use of their natural abilities.

For the fullest development of native endowment, two things are necessary.

First, opportunity for growth in the form of a variety of experience; second, a personality unhampered by crippling emotional responses.

A child whose being is frequently convulsed with rage or jealousy, who is chronically irritable and peevish is surely unable to use to its fullest capacity the intelligence with which he has been endowed.

Certainly if there is anything in the observation that the children of today are more intelligent than the children of the past, the difference may be ascribed to the fact that mothers have become more appreciative of the mental and emotional needs of childhood.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood.—Use of the word "movie" in speech and in writing to describe motion pictures persists, notwithstanding the new and more descriptive "talkie."

NORMA TALMADGE

Those in the busines prefer "industry" or "profession," but the great mass—fans—like and probably always will continue to use "movie."

Fearing that "movie" was not dignified enough for their growing business, producers in 1910 started a serious effort to have another name coined.

When and where the term started is not known, but in 1909 "movie" got wide circulation in newspaper comic strips. In another year it was on its way toward Nation-wide usage.

The old Essanay company was the first to take up the campaign (probably for the advertising it would get, according to an authority, Terry Ramsaye) by offering a grand prize of $25 for a new name for motion pictures.

The winner of the contest coined "photoplay," but, like dozens of others suggested from time to time, it didn't stick.

Odd Words Tried.

In the experimental stages of pictures a series of odd words and terms, beginning with cinematograph and kinetoscope to nickelodeon, nickelette, nickelshow and theatorium were tried and discarded.

Essanay's "photoplay" didn't settle the matter of a name. The Vitagraph company for a long time was proud of its phrase "Vitagraph life portrayals," while another firm toyed with "life motion pictures."

Norma's Start.

Going back into movie history, Norma Talmadge's attention was drawn to the movies in 1911, when she posed for the steropticon slides to accompany a popular song.

With her sisters, Natalie and Constance, she often gave shows in the Talmadge parlor in Brooklyn, and a chance visitor suggested Norma had screen possibilities.

Norma bravely went to a studio in New York, where she was told she would be called when she was needed. Meanwhile she was invited to look over the lot.

The first person young Norma spied was Florence Turner, her favorite. She rushed onto the set and into the screen to say hello to the star.

The "take" was spoiled and the first scene Miss Talmadge appeared in never got on the screen.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

FIGHTING PNEUMONIA.

It seems probable that we are making some headway against the pneumonias.

Comparison of the mortality rates of the acute respiratory diseases prevailing now with those that prevailed during the last years of the preceding century show a definite improvement, though a smaller one than in the case of abdominal disorders. From time to time favorable reports come from laboratories and hospitals in which new remedies are being tried. A recent report bringing inspiring information was that of Drs. Cecil and Plummer. It related a very large experience with the use of the concetrated Felton serum in the treatment of type I pneumonias. Drs. Cecil and Plummer estimate that there are about 480,000 cases of pneumonia yearly in the United States, and that about 120,000 of these die. About two-thirds of these, or about 360,000, are cases of lobar pneumonia, the others being bronchial pneumonia, terminal pneumonia, and other miscellaneous pneumonias. Of these 360,000 about 96,000 are type I pneumonias.

They hold that type I pneumonia is as much a separate disease as is paratyphoid separate from type. Of these 96,000 about 24,000 die annually. A general use of the Felton concentrated serum, he estimates, should reduce this number of deaths to 12,000, and that would be well worth while.

When a diagnosis of pneumonia has been made the Sabin test will decide within four hours whether it is of the type I variety. If it is, an eye test should be made to prove that the sufferer is not sensitive to serum. This will not waste more than 30 minutes. If the Sabin test is positive and the eye test is negative, the use of Felton concentrated serum should be begun without delay. This serum is safe and causes no chills nor other unpleasant after effects.

Physicians know how to make the Sabin test and the eye test as well as the clinical diagnosis of lobar pneumonia, but the laws of probability are such as to justify the use of the serum at times when no tests are possible.

Type I lobar pneumonia is so infrequent in children under 3 that the serum finds no field in that group. The contrary is true of people between 3 and 40 years of age. Type I pneumonia is the common form of lobar pneumonia among them. In older people most of the pneumonias are of other types. Therefore, with them, it is wise to await a Sabin test.

NEEDS PEACE OF MIND.

L. H. C. writes: What is the cause of a 12-year-old boy's restlessness at night? He goes to sleep quickly and rests well for about an hour, but the rest of the night he is not quiet at all and in the morning he says he is tired. He isn't aware of the fact that he isn't quiet through the night. He is the nervous type, but otherwise well.

REPLY.

The cause is excitement. Have the boy eat a light supper. After that, stay quietly in the house reading, studying, playing backgammon or working puzzles. Have him go to a comfortable bed, in a comfortable room, at a regular hour.

Peace of mind carries with it a capacity for sleeping. The opposite holds also.

Grid's Future Is Pondered By Big Six

Director Says a Cut in Coaches' Wages May Come.

Smaller Road Squads Seen; Missouri Marks Time.

By CHARLES GRUMICH.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A new undertone of uncertainty in the foot ball tutoring profession looms in the wake of the 1930 season of "depressed" gate receipts. From one source comes a hint that the coaches may have to take a wage cut.

E. C. Gallagher, athletic director of Oklahoma A. & M. College, says that if drastic retrenchment results from any reduced "take" at the stadium, coaches' salaries should bear part of the burden. This was offered despite the announcement the Aggies had a "banner" year in foot ball.

Caution enters the situation elsewhere. The University of Missouri is not expanding its present coaching staff. "We are just marking time to see what business conditions are going to be says C. L. Brewer, Missouri athletic director.

Only Ordinary Games Suffer.

One critic, who prefers anonymity, points to an impasse adding to the troubles that harass the lives of coaches. He asserts only ordinary, unattractive contests will suffer from defection of the cash customers.

"People have the money but are a little more particular as to how they spend it, he declares. "Coaches are pressed to turn out better teams."

Then they meet trouble if they overstep the code which bans recruiting, and must make teams out of voluntary applicants, not subsidized.

Whatever the cause, one Big Six Conference coach, Noel Workman, of Iowa State College, resigned after his team's sixteenth successive loss on the gridiron. In the second disastrous season, Iowa State's football receipts dwindled about 25 per cent, probably the greatest decline in the Big Six.

The ending of Workman's regime after five years was not linked in public announcements with the sports business depression or with the perennial laments of the "wolves," those ardent alumni and other partisans who howl dissatisfaction in the lean years.

One School Fails to Blame Coach.

One Big Six school which met reverses on the gridiron as well as in the box office countered the expected attack of the "wolves" with a campaign emphasizing that extraordinary playing talent was scare and that the coach's teaching ability had not become impotent. Apparently the viewers with alarm were placated.

Besides the strict surveillance to prevent subsidizing and recruiting by desperate chances, another problem confronts the profession.

Smaller squads must do what larger armies did formerly in games away from the home grounds under the economy plan calling for few men on trips, ordered by the bursars in their advice that coaches must "play them close to the ribs" until the financial end of the sport picks up.

$10,000 Mexican Race Is Won by Coe's Caruso

Agua Caliente, Mexico, Jan. 11 (A. P.).—Caruso, running in the colors of W. R. Coe, Kentucky sportsman, scored a sensational victory in the California Handicap, the $10,000 added stake which headlined the racing program here today, beating out Up by a half-length. Third place fell to Nellie Custis.

Caruso, Up and Nellie Cust's waged a desperate battle down the back stretch, with the former going into a whisker lead in the last few strides and stretching it slightly at the wire.

Marlboro Soccerists Win, 4-1, in Tourney Semifinal

D. C. Kickers Defeated Before Crowd of 1,000 at Silver Spring in Play for The Post Trophy; Goalies Star.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

THE Marlboro Soccer Club won its way to the finals in the Washington and Southeastern District cup tourney yesterday when it defeated the strong D. C. Kicker eleven in a fast game, 4 to 1. The score is not indicative of the hectic battle put up by the two clubs before a throng of 1,000 rooters in the Silver Spring Field. The winners led at half-time, 2 to 0. They scored their first goal three minutes after the opening whistle and their second within two minutes of half-time, giving the fans 38 minutes of scoreless soccer in the first 45 minutes of play.

Despite the two markers chalked up by the Prince Georges County kickers in the opening period it was the consensus of opinion that the German booters outplayed the ultimate winners in the opening period. Immediately after the Marylanders' initial goal, the Kickers launched attack after attack that kept the Marlboro backs on their toes constantly.

Binger Stars in Goal.

Louis and Randolph Mitchell, Frank Wyvill and Deck were towers of strength on the Marlboro attack but it is doubtful if the Marylanders would have gained such a decisive victory had it not been for the excellent work of Binger in goal. This worthy saved from every conceivable angle with the calmness that would have done credit to a veteran

The victors' first goal resulted from a miscue of the outstanding D. C. kicker. Sorg, of the latter club, blocked a shot from the toe of Bowie with his hand in the penalty area and R. Mitchell converted the resulting penalty kick into a goal. From that moment on Sorg performed in a most admirable manner and it was due to him, to a large extent, that the Marlboro kickers were kept on the defense for the greater part of the first half.

"Sorg, Bennertz and Benedickt peppered the Marlboro upright with lusty boots but the ever-ready Binger, materially aided by R Mitchell and Buck, staved off the efforts of the attackers. Once the Kickers gave their supporters a real thrill when the leather shot under the Marlboro crosspiece but an overanxious German had propelled the sphere into the goal with his hand and the score was not recorded.

Marlboro Club Attacks.

Rallying from the fierce attack of the Kickers just before the close of the period, Marlboro carried the game to the German goal. Here, Bowie made a nice try for a score and while it may have carried through without aid, Louis Mitchell took no chances as he gave the ball a little more impetus with a clever head shot.

At the start of the second half it appeared that the German booters had slowed considerably and Marlboro was quick to take advantage of the fatigued German forwards. The echo of the restarting whistle had hardly died when Frank Wyvill crashed a terrific boot past Herath for the third goal of the day.

Shortly after this the Kickers scored their only goal. Herath had moved from his position at goal in favor of Al Ulirich and taken a position on the forward line. It was largely due to the clever passing of Herath, in his new place, that the Kickers marked up their only tally. He passed with a neat shot to Benedickt in the late minutes of the game and the latter converted the boot into a goal.

Marlboro gained its final goal in the final five minutes of play. Deck scored from a scramble to safely salt away one of the hardest fought games of the season. By virtue of its victory Marlboro won the right to meet Washington-Concords on Sunday, January 25, in the finals for the city title and The Washington Post Cup.

Ingram Lost To Navy as Coach

Action Is Surprise in Annapolis Football Circles.

cognizant of all negotiations I have had with any other institution. It is my intention to continue coaching, announcement of which will be forthcoming from the proper authorities in the near future."

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A telegram from William A (Navy Bill) Ingram, football coach at the Naval Academy for the last five years, said he would not return next year."

The telegram was received by Capt. Henry C. Cooke, director of athletics, who made only the bare announcement. He said further comment would have to come from Ingram, now at his home at Jeffersonville, Ind.

The announcement was a surprise at the academy, as less than three weeks ago Ingram, in denying that he was negotiating for the post of football coach at the University of California, declared that he had "no idea of not returning to Navy."

Ingram, former gridiron and rowing star for Navy, and later William and Mary College and University of Indiana football mentor, has been coach at the academy since 1926.

The reports that he was negotiating for "Nibs" Price's job at California followed others that he and the Navy athletic authorities had disagreed over the terms of his contract. During last year's spotty season Ingram was under a one-year contract. He asked for a three-year contract, friends said, and the Navy offered him one of two years.

Ingram is one of three brothers who have made athletic history at the academy. When he became coach in 1926, and turned out an undefeated eleven, his brother, Commander Jonas H. Ingram was director of athletics. Another brother, Homer, died a year after graduation. "Navy Bill" resigned from the service in 1922.

Ingram New California Coach, Report on Coast

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Announcement of the resignation of William A. ("Navy Bill") Ingram as football coach of the United States Naval Academy today led to a report he possibly had signed as coach of the University of California eleven.

Confirmation, however, of the signing of Ingram to succeed C. M. ("Nibs") Price as the California mentor was unavailable. William W. Monahan, graduate manager, who has been in the East seeking a new Bear coach, returned yesterday, but he could not be located tonight. Others connected with the athletic affairs of the university either could not be reached or expressed ignorance of what Monahan had accomplished.

Ingram has been mentioned frequently as a possible successor to Price. Two weeks ago it was reported he was a visitor in this section, although no dickerings with the university were revealed.

Majors Won't Accept Coast's Draft Offer

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 11 (A.P.), E. S. Barnard, president of the American League, today said there was little chance of acceptance by the majors of the universal draft reservations voted by the Pacific Coast League yesterday.

The first two reservations, in which the Coast League asked that no player be selected for draft from a Class AA club until he has been in a league of that classification for two seasons, regardless of how much time he has spent in any other national association club, provided his contract was not assigned from a major league; and if a player is signed by a Class AA or Class A club without previous professional experience on or after August 1 it is to be understood his services during the balance of the year shall not be considered one season or service, will not receive consideration from the majors, Barnard said.

JIMMY M'LARNIN, the "Dublin Dynamiter," has run roughshod over an imposing list of clever boxers, and at the age of 24 has probably fought and defeated more champs than any other man. Although victorious in his fights with champions, McLarnin never gained a title because the fights were not championship bouts. Among those beaten by McLarnin were Al Singer, Villa, Jackie Fields, Mandell, Young Jack Thompson, LaBarba and Kaplan.

The term "cloudburst" came into use years ago when torrential downpours of rain were not clearly understood. "Cloudbursts" are due to violent uprushes of air at the start of a thunderstorm, carrying the drops up instead of letting them fall. Then when they do fall, a great quantity of water comes down at once. Scientists compute that if a large thundercloud several miles in density did "fall" to the ground, the resultant rainfall would be less intense than an ordinary "cloudburst!"

Diegel Gains 3rd Place In Test

Hagen and Mackenzie Finish Strong to Hold Chances.

Von Elm, Forrester Drop Far Behind After Leading.

By BRIAN BELL.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Two veteran golf campaigners, with swings very much alike, traveled different roads today to finish the second round of the Los Angeles $10,000 open in a tie for first place. Thin-faced Eddie Loos and plump Al Espinosa, Chicago pros, had 36-hole totals of 139.

The slight Loos went his untroubled way over the Wilshire Country Club course, compiling a score of 70, even par, and with his 69, of yesterday, held the lead for a couple of hours until the enthusiastic Al, frequently in trouble but sensational in his recoveries, turned in an amazing 67. As Espinosa had a good 72 in the first round a deadlock resulted.

Leo Diegel, of Agua Caliente, Galloping Ghost of the game, for the second time in two days matched Old Man Par, step for step, and his 140 total established him in third place, a stroke ahead of Frank Walsh, Chicago, who added a great 69 to his 72 of Saturday.

Cox and Wood in Running.

Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, and his New Jersey neighbor, Craig Wood, followed in a tie with a two-day score of 143.

A group of stars with 33-hole totals of 144 remained close enough to furnish threats in the final 36 holes to be played tomorrow. These players included Tony Manero, New York, Harry Cooper, Chicago, Walter Hagen and Tommy Armour, Detroit, and Roland Mackenzie, Washington amateur.

Hagen and Mackenzie finished brilliantly to get into the select class. With a typical Hagen gesture, Walter gave the great crowd massed about the home green a big thrill, when he sent his second shot at the eighteenth, 6 inches from the cup and holed the little putt for a birdie. Mackenzie, who has played great golf in this tournament, holed a long putt for his birdie.

Armour was a consistent performer, matching his 72 of yesterday. Manero slumped from an opening 69 to a fair 73, while Cooper slipped from 71 to 73.

Sarasen's Score Mounts.

Macdonald Smith struck a Smithian stride and turned in a score of 71 after 75 yesterday. Gene Sarazen, after starting with 71, took too many fives and wound up with 78. George Von Elm struggled manfully and finally put together a 77 after a brilliant 69 yesterday. Jack Forrester's game fell to pieces with an 81, marring his opening 69.

Espinosa for a time seemed threatened with disqualification, a rumor spreading about the course that Al absent mindedly had taken a practice putt on the tenth green yesterday before getting his putt down for his par three.

The matter actually reached the committee, but Gene Sarazen, who played with Al, said the Chicago pro had holed out before he took the practice putt, and with his explanation before them the officials exonerated Espinosa of any unintentional wrong-doing.

For the final 36 holes tomorrow the 51 players who scored 153 or better for the first two days' play will continue to the bitter end.

Loos' Play Subject of Gallery.

The play of Loos today furnished the talk of the course for the early afternoon, and Espinosa's performance was the chief topic of commentation at the close of the day.

Loos is one of the great army of golf pros who has concentrated his attention on teaching rather than playing and has engaged in comparatively little competitive golf.

However, he shot the 6,280-yard lakeshore course in Chicago in 62 and has had many rounds in the 60s. Today he played perfect golf, never taking three putts and occasionally getting down in one. His putts for the round totaled 32.

Espinosa was a bit wabbly getting to the green at several holes, but once on, his indecision vanished and he baged his putts up to and in the hole from extraordinary distances.

"Fore" Not Necessary, Rules Pittsburgh Judge

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Of course, the golfer who's a stickler for the rules will shout "fore" before he swats the ball. But Judge Joseph M. Swearing ruled today he can't be held liable if he forgets that little matter and the ball hits some one.

Leon H. Benjamin spoiled a grand iron shot for Maurice A. Nernberg, Pittsburgh lawyer, by getting in the way of the ball. Nernberg, intent on getting the right stance, forgot to sound the traditional golf equivalent for "Look out below!" or "Stop, look, listen!" A jury awarded Benjamin $1,000 for injuries.

Judge Swearing decided there was nothing in law to compel Nernberg to broadcast an alarm and reversed the jury.

Apparently it's just an old Scottish custom.

EAGLES BEAT RICHMOND QUINTET

Rotary Club Victim, 45-35; Sweeney, Bennie Star.

THE Rotary five of Richmond, Va., formerly the Richmond Blues, lived up to advance notices yesterday afternoon in their clash with Skinker Bros. Eagles in the Silver Spring Armory before 500 persons, and gave the District team all sorts of trouble before bowing, 45 to 35. The triumph was the third consecutive one of the season for the Skinkers over strong road clubs.

A small Virginia lead was erased by the Eagles at the start of the second period, and the Washingtonians, aided materially by the sharpshooting of Sweeney and Bennie, ran up a 25-to-18 margin at the intermission. The second half was a repetition of the first, with the visitors gamely attempting to overhaul the fast-traveling Skinkers, but never quite succeeding.

Joe Sweeney and Ralph Bennie were the heroes of the victory, the former caging eight double-deckers and two fouls and the latter six field goals and a pair of charity tosses. Proctor, with a quartet of two-pointers, was the outstanding star of the Richmond outfit.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 11.—Washington's All-Stars had little trouble in disposing of the Baltimore Racquet Club team here this afternoon in a Winter Tennis League match, winning, 7 to 2. The Capital Cityans won five of the six singles and two of the three doubles matches.

Shore and the two Yeomans won their singles matches in straight sets, with Buchanan being the only District victor to be extended. He drew Skrentny as an opponent and after winning the first set, lost the second at deuce. He came back strongly in the third, however, flashing his best game to run out at 6-love.

S. Yeomans-Buchanan Lose in Upset.

The lone Baltimore singles triumph was credited to Hogan, who had a slight edge over Colin Stam. Latona won his match by default.

Skrentny, with Brockman as his partner, gave the home team its lone doubles victory. This pair dropped the first set to E. Yeomans and Buchanan but then rallied and upset the dope by taking the next two sets, 6—3 and 6—4.

SINGLES.

Shore (W) defeated Brockman (R. C.), 6—4, 3—6, 8—6; Buchanan (W) defeated Skrentny (R. C.), 6—3, 5—7, 6—0; E. Yeomans (W) defeated Custer (R. C.), 6—3, 6—2; Hogan (R. C.) defeated Colin Stam (W), 6—4, 6—3; Clyde Yeomans (W) defeated Deits (R. C.), 6—1, 6—0; Latona (W) won from Miller (R. C.) by default.

15-Year-Old Golfer Wins at 40th at Miami

Miami, Fla., Jan. 11 (A.P.).—A 15-year-old schoolboy from Chicago chipped his way to a 40-hole victory over a veteran of the links today as Win Day won the championship of the Miami midwinter tournament from Lee Chase, former New York State and Florida amateur champion.

The youngster stroked his way to victory in a repetition of the spectacular golf that marked his advance from the opening match play to the finals. He won the scheduled 36-hole match at the fourth extra hole.

After a morning of tough golfing, hampered by a high wind over the Miami Country Club course, Chase and Day settled down for an afternoon of spectacular shooting.

Day went to the thirty-first green to chip his way into the hole from beyond the sward. On the thirty-third, he repeated the feat to overcome a 1-up lead and stand even with his elder opponent.

Chase won the thirty-fourth, but missed a 3-foot putt on the thirty-fifth and the match was even. They halved the long thirty-sixth with fives and repeated on the thirty-seventh.

Both golfers got down to work and scored birdie threes on the thirty-eighth. They halved the thirty-ninth. Chase faltered when he missed a 3-foot putt on the fortieth and took a 5 to the youngster's 4 to end the match.

Dempsey Rates Stribling Best of Heavies; Predicts Schmeling's Defeat If They Clash

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Jack Dempsey ranks W. L. (Young) Stribling at the head of the heavyweight division and predicts today in his annual ranking of the world's fistic stars for the Ring, boxing magazine, that the pride of Georgia will whip Max Schmeling if and when they duel for the world's championship.

Furthermore, the former king of them all solemnly asserts that if he were to make another comeback, a thing he says he is certain not to do, the only heavyweight he feels sure he could knock out is Jack Sharkey, the Boston battler, who fouled Schmeling in a title go last summer. Dempsey stopped Sharkey once before.

Sharkey is ranked as the outstanding contender by the New York State Athletic Commission that recently vacated Der Maxie's title because of the latter's failure to sign immediately for another bout with the sailor man. Stribling and Schmeling are due to meet somewhere in the Midwest in June.

Idleness Has Hurt Sharkey.

"While Sharkey remained idle, awaiting the chance for another crack at Schmeling, Stribling has engaged in many contests," Dempsey writes in The Ring. "In the past year he has knocked out Phil Scott, Otto von Porat and beaten Tuffy Griffiths. He, in my opinion, is the hope of America.

"To him, I think, we must look to regain American supremacy in the heavyweight ranks, for it is my opinion that if Sharkey has ten more opportunities to win the crown, he will fall short of the mark. Were I to attempt a comeback, which I am certain I will not, as poor as I might be, there is one heavyweight I am sure I can knock out—none other than Jack Sharkey."

In refusing to rank two champions first in their divisions—Schmeling among the heavyweights and Tommy Freeman in the welterweight class—Dempsey said he was tempted also to "pass up" two others. He thought little of Mickey Walker's qualifications as middleweight ruler, although he recognized the Rumson bulldog as a "good, hard hitting, game fighter." He hesitated in rating Tony Canzoneri, champion of the lightweights, with Jack (Kid) Berg, the British star.

Berg Boxing's Hero of 1930.

"Berg," he said, "contributed the greatest achievement of the year. To him goes credit for bringing boxing back at a time when foul cries and discontent had all but caused a repeal of the sport.

All Hands Marking Time In Heavy Ring Wrangle

New York, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—All was serene and peaceful along the fistic rialto today as managers and promoters, seeking to clear up the muddled heavyweight situation, took a day off from the endless succession of conferences.

"Pa" Stribling, father-manager of W. L. (Young) Stribling, the "Pride of Macon," expected to resume negotiations with promoters for the Hearst milk fund tomorrow.

These dickerings, barring an unexpected hitch, probably will lead to the signing of Stribling for a title match with Max Schmeling either at Detroit or Cleveland this June.

Former Titleholder Believes He Can Beat Sharkey.

"With his two busy fists, this young Englishman, unheralded, a foreigner with plenty of dash and fighting ability, took the fans by storm in a series of battles that made them forget the fouls that had dragged the sport into the mire and today he stands out as one of the leading figures of pugilism.

"His sterling battle against Kid Chocolate turned the tide. He took the measure of Canzoneri at his best, knocked out the junior welterweight champion, Mushy Callahan, and whipped Billy Petrolle, who a short time later gave Jimmy McClarnin the worst trimming he ever got. Berg must be ranked in a class by himself."

Dempsey named the champion, Maxie Rosenbloom, as the outstanding light heavyweight, although he considers the division weak. He groups Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo and Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro, in the second section.

Says Walker Should Risk Title.

After insisting Mickey Walker should stay within the middleweight division and defend his title against either Dave Shade or Len Harvey, Dempsey rates Young Corbett of Fresno, Calif., the best of the welterweights with the champion, Tommy Freeman, second. Jimmy McLarnin, defeat by Petrolle cost him coleadership of the division, Dempsey said.

Panama Al Brown, bantamweight champion, heads his class, with Newsboy Brown, Joe Scalfaro, Pete Sanston and Archie Bell close behind. Midget Wolgast is the best of the flyweights, with Frankie Genaro, a close second, but neither, in Dempsey's opinion, rates with the stars of the past.

"The year 1930 was a most unusual one in boxing, owing to the general business depression and the foul epidemic, both of which played havoc with the boxing game," Dempsey writes. "Then again it must be admitted that the caliber of fighters is not the equal of the period when I was in my prime and this also had its effect on the game receipts. Yet boxing stood up admirably despite these severe handicaps and as we enter a new year we find the prospects bright for a quick revival."

Nats Third in Games Won In Late Innings; Macks First

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

BASEBALL and horse racing are much alike in some respects—they don't pay off until the finish is reached and there is no premium for the early pace-setters. If these rules had not obtained last season, then the Athletics would not now be the world's champions, for they seemed to have the habit in 1930 of allowing the opposing team to think for six innings, at least, that it was going to win, and then of suddenly rallying to pack away the verdict.

Thirteen times they won battles in the seventh, while losing but four; they broke even in fourteen games won or lost in the eighth; they won thirteen of eighteen that were decided in the ninth, while they triumphed in six of the seven overtime contests in which they figured. These doings gave them an average of .696 for victories in games that were decided after the sixth round.

The Cleveland Indians were second in this respect, with the Nationals third. The Washington Club had the edge in victories in all late-inning decisions except the ninth. In the "lucky" frame, the Nats beat opponents eight times and were beaten by them on five occasions, while they won ten of their nineteen games which were decided in the eighth and six of their eleven extra-inning fracases. In ninth-inning uprisings, the Johnsons triumphed five times but were the victims on half a dozen other occasions.

Despite their punch, the New York Yankees had the misfortune of fading away more times than any entrant in the league except the Red Sox. They lost eleven out of fourteen decided in the ninth, although having a one-game edge on those decided in the seventh, eighth and extra innings.

The figures, given above, show that while the "lucky" inning was only lucky for the winners, many more games actually were decided in that frame than in any of the other late rounds.

CAPITAL GOLFERS WELCOME TRIALS FOR AMATEUR

Stevinson and Shorey Praise Move; Both to Seek Places.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE announcement by the United States Golf Association, published in The Post yesterday morning, that hereafter competitors in the national amateur championship would be selected through sectional qualifying rounds, created an intense interest in all of the local golf clubs yesterday.

It will be remembered that when the last national amateur event was staged at Merion last September the list of eligibles did not include a single representative of this section. It was felt that this discrimination against District golfers was unfair and after considerable pressure had been exerted, Miller B. Stevinson, of the Columbia Country Club, was allowed to compete. It is true that in company with numerous others he failed to qualify for match play but the fact that this entire section was ignored in the eligibility list created a feeling of antagonism toward the national governing body.

Methods Protested for Years.

For many years there has been a persistent protest against the methods employed by the United States Golf Association in naming the players for amateur championship competition. Golfers who desired to enter the event sent in their names but their selection was in large measure a matter of personal influence with the self-appointed committee which handled the list of entrants. Consequently the field was a hand-picked affair and being thus limited to a fortunate few, the championship, instead of being a genuine affair, like the British amateur, in which every golfer of low handicap has a chance to win, was a contest between those who were lucky enough to have their names placed in the list.

The fact that in the future competition in the national amateur will be between players who, by their superior skill or good fortune, secure a place in the eligible list was a matter of universal approval among local golfers yesterday. Stevinson, the lone Washington representative in the national amateur last year, said yesterday that he would undoubtedly compete in one of the proposed sectional qualification rounds.

Stevinson Welcomes Change.

"I am glad that the change has been made," he said. "I will endeavor to qualify but if I fail it will be because some one plays better golf than I do and there will be no one to blame but myself. The United States Golf Association has done wisely in eliminating all suspicion of favoritism and personal influence and making selection depend upon skill. This system has proven sucessful in making up the field for the national open and it does away with all possible criticism. In this section we will be handicapped, undoubtedly, by the fact that as only 150 golfers are to be allowed to qualify, our quota will not be above two or three but, after

Lionel and Corinthian Clubs Will Combine

In an endeavor to keep intact that which the late Walter Newman worked hard to build, the Lionel Athletic Club has invited Corinthian Athletic Club members, left pilotless with Newman's demise last fall, to form a merger of the two organizations.

A meeting for this purpose will be held next Friday night at the Immaculate Conception Hall, Eighth and N streets northwest, starting at 8 o'clock.

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—Fair Grounds Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Avondale Purse of $1,200 at a mile and sixteenth features the card at the Fair Grounds today. EIL WEIR should make it four in a row. He won his last three races galloping. In his last, it was Patricia Marian, and before that Grecian Beauty that was the victim. Before that he beat Celtic Prince in the same way.

EIL WEIR does not require any particular track or track conditions. He wins at this, also the Jefferson Park track, and this being a purse race, he is not taxed with any weight increase, but goes with only 107 pounds. GRECIAN BEAUTY was second to the Brant colt in her last start, and previous to that she beat KADIAK, and this line should make her the contender, but she was four lengths behind EIL WEIR. KADIAK, a very consistent horse, and three times winner this winter, seems best of the others. Nine are to start, and STORM may figure in the event. BIDE A WEE also is not to be entirely overlooked.

FIRST RACE—Maiden 2-year-olds at 3 furlongs, opens the card with a large field contesting. WATAUGA did not do so well last out, finishing unplaced in the race won by Flo M., but the first time out she was third to Dolly's Baby, and on form, is the best of this field. She has always been well supported and is well bred. Her best race was second to Cloirado. ROJO did not show much in a previous trial, but may improve. ADELAIDE M. was backed last out and may get in the picture.

SECOND RACE — Three-year-old fillies make up the field in the second race, at 6 furlongs. FALMOUTH BELLE seems consistent and is selected to win. She was third to Zalia in her last start. LITTLE PAN'S last race was good, she being third to Bunama, and may get the place here. DELCO DEL has rested up since the Fair Grounds meeting and is tabbed for third money. WIGROSE, on some races, is really best of all, but her in and out running makes her chances slim.

THIRD RACE—A good field goes in the third, the Golden Rod Purse. TADDYWAWA is easily best. She was third to Voltear her last start, and the strongest opposition she will meet is GOLDEN PRINCE, and he seems to be falling back in his racing. RAIN OR SHINE has a chance and should be no worse than third. He is best on a slow track. He was fourth in a good field his last start. GOLDEN PRINCE was beaten last out by Pegg's Pride. GENUINE ran well the other day and is fast when in form at 6 furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—MY HOBBY is selected in the fifth event. He won his last two races. Nicholson was his most recent victim, but he has not started at this track. He has the class and, if he is at his best, should win. ORMONBIRD may like the distance of a mile and a sixteenth better and is dangerous. NOGODALE, third last out, should figure in the race, and EAGER PLAY has an outside money chance.

SIXTH RACE—ONE CENT looks much the best in the sixth, gallop of a mile and a furlong. In his last race he was second to Aviator, which showing should make him favorite here. LUKE JR., which ran well at the other New Orleans track, winning one race, and fourth in his last start, should be the contender and might get in front. MISS PEGGY is rated next best on her recent race behind Poison Ivy and Blue John. VOLE on some races would have a chance, but not in recent efforts.

SEVENTH RACE—Three-year-olds go a mile in the seventh, a claiming race. This is a large and well-balanced field. ENGLEWOOD is selected to win. He was out of the money in his last start, third to Nervator before that, and on Christmas Eve beat a large field of fair platers, then 2-year-olds, at a mile and 70 yards. He seems to be a route horse and should find the distance in this race to his advantage. GERTRUDE READE, an impressive winner at Jefferson Park, may be the contender. She beat the crack Nervator in her last start, but that was 6 furlongs. SURPASS won the other day from Bully, William J., and others at a mile, and has a good chance to get third money in this outing.

Cumberland K. of C. Wins; Birthright Makes 6 Goals.

Special to The Washington Post.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Jan. 11.—Despite the fact that they outscored their opponents by two baskets from the field, the Census Enumerators, of Washington, D. C., were worsted at the hands of the Knights of Columbus quintet here this afternoon, 31 to 26.

Four fouls played a prominent part in what was described by many fans as the finest court battle they have seen here this season. The Casey five was given the opportunity for eleven charity tosses and sank nine of them, while the visitors were missing all three of their awarded free throws.

Big Jim Birthright, stalwart Census center, was the individual star of the battle, scoring six two-pointers in the first half. In the second, however, Jim was thrown to the floor, injuring his knee, during a hot scrimmage and was unable to aid his mates thereafter.

The Washington quint led at half time, 20 to 16, with 500 fans cheering for them against the locals. The third period ended 24-all, and the Caseys, on Stakem's two long tosses, coupled with five free shots, pushed ahead in the third three minutes to win.

Colonial Eleven Wins; Claims 115-Pound Title

By defeating the Centennials yesterday afternoon, 34 to 0, the Colonial Athletic Club claims the 115-pound football championship of Washington. It based its claim on the fact that it has met and defeats every 115-pound eleven of prominence in the city.

Comprising the Colonial squad are McCarthy, Boughton, Felter, Da Rosa, Sheehan, Giller, Burke, Davis, Mitchel, Allen, Smith, Sharnikow, Berg, Robinson, Rueth, Queen, Lovejoy and Jordon. The team was coached by Marks, of the Northern Preps; Williamson, former St. John's star; Murray, of the Petworth Pennants, and Lurig, of the Meridians.

French-R. F. & P. Wins In Independent Game

After holding the French-R., F. & P. five to a 10-to-6 advantage at the end of the half of their contest yesterday afternoon at the Kensington Armory, Anacostia Eagles went to pieces in the second stanza and allowed their opponents to outscore them 4 to 1, dropping the final decision to the Frenchies by a 34-to-12 count. The clash, which was witnessed by 250 persons, was the first Independent League contest for both teams.

all, it will be a matter of the best players winning. I am willing to take my chances against the field."

John C. Shorey, of the Bannockburn Club, who applied last year for entry in the national amateur tournament and who was rejected, said last night that he would undoubtedly enter for competition in the sectional qualifying round.

Shorey Sees Chance for Everyone.

"The action of the United States Golf Association," he said, "is absolutely great. It gives all of us, and especially those who have no influence with the ruling body, a chance to play in the national amateur. Of course, we have to make good in the qualification and this will be a severe test, but at least we will not have our applications turned down in an arbitrary manner. I will certainly play and will do my best to qualify."

Even with an eligibility restriction of a handicap of 4, there are a large number of local golfers who will endeavor to qualify. Dr. L. S. O'Tell, one of the leading players in the Indian Spring Golf Club, said yesterday that he heartily indorsed the new move and would be glad to compete, even if his name were not at the head of the list, in order to show his approval.

"This action ought to have been taken long ago," was the terse comment of Fred McLeod, the professional at the Columbia Country Club.

D. G. S. Eleven Beats Press Cards, 12-6, on Long Drive.

A SUSTAINED 56-yard drive in the last period, which culminated when Schriver shot offtackle for 4 yards and a touchdown, enabled Palace-District Grocery Stores to close its football season with a hard-won 12-to-6 victory over the National Press Club Cardinals yesterday afternoon on the Seat Pleasant gridiron before 300 fans.

Billy Reagan scored the first Palace 6-pointer in the second quarter on a 3-yard-line buck. Joe Buscher, Cardinal half back, featured the contest by returning an intercepted pass 62 yards in the third period for the only touchdown made by his team.

The fine defensive work of Bob Pifer, 116-pound Press Club end, and the ball-carrying of Billy Reagan, Palace-D. G. S. quarter, stood out.

POST PICTURE MAY BRING NEW CHARGE AGAINST SUSPECT

Woman Thinks That Brewer, Taken After Holdup, Man Who Robbed Her.

WAKENED TO FIND HIM LOOTING APARTMENT

Mrs. Francis Walker Will Visit Police Today to View Prisoner.

A picture published in The Washington Post may lead to another charge against Theodore Roosevelt Brewer, captured by police Saturday after the holdup of a grocery store at Tenth and C streets southeast.

Meanwhile Brewer's companion, John Boyd, who shot himself through the head with a .25 caliber pistol at the approach of police, is fighting for life at Casualty Hospital. Hospital physicians say he has a slim chance for recovery.

Latest developments in the case came yesterday when Mrs. Frances Walker, of the Harrowgate Apartments, 1833 New Hampshire avenue, northwest, picked up a copy of The Washington Post and saw a picture of Brewer.

Will Visit Headquarters.

She said that the man bore a marked resemblance to one who entered her apartment at 4:30 o'clock Thursday morning, gaining entrance from an alley in the rear by means of a stepladder.

Mrs. Walker said that she had reported the burglary to the police and that she would go to police headquarters today in an effort to identify Brewer as the man she saw standing by her bed in the early hours of Thursday morning.

According to Mrs. Walker's story to The Washington Post, she was awakened by a noise in her room and looking up, saw a man standing between her bed and the dresser. The window was opened, she said, and the intruder had squeezed between the space between the bed and dresser.

Mrs. Walker at first believed the figure was that of her mother, and called out to her. The man commanded her to keep quiet, but Mrs. Walker screamed and her mother turned on the light in the next room.

It was then she got a clear view of the man's features, Mrs. Walker said. The light from the next room fell upon him and she saw that he had obtained her pocketbook and had opened it. There was no money in it, Mrs. Walker said, but it contained a valuable cigarette case.

When she screamed again the man ran for the window, dropping the pocketbook but taking the cigarette case with him. He fled down the stepladder by which he had gained access to the apartment.

Trunks Found Ransacked.

Mrs. Walker said that the next morning tenants of the apartment house discovered that the intruder had ransacked trunks stored in the basement before he visited her apartment. It was there he obtained the ladder which he placed against her window sill.

He was able to enter her window, Mrs. Walker declared, because a few days before she had taken the screen out. She believes the man picked out her apartment to rob because it is at the back of the building, hidden from view, and the window was unprotected.

Nothing was missed from the apartment building except Mrs. Walker's cigarette case. A valuable bedspread was stolen from one of the trunks in the basement.

Brewer and Boyd were captured in Garfield Park after they had been trailed by Gordon Hooff, 19-year-old grocery clerk, for many blocks. The men were taken in custody by Patrolman C. J. Stewart, of the Fifth Precinct. Boyd shot himself at Stewart's approach.

COMING TO CAPITAL ON PEACEFUL MISSION

WAR-CURE LEADER COMES FOR PARLEY

New York Woman's Arrival Here Gives Impetus to Arrangements.

SESSION TO OPEN JAN. 19

Plans for the sixth Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, to be held in Washington January 9 to 22, have received added impetus in the arrival of Miss Josephine Schain, of New York, administrative chairman of the committee, who will complete the arrangements. Other officers are expected later in the week.

Besides Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, conference chairman, they include Miss Ruth Morgan, Miss Henrietta Roelofs and Mrs. W. H. Silverthorn, of New York; Mrs. Ben Hooper, of Oshkosh, Wis., and Mrs. Edgerton Parsons, of New York. Mrs. Lillie F. Rhoads, of Washington, is a vice chairman.

Three experts in the field of international relations will conduct a questionnaire. Stanley High, editor of the Christian Herald; Bruce Bliven, an editor of the New Republic, and Walter Van Kirk, secretary of the Commission on International Justice and Good Will, of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, are the counselors selected.

"Demobilizing the War Machine" will be the conference topic. Mr. Bliven is counselor for discussion on the present disarmament status; Mr. Van Kirk will guide the World Court round table. Mr. Hugh will direct questions at two sessions on the relationships of world empires and colonies.

Assignment of these men is a departure in conference programs. It is designed to assure thorough consideration of all factors involved in the topics discussed. "None of the 600 delegates should go home with a question unanswered," Mrs. Catt said in announcing their selection.

Conference headquarters have been opened in the Washington Hotel, with Mrs. Rachel Brill Ezekiel, of Washington, in charge. A group of Washington women, under the chairmanship of Mrs. William L. Darby, make up the arrangements committee. Assisting vice chairmen are Mrs. Clara Wright Smith, Mrs. T. E. Brown, Mrs. T. J. Howerton and Mrs. Harvey C. Irwin; secretary, Mrs. J. Claude Keiper; registration chairman, Mrs. Karl Fenning; ushers, Miss Hazel Shield; conference arrangements, Mrs. Harry Hull; information, Mrs. Leonard Schloss; utility, Mrs. E. C. Dinwiddie; banquet, Mrs. F. E. Edington.

Radio Star to Aid Mission Program

Seth Parker Coming Here in Person on Feb. 16 for Benefit Affair.

A treat is in store for Washington radio enthusiasts on February 16. Seth Parker, whose Sunday evening prayer meetings are attended by thousands is coming to Washington in person on that date, for the first time in his life, to take part in the annual concert for the benefit of the Central Union Mission and its Emergency Home for Children.

To thousands of other fans, Seth Parke is "Uncle Abe," but in real life he is Phillips Haynes Lord, son of Dr. Albert J. Lord, minister of the First Congregational Church, of Meriden, Conn.

Mrs. John S. Bennett, of the Central Union Mission, was a guest of the famous radio star last week and persuaded him to come here for the mission's benefit concert at which Homer Rodeheaver, internationally known song leader, is to appear. The concert is under the auspices of the Women's Guild, of the mission, and will be given in Constitution Hall the evening of February 16.

Seth Parker's radio "prayer meetings" have attracted Nation-wide attention and he will have a great deal to do at the mission's concert. Tickets for the benefit are now available at the mission.

Search Ends; Clock Maker To Adopt Boy

A story that parallels Charles Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop" was brought to light here last night with the news that Edward Frischnecht, 73-year-old proprietor of a watch curiosity shop at 1730 G street northwest, is bringing to Washington for adoption a young man who worked for him a short while.

The lucky boy, Charles Ashley, 17 years old, of Birmingham, an orphan, answered an advertisement for a helper that Mr. Frischnecht put in a local paper last November. The youth worked steadily for the old watch collector and importer until three weeks ago, when he told his employer that he wanted to return to Birmingham to resume his studies.

But during the course of his employment—two days before Christmas, to be exact—Ashley picked up a purse containing $50. Identification papers in it led Ashley to the owner, Mrs. Martha Shank, of 1802 G street northwest, just a block from the shop.

Mrs. Shank gave the boy a reward. The gesture of honesty on the part of the youth left an indelible impression on the owner of the watch shop.

As he worked over old watches and clocks from all parts of the world, Mr. Frischnecht thought about the young man, who had left him. He remembered that Ashley's father had died twelve years ago; that he had supported his mother until last year, when the mother died, and that he was virtually penniless when he came into the shop looking for work last November.

Although he had been assured by the youngster that he would be able to look after himself, the watchmaker was not satisfied. Finally, he decided to find the boy and so reassure himself.

This took some trouble, as Ashley had merely said that he was going to Birmingham. Mr. Frischnecht hired a detective and advertised in Birmingham newspapers. Ashley was found in the Y. M. C. A. there. Mr. Frischnecht telegraphed him money and the boy is expected here in a day or so.

The old man in the curiosity shop in the Dickens story adopted a little girl who used to come into his shop to see him and then to work for him. That occurred in the days before the distractions of a machine age. Cynics have declared that the things that happened in the stories of Charles Dickens could not happen today.

Girl Given Blood By Fellow Student

Others at Missionary Sanitarium Offer Their Life Fluid.

A blood transfusion given by a fellow student is expected to save the life of Mary Curry, of the Washington Missionary College at Takoma Park, it was learned last night. She is in the Washington Sanitarium.

Miss Curry, in a severe anemic condition, was given a pint of blood by Matthias Roth, of Emaus, Pa. Two other students—Albert Dalton, of Dayton, Ohio, and Ethelbert Koch, of Grottoes, Va.—are waiting the call if it is found necessary to perform more transfusions.

Students at the college are frequently offered an opportunity to make money selling blood to the sanitarium. All three men in this case have refused remuneration, it was reported.

Housebreaking Is Laid To Youthful Prisoners

Morris Carleton Beck and James Lafayette Carpenter, held by police since Thursday on charges of investigation, yesterday were formally charged with housebreaking in connection with the robbery of a drug store on Connecticut avenue.

Both are 18 years old. Beck, who had received a 3-year suspended sentence for complicity in the holdup and robbery of a bank messenger last summer, lives on Fourteenth street near Clifton street northwest. Carpenter resides on Kilbourne street near Eighteenth street northwest.

Confederate Group To Hear Addresses

The Sons of Confederate Veterans will give a program of addresses and dancing tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock at the Confederate Memorial Home, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest.

The main address will be made by Representative-elect Marvin Diese, of Texas. After the talks a musical program will be presented, followed by dancing.

YOUNG TO ASK PROBE OF SCHOOL JOB LOSS

Dismissed History Teacher to Seek Aid of Simmons District Group.

CALLS HEARING "FARCE"

Calling the hearing that was given his appeal from being discharged as a teacher of history at McKinley High School " a farce," Malcolm M. Young, 26 years old, issued a statement last night in which he declared that he will make every effort to have the Simmons subcommittee of the House, now holding hearings on the District budget, investigate the methods in which teachers are dismissed from the Washington public schools.

Mr. Young's appeal for reinstatement was denied Saturday after a hearing before the committee on appeals and complaints of the Board of Education. He said last night that he does not consider this "final decision either fair or logical." "In fact," he added, "it is a pungent blow at the teaching tenurs standards of all Washington school teachers. I am going to ask the Simmons committee to investigate the way these things are handled.

The discharged teacher accused Frank Daniel, principal of McKinley High School, of being "tyrannical," guilty of "pussyfooting" and being "prejudicial." "If ratings can be changed at will, as mine were, they are not worth the paper on which they are printed," Mr. Young added.

Mr. Young complained that the board had not fulfilled its promise of giving him a copy of the charges against him, in writing. He said the charges were "hurriedly" read. He also charged that he was not given "promised" records and "data."

"I am not trying to get back in the schools," Mr. Young asserted. "I intend to fight this thing through for justification, regardless of whether I teach in the schools again."

Luhring Will Speak To Bar Association

To discuss legal ethics and other matters beneficial to men of the legal profession, with a purpose of effecting a more intimate relationship between the bar and the bench, Judge Oscar Luhring has accepted the invitation of the Washington Bar Association, composed of colored attorneys, and will address them next Thursday evening at the Musolit Club. Perry W. Howard will preside.

The association will continue its monthly sessions throughout the year with addresses by judges of various courts. It is understood that a resolution will be introduced Thursday aiming to interest the National Bar Association in a study of conditions in America which are claimed to have similarity to conditions complained of by the State Department in Liberia.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY URGED TO ABIDE BY MARRIAGE DOCTRINE

Rev. R. M. Burke Enjoins on Members Counsel Given Recently by Pope.

CHURCH IS CROWDED FOR VESPER SERVICE

Many Priests From Out of Town at Ceremonies in Holy Trinity Church.

It is as much the duty of members of the Holy Name Society to practice the doctrines contained in the Pope's letter on matrimony as it is for them to be clean of speech, the Very Rev. Raphael M. Burke, prior of St. Dominic's Church, told members of the society last night at the annual vesper services in Holy Trinity Church.

Father Burke urged his hearers to read the encyclical.

"In this notable letter," he said, "the Holy Father asks that all baptized Catholics accept as a sacred institution of Christ the sacrament of matrimony. It is as much your duty to put into practice the doctrines contained in Pope Pius' letter on matrimony as it is for you to be clean of speech."

Church Crowded.

Holy Trinity Church was packed for the services and some late comers had to stand throughout the sermon. The church was beautifully decorated, and the dignity of the ceremonies conducted by notables of the church contrasted well with the youth of some of the worshipers, many of them students from Georgetown University.

A detachment from the R. O. T. C. from the university played a prominent part in the ceremony.

Many priests from Baltimore, and towns near Washington attended, besides those from this city.

The Right Rev. Dr. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, pontificated at benediction. The Rev. Francis J. Egan was deacon. Deacons of honor were the Rev. Michael J. Riordan, of St. Martin's Church, and the Rev. Charles O. Rosensteel, of St. John's Church, Forest Glen, Md. The Rev. James O'Connor was subdeacon.

The Holy Name pledge was administered at the close of the service by the Rev. Eugene Del McDonald, of Baltimore.

Father Burke in his sermon first pointed to two outstanding American leaders, Washington and Lincoln, and spoke of their devotion to their country and man's constant remembrance of their deeds.

Gives Honor to Greatness.

"It is only right and just that the mighty deeds of our flag's defenders should be immortalized and that the names of such men who established and preserved the Union should be reverenced," he said.

The greatness of the service of Jesus was attested, he said, by the fact that today His Holy Name is being honored by more than 2,000,000 Catholic men in America, who are gathered together in their various churches in solemn celebratoin of the Feast of the Holy Name.

"You Holy Name men," he went on, "in promising to respect and reverence the Holy Name of Jesus, have not added any obligation that was not already incumbent upon you.

"The second commandment forbids the taking of the name of God in vain and prohibts all obscene speech. Your membership in this great society calls for a public manifestation of your faith in the divinity of Christ."

Among the priests taking part in the service were the Rev. F. M. W. Schneeweiss, the Rev. C. C. Bowles, the Rev. Joseph I. Fink, the Rev. Joseph M. Moran, the Rev. Walter H. Ahern, the Rev. Edward J. A. Nestor, the Rev. J. J. Clark, the Rev. M. J. Riordan and the Rev. A. L. Leisner.

Brig. Gen. Michael J. Lenahan, retired, was an honored guest.

Church Is Pictured As Wondrous Pearl

THE REV. HOMER A. KENT.

Common interpretations of the parables of the pearl of great price and the hidden treasure break down because they picture Christ as the pearl or the treasure, and the sinner as selling everything he owns to purchase them, the Rev. Homer A. Kent, pastor of the First Brethren church, 1542 Twenty-fifth street southeast, said in a sermon yesterday.

Those interpretations are contrary to the heart of the Gospel, since salvation is something which can not be bought, the minister emphasized.

His sermon in part follows:

"The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls who, when he found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it." Matt., xiii: 45, 46:

"The common interpretation of this parable is that Christ is the Pearl of Great Price and the merchant man is the sinner who seeks Him. A like interpretation is given of the parable of the hid treasure. Christ is called the treasure and the sinner is pictured as selling everything he has that he might purchase the treasure.

"But in many respects these interpretations break down. They are contrary to the heart of the Gospel. Salvation is not something that can be bought. It is a 'free gift.' The sinner does not buy Christ. Instead Christ buys him. Salvation is free and is to be received 'without money and 'without price.'

"With this in mind, let us think of the church as the pearl of great price and Christ as the merchant man who went and sold all He had that He might purchase it for Himself. This is in harmony with the message of the Gospel. It gives dignity to the character of the church and exalts the grace of its Lord.

Linked With Church.

"Consider, first, the cost of the Pearl of Great Price. Parables have often been described as pictures of spiritual things. In the cost of the pearl of great price we have a picture of the most precious fact of the ages. Christ gave himself for the church.

"It will help us to appreciate the parable if we will keep in mind the esteem in which pearls were held in olden days. There is record of almost incredible sums having been given for single pearls. The pearl which Cleopatra is said to have dissolved and swallowed was valued at $400,000, and one of the same value was cut into two pieces for earrings for the statue of Venus in the Pantheon at Rome. There were certain defects which diminished the value of pearls. Thus the merchant man must have skill in the purchase of his pearls, lest he have something of an inferior character imposed upon him.

"We read that Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it. He shed His blood for its redemption. To be sure, He saw the defects that were in the church. He sees them now. But in spite of the sins and failures He sees in His people, He loves them for what He can make out of them.

"What was the cost of the pearl? Let the Scriptures answer. 'He made Himself of no reputation and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and, being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. 'There is the cost of the pearl. Soul, you can not purchase Christ for yourself, but He has given Himself for you and you can receive Him as a free gift.

How Pearl Is Formed.

"Consider, secondly, the character of the Pearl of Great Price. It is common knowledge how pearls are formed. They are the result of accidental causes, such as the intrusion of a grain of sand into the body of the oyster. This irritates the oyster and it is obliged in self-defense to cover the cause of the offense. It does this by secreting a substance about the offending particle. This hardens and the irritation ceases. That which hardens is the beautiful pearl.

"Around the suffering of the Lord Jesus Christ the church is being formed. The church is not an organization or a social club. It is an organism. Its life is the life of Christ. Separated from him it can not function and it loses its vitality. He is the blood stream of the church. It grows by his power.

"And so, as that pearl is formed little by little through the life of the oyster, the church is being formed by the life of Christ entering men's hearts, making them 'new creatures in Christ Jesus.' There is much thought for encouragement here. If Christ is the life of the church and the church grows about and in him, we can rest assured that the true church shall not fall in her task. 'The gates of hell shall not prevail against it.'

"Again, the pearl is a perfect symbol of unity. It is one. So is the church. All true Christians, of whatever denomination, are bound together by a common tie and own a common Lord.

Character as Pearl.

"The the pearl is a thing of surpassing beauty. They have been fitted into the diadems of kings and worn by queens and princesses. Scarcely any gem is more beautiful. And there is nothing more beautiful in this world than Christian character as it is exhibited through the faithful members of his church.

"Consider, thirdly, the preparation of the pearl of great price. Christ has purchased the pearl at tremendous cost. One day he is going to take it unto himself. But in the meantime he is getting the church in readiness for that presentation. He is adorning it and enriching it. He is also increasing it.

"The means which Our Lord has ordained for this preparation is the preaching of the Gospel. Through it the saints are enriched and sinners are called to repentance. He knew that the source of all evils in this world is sin, and the only way to eradicate sin is to regenerate the human heart. So he gave the Gospel to the world, and the business of the church is to carry that Gospel to the world.

"Therefore, let the church hold true to her marked-out course lest she drift upon the rocks and be lost. Let us seek to bring about a real revival of Christianity through the means given us and thus hasten the day when the pearl of great price shall be presented unto him who loved it and gave himself for it."

ALLEY-CLOSING BILL IS IN READINESS FOR ACTION OF CONGRESS

National Capital Park and Planning Commission Finishes Measure.

Sanitation and Housing Are Set Forth in Statement by Group's Expert.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will probably send to Congress this week the District alley-closing bill, Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, revealed coincident with releasing a supplementary annual report of the planning body for the last fiscal year.

The measure is similar to the document formerly forwarded to Capitol Hill, save that it gives the District Commissioners, rather than the President, the authority to select the alleys and eliminates the amount of money to be set aside for acquiring the property.

The supplementary report of the commission contains a discussion of the housing program for the District by John Ihlder, housing consultant, in which the problem of alley-dwellers is thoroughly treated. There are in Washington today more than 250 inhabited alleys, in which there are approximately 2,400 dwellings containing a population, estimated at from 11,000 to 13,000 persons, the report states.

Are Sizable Communities.

"Some of these alleys are communities of such size that they would be considered villages if they had a rural environment, "Mr. Ihlder states. "Navy Place, for example, contains 70 houses; O'Briens Court, 40; Snows Court, 41; Cooksey Place, 53 and Dixons Court, 44. These inhabited alleys have been a recognized problem since the years immediately following the Civil War."

Discussing the alleys further, Mr. Ihlder says: "During the many decades Congress and the District government have been dealing with the inhabited alleys effort has been directed principally at curing certain obvious ills, such as insanitary conditions.

"The results have been disappointing because these efforts did not reach the root cause, which is that alley dwellings are concealed. They constitute hidden communities in which disease, vice and crime flourish. It does not matter whether they breed criminals and persons diseased morally, mentally or physically, or whether they attract such persons. Probably they do both. The facts are that they contain an undue proportion of these human liabilities and that because of being hidden communities, they increase the difficulty of dealing with these human liabilities constructively.

Have Inadequate Outlets.

"Moreover, they have no direct outlets, or have inadequate outlets; the alleys do not have thorough ventilation. The wider ones are like cups into which the summer suns pours and which hold the heat night and day."

The report, which is to be submitted to President Hoover today, urges a housing program for the District that will be in keeping with the proposed Federal building plan.

"If Washington is to represent us fairly among the great world capitals, if it is to have the appeal it should have to the pride and affection of our own people, it must provide dignified, spacious and comfortable living conditions for those whose work calls them here or whose inclination prompts them to become residents. The prestige and appeal of the Capital do not lie wholly in its governmental structures, but do lie largely in its dwellings. The latter cover by far the largest part of its area and in many ways make the strongest and most lasting impression."

The report declares that the two essentials of this housing program should be spaciousness and "the allocation of the privately owned territory in accordance with the need and the relationship of one kind of district to another."

Water Supply Sufficient.

William T. Partridge, consulting architect of the Park and Planning Commission, declares in a study of the development of the planning of Washington that the L'Enfant plan was probably original, despite charges of critics that ideas were borrowed from Versailles and London.

In a discussion of the regional water supply the supplementary report states that the supply at present is "reasonably adequate to meet demands within areas already provided with water mains and service. * * * Future demand will, of course, depend on growth of population and manufacture and upon changes in the consumption rate." There are plenty of available sources of additional water supply, however, the report pointed out, these being an increase from Great Falls, the Potomac River at Little Falls, development of reservoirs on branches of Patuxent River above Laurel, Seneca Creek, Occoquan Creek and development of smaller Virginia streams for local use.

As for the District, the present supply and equipment is said to be of sufficient size to supply its needs for many years in the future.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

"STAND BY FOR MORE BOLONEY."

MR. LEE DE FOREST, radio pioneer, says the program makers are killing the goose that lays the radio egg. Advertising is now playing so great a part in broadcasting that aerial entertainment has become a small body of amusement matter entirely surrounded by ballyhoo for everything from animal crackers to suspension bridges.

* * * *

He believes the radio fan can get a better break in the matter of diversion today by throwing away his set and substituting a dictaphone record of the bunk heard at any advertising convention.

* * * *

Radio today has become a talking version of the billboard nuisance, thinks Mr. De Forest.

* * * *

Just as a traveler in a motor car has a lot of pill, sock, tooth paste and garter advertisements blot out his view of a beautiful rural landscape, so the radio fan gets a broadside of ballyhoo for soft drinks, package foodstuffs and general boloney the moment he goes to the radio in the hope of a little soothing music.

* * * *

He thirsts for the Hungarian rhapsody and gets a fifteen-minute sales talk.

* * * *

He craves the voice of a sweet singer and gets a load of facts about cottage cheese, ginger ale, rubber boots, rubbing liniment, motors cars, raspberry jams and hot-water bottles.

* * * *

He longs for a little light comedy and gets a deadly barrage of facts and figures concerning superiority in the pork, breakfast food, pancake flour, undershirt, millinery and face powder industries.

* * * *

HE plans on hearing some golden words from a leader of public thought and finds himself buried beneath the most infinitesimal details governing the choice of shaving soap, hair oil, two-piece suits, cigarettes, gasoline, dyspepsia tablets, soup, nuts and banana oil.

* * * *

If the present-day radio programs are a diversion then an evening spent at a conference of advertising men is the height of good clean fun.

* * * *

They do everything on the air now except take orders by inside aerial and make deliveries by B batteries.

Radio began as a scientific blessing to amusement lovers at home and is winding up as an unmitigated nuisance to all but the deaf.

* * * *

There are many radio fans who have come to the conclusion that the old phonograph wasn't such a bad bet. It didn't always give any great variety of entertainment, but you could play both sides of the record without getting a single exhortation to buy any particular kind of baked bean, canned spinach, rubber heel, house shingle, automobile tire or sponge cake.

* * * *

Aphasia.

IT is reported that for the first time in 50 years there is not an Uncle Tom's Cabin troupe in any part of the United States. This is simply additional proof that all the bad actors have gone to the movies.

Mr. Paul M. Warburg, noted banker, predicts that in a few years many stocks will double in value. Well, a lot of them could do this by advancing a point or two.

"Georges Carpentier Kidnaped."—headline. Most of us can remember the time when nobody could lay a hand on him.

"Mr. Olvaney, John Mara, Judge William Allen and Joseph A. Anderson, Tammany leaders, all described what Mr. Todd calls the 'system' of making appointments to public offense."—New York Times.

Well, that's putting it rather frankly, isn't it?

Mr. S. Parker Gilbert, the young man who straightened out the reparations puzzle unassisted by Sam Loyd, has been made a Morgan partner and you just can't help wondering why they never took in Houdini!

Mr. Gilbert is said to be a lover of music, but we are betting he is cold to that old Victor Herbert song, "I Can't Do That Sum."

CHIEF OF CRUSADERS HITS HOME RAID BILL

"HYPOCRISY," HIS VIEW

Efforts to force passage of the Howell "home raid bill" were branded as "injustice and hypocrisy" in a statement yesterday by John F. Dryden, executive commander of the Washington Crusaders. Its passage could only result in a reaction hurtful even to conscientious prohibition in the various dry States, he said.

"The Attorney General of the United States has advised against this proposed act, realizing that imposition of such fanatical legislation upon a defenseless people will create a state of unrest. Surely the results of the November elections were a plain indication that the people are tiring of fanaticism. Will not the passage of this bill add further to the business and financial distress in the Capital of the Nation? This persecution by Congress of the defenseless people of the District surely can not be right just because they can not strike back," Mr. Dryden declared.

"The greatness of the English-speaking people has been founded upon the sacredness of the home and the knowledge that the humblest man's cottage was as free from invasion as the palace of the king. If, by its vote, the Senate yields to the underlying fanaticism of the Howell bill, they will have surrendered these last fundamental rights of the citizen—for the preservation of which precious blood was shed."

Pilot Hurt in Glider Fall; Movie Cameras Film Crash

Joseph Bergling, 22 years old, an instructor for the District of Columbia Air Legion Glider Club, was slightly injured yesterday when a glider which gains its buoyancy through inflated tubes, crashed from a height of 100 feet at Washington Airport.

Moving picture cameras ground out film as Bergling crashed. He had made an earlier flight and because all the picture men, for whom he was demonstrating the glider, failed to get their pictures, he took off again. As it dropped to the ground it bounced on the tubing and overturned. Bergling received a slight injury to the right foot.

He lives at 414 Tenth stret southeast. In all, Bergling has made more than 100 glider flights.

William fell against the kitchen sink while playing. After the doctor's ministrations, he returned home in the wagon, Frances again providing the motive power.

Stottlemeyer and held in default of $35 bail on two charges. He gave his address as Lawrence near Twenty-second street northeast.

Gems and $8 Taken By Match Burglar

Invades Home in Silver Spring, Leaving Familiar Clew; Police Probe.

Montgomery County's phantom match burglar last night paid a visit to the home of George Sinclair, 638 Ridge avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Leaving a trail of burned matches throughout the house, the robber ransacked bureau drawers and other likely hiding places, finally taking $8 in money and a quantity of jewelry.

The jewelry included a diamond lavalliere and several rings, which had been left in a jewel box on a bureau in Mr. Sinclair's room. Sergt. Guy L. Jones, of the Silver Spring sub station, investigated the robbery and will make a further investigation this morning to determine whether finger prints were left. While the burglar was at work, special details of county police were patrolling the Silver Spring section on the lookout for the man, who has been terrorizing residents of the suburban section of the county for more than a year.

The match burglar has shown an almost uncanny knowledge of the habits of the residents. In every case he has disdained the use of a flashlight, using saftey matches to find his way about.
